Three Birds Die Stratford Swans Won't Eat

STRATFORD (CP) — Young swans, speaking their first winter inside a barn after a summer foraging for themselves on the Avon River, are refusing food and three have died within inches of a pile of grain.

Douglas Griffith, park superintendent, told the parks board Tuesday the three swans that died had been born earlier this year and were not able to adjust to the indoor life of their winter quarters. Swans have lived on the river for more than 10 years.

Used to feeding from the river and taking handouts from tourists, the swans would "grab a piece of bread from your hand, but they just turned away from a pile of grain," Mr. Griffith said.

Older birds eat the grain.

Metro Centre Approved

TORONTO (CP) — After five days of debate, city council approved guidelines Tuesday for the proposed $1-billion Metro Centre development in the city's downtown core.

The vote was 17 to 1 in favor with only Ald. John Sewell voting against, although several others criticized the development planned by CP Rail and the CNR.

Rhythm Birth Control Method Poor Choice for Dependablity

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband and I would like to use the "rhythm method" of birth control but are unsure how to go about it. How does it work in relation to the menstrual cycle? When can conception not occur? I am sure others may wonder, too—Mrs. W.R.

First, let me wonder about something. Why do you want to use that method?

Reason I ask is this: If you and your husband simply want a effective method of birth control, why not use one of the other methods? If there's some reason why you don't tolerate the pill, or an I.U.D., there is still the diaphragm or condom which are very dependable.

If you want the "rhythm method" because of religious considerations, then I suggest that you ask your church for the information. That system works for some people but doesn't for others.

In principle, it depends on the fact that conception can take place only for a limited time after the ovary has released an ovum. This ordinarily is at midcycle if you have an average 28 day menstrual cycle, an ovum is released at about 14 days before the start of the next period.

That makes it all very simple provided you never vary from that average pattern. Then you can figure out a certain active for something like three days, so if you avoid intercourse for several days before ovulation (that is, before the ovum appears) and for two or three days afterward, you are fairly safe from pregnancy.

However, if you go just by the calendar, you have no assurance that ovulation, at times, may not be a day or more early, or a day or more late. So that means a longer span of uncertainty. And finally, it may not happen often, but there always remains a possibility that ovulation may occur more than once in a single month.

With a cycle that is regular and steady, the exact time of ovulation can be determined fairly accurately by taking your temperature daily (rectal temperature; taken same time of day each time). When ovulation occurs, there will be a rise of about half a degree or so. You must, of course, be alert against being misled by a similar rise in temperature resulting from a cold, fatigue, or other such factor.

This means, with a regular cycle, that ovulation probably will occur at about the same time each month. But for a woman whose cycle is variable, or is substantially other than the average 28-day cycle, it becomes pretty much a matter of guesswork.

I have no objection to your using the rhythm method if you wish. That's up to you, but even if you follow the pattern exactly, there's no way to be certain that you may not occasionally ovulate at some unexpected time.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am interested in contributing my body to science. Could you give me some information on this subject? Do some institutions pay a person more? I am 19 and healthy.—C.F.

Are you talking about "contributing" or selling?

If you mean "contribute," write to the dean's office at any medical school you choose and they can give you the proper forms to be filled out.

But if you have a notion (as many seem to) that someone will pay you for your body, to be delivered at some speculative future day, the answer is no. That isn't done.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am losing hair on one eyebrow. Can you comment?—D.G

Only that the limited area of loss suggests some skin ailment there, and my advice would be to see a dermatologist.

Opening lead — two of spades.

Same players fatuecourd all the time, whether their role is that of declarer or defender.

Presumably they gain by these antics when they become declarer, for they may succeed in fooling the opponents without fooling partner, but often they come to grief on defence when their efforts boomerang and result in misleading partner instead of declarer.

Despite this, there is no question that a well-timed defensive falsecard can be highly effective, as demonstrated in this deal from a team of four match.

At the first table, the play went very smoothly and South made three notrumps. He won the spade lead with the jack, crashed six hearts—discarding a diamond and three clubs—and led a diamond to the king. As a result, he made three notrump.

At the second table, against the same contract and opening lead, declarer went down one because of a misplaced move by West. Here also South won the spade lead with the jack, but when he played a low heart to the queen, West responded with the jack.

This seemingly innocuous play caused South to change his itinerant course of play. Instead of running all the hearts at once, as he had originally planned, he played a low heart back to the ten, trying to guard against East's having started with the 9-7-4-2 with West holding the singleton jack.

When West followed to the second heart, South realized he had been misled, but it was too late to do anything about it. He led a club and finessed the queen, but East took the king, returned a spade, and South had to go down one.

Tomorrow: The impossible.

Marmora Sewage System Approved

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora Village has been given the green light for the installation of a sewage disposal system.

Approval for expenditure of the $1,026,000 for the system was given by two members of the Ontario Municipal Board after a hearing in town hall.

Of the 29 people who had sent in written objections to the installation, only a handful turned up to voice their opposition.

W. T. Mitchell, engineer with R. V. Anderson Associates Ltd., said the sewer system would serve 90 per cent of the people in the village. In 1968 the cost was estimated at $860,000; it has since risen to an estimated $1,026,000 in 1972.

The proposal calls for serving 365 lots on the east bank of the river. A pumping station and treatment plant with capacity to serve 1,700 people will be built to the south of the village. Estimated construction time is 33 months.

An Ontario Water Resources Commission official said the province of Ontario would subsidize half the cost of the project. The OWRC will build and own the system, recovering, the remaining cost over a 40 year period from the taxpayers through a surcharge on water rates.

It was estimated that a domestic user would pay $133 a year on a 66-foot frontage lot. Of this, $59 would be surcharge. Lloyd Elkenton, chief public health inspector with the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit said tests of the 13 wells in the village showed them to be unsatisfactory. He said it is impossible to locate all sources of pollution from older septic tank installations.

Most of the objections to the sewer system stemmed from concern that the increased taxes would be too much for pensioners and widows living in the village.

Village Clerk William Shannon said later that the village is free of debt, except for the water system, now being financed by frontage and users' fees and $1 mills on the tax bill.

The sewage system plans do not include the west side of the village, which is built on rock.

Employment News

There is a new opportunity for employers and a new chance for employers under the Canada Manpower Training-on-the-job program.

This program enables employers to keep costs down and prepare for future expansion as the Canadian government will pay you to train workers while working.

It is a chance for workers to become fully competitive in the labor market. They can earn while learning in actual working situations, on jobs that may require practical experience for three to 12 months.

You needn't wait for the busy period to hire new, qualified workers, you can hire and train your own, right now.

This program has been allocated $25 million to assist in the training of unemployed workers across Canada and is open to all employers except those supported primarily by tax revenues, such as departments of any level of government, school boards, police and fire departments, etc. Applications are now being accepted, to allow the program to reach its fullest impact in the period ending May 31, 1972.

Employers, to qualify for a grant under the terms of the Canada Manpower Training-on-the-job program, will be required to:

(1) Show training capability

(2) Offer adequate working conditions

(3) Provide training for a minimum period of three months and not to exceed 12 months.

(4) Offer training in skills which will lead to employment with the employer's organization and/or are readily transferable

(5) Hire workers for such training who will be in addition to their current or regular labor force. No contracts will be entered into with employers showing an inordinate rate of turnover or who have regular staff on lay-off, capable of performing similar work.

(6) Employ such workers subject to all relevant laws and contractual obligations, and provide usual wages and benefits.

A priority will be given to unemployed workers who are:

(1) Actively seeking work through a Canada Manpower Centre for whom lack of recent work experience is a barrier to employment.

(2) Graduate from a Canada Manpower Training Program or similar vocational training courses who require further training on the job or work experience before they can become fully competitive in the labor market.

In all cases, trainees must be persons likely to derive continuing benefit from the training and work experience to enhance increased employability or earning capacity.

Santa Claus Parade 'Unqualified Success'

PICTON (Staff) — The annual Santa Claus parade sponsored last Saturday by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce was "an unqualified success" according to chamber president Bernard Osburn.

"It merited and got the whole hearted support of the community," he observed.

Parade committee chairman Ronald Scott said that this year merchants donated $622., the highest amount ever contributed toward the parade. The previous record was $498.

Total expenditures of $556; left, "an unprecedented total of approximately $66.

Mr. Scott remarked that earlier this year chamber directors had discussed abdication from the Santa scene by turning the organization of the parade to a service club.

He commented that he felt the chamber has "reaped a good deal of public recognition" from sponsorship of the parade and discouraged its abandonment.

His opinion generally was supported among directors attending yesterday's luncheon meeting.

Guards Deny Assaulting Prisoner Who Refused to Move Fast

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Two Mi... penitentiary guards testified before the Ontario Supreme Court Tuesday that they did not assault former Kingston penitentiary prisoner William Knight during his transfer to Millhaven last April 21.

Grant Snider, 41, of Harrowsmith, Ont., told the jury that Knight, 28, of Chatham, was one of several Kingston penitentiary prisoners who refused to move quickly into the prison from their bus as ordered by guards.

Snider said Knight walked "as slow as possible" up a set of stairs and across a loading platform towards a corridor.

"I grabbed Knight and pushed him into the passage," Snider testified.

He said he didn't strike Knight with a blackjack as prisoner witnesses had stated earlier at the trial.

Snider is charged with assault causing bodily harm to Knight and Bernard William Evans, 25, of Kingston, is charged with common assault on Knight.

The two are among eight Millhaven guards charged with a total of 17 assaults on seven former Kingston penitentiary prisoners following an April riot there. The other six trials are to be held in January.

The assaults are alleged to have taken place when two busloads of former Kingston prisoners were being transferred to Millhaven.

Evans told the court that he had a slight scuffle with Knight, but didn't strike him.

Evans said he was called in to help in the transfer of the prisoners on his day off and took up a position at the intersection of two corridors.

"I directed inmates to the right or left to be frisked," he testified. "Knight was moving quite fast when he came down the corridor.

Evans said the prisoner skidded on the floor, ran into him and fell backwards.

He said he picked Knight up by the shirt, there was a slight scuffle when the prisoner grabbed him and Knight fell back to the floor. When Knight got up, Evans testified, there was blood on the back of his head.

Medical evidence introduced at the trial Monday indicated that Knight had a vertical laceration on the back of his head that required six stitches.

Two prison instructors, Robert Howard, of Gananoque, Ont., and James Murphy, of Kingston, both told the court Tuesday they were standing a few feet from Evans when Knight came through the corridor. Both testified Evans hadn't assaulted Knight.

Both Crown and defence lawyers were to give their summations today, before Judge Gerald F. Smith delivers his charge to jurors.

Hees Asks: Who Is Buster?

OTTAWA (CP) — Who is Buster?

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) sought the answer in the Commons Tuesday as he twitted Prime Minister Trudeau about a speech Sunday to Liberal party supporters in Montreal.

Mr. Trudeau used the appellation several times in citing his Liberal government's accomplishments. Sample:

"When are you going to have a capital gains tax?

Well, we are having it now, Buster."

Mr. Hees was ruled out of order when he asked Mr. Trudeau to identify the gentleman. Mr. Trudeau just grinned.

Alaska Natives To Get Millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Congress voted Tuesday to give Alaska natives $962.5 million and 40 million acres in settlement of their aboriginal land claims.

The House of Representatives and Senate approved and sent to the White House a compromise bill to settle the claims of 55,000 Eskimos, Aleuts and Indians on most of the vast Alaska land mass.

The House voted by roll call, 307 to 60, and the Senate by voice vote.

President Nixon is expected to sign the bill into law since the payment approximates recommendations in his administration's recommended claim settlement bill.

The approved measure would give the natives $500 million in royalties from minerals produced on Alaska public lands, which otherwise would go to the state, plus $462.5 million in federal appropriations over a 11-year period.

Commons Boosts Pay Of Queen

LONDON (AP) — The House of Commons voted Tuesday night to give the Royal Family a massive pay increase despite vehement protests from the Labor Opposition. One member lambasted Princess Margaret as "an expensive, kept woman."

Labor MP William Hamilton, a longtime critic of Britain's monarchy, charged that Queen Mother Elizabeth—who will receive an increase to $577,500 from $172,000 a year—was receiving, in effect $1,625 an engagement.

Referring to Margaret's proposed increase to $97,500 a year from $27,500, Hamilton asked: "Why, oh why, are we giving this expensive, kept woman that kind of salary increase for doing what she is doing?

Conservative members quickly jumped to the defence of the Royal Family. One of them, John Stokes, accused Hamilton of making a "vile attack" on royal personages.

The increase, which lifts the Queen's income to the equivalent of $2.5 million from $1.2 million, was approved by 300 votes to 27, a government majority of 273.

Canadian Divers Missing

NASSAU (Reuter) — Two Canadians disappeared and were presumed drowned during an attempt to take to a record depth with scuba equipment off Andros Island in the Bahamas.

Ann Gunderson, 23, and Archie Forfar, 29, both professional divers, disappeared last Saturday while trying to beat the world record of 417 feet set by two Americans off Grand Bahama Island in October, 1968.

A third participant in the dive, American Jim Lockwood, was rescued. He said he was unable to recall what had happened, but he believed they had passed their target depth of 475 feet when something went wrong.

He's Fed Up with Employers' Briefs

Mackasey Delivers Defence of Proposed Labor Legislation

MONTREAL (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey staked his political future on the issue of technological change Tuesday as he launched a stinging attack on two Canadian employer groups.

In an impassioned off-the-cuff defence of proposed labor legislation before about 250 management, labor and government industrial relations experts, Mr. Mackasey called for an end to fixed positions on issues in his Bill C-253.

He said he was fed up with "thick, glossy briefs" and piles of form letters which show that knowledge of the labor field by the Canadian Manufacturers Association and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce "leaves a hell of a lot to be desired."

"If reaction from the labor movement had been as irresponsible as some of the letters I got from management, people would have got up and said I told you so."

The labor minister stressed he had invited and continues to welcome discussion of the bill which would alter several rules and practices governing collective bargaining.

One of the major innovations in the bill is aimed at getting labor and management to include provisions for technological change in their collective agreements. It provides for 90 days notice of change, gives unions the right to reopen negotiations on the matter during the life of the agreement and provides a limited right to strike on the issue after appeal to the labor relations board.

The CMA, the Chamber and many employers have criticized these provisions.

"You will find," Mr. Mackasey said, "I am still prepared to amend this section to make it possible for collective bargaining to work."

But, he added, many employ, by "cautiously launch into technological changes without taking into consideration the effect of this on your work force."

"Clauses on technological change are remaining in Bill C-253. I stake my political future on it."

Fewer than 15 per cent of collective agreements under federal jurisdiction "even provide for notice in the event of technological change."

"The cornerstone of Canadian labor relations . . . has been that once a collective agreement is signed, the right to strike is prevented.

"If this is to be preserved, there has got to be some escape valve in the contract to take account of issues which have not been resolved during prior negotiations."

The labor minister said some employers had introduced such changes "in a civilized manner." Following a report in 1965, the railways had managed to make the switch with the minimum of disruption and eastern Canadian ports have modernized to container facilities, making "the difference between survival and extinction."

The new bill, expected to die on the order paper of the current parliamentary session and to be introduced with some amendments in the new year, is designed to replace legislation with enterprise system and the free collective bargaining process, he warned it "will survive only if it meets the challenges the young generation has posed in recent years."

Car Servicemen's Reputations Poor

TORONTO (CP) — Car servicing agents "have a long way to go in pulling their reputations up by the bootstraps" before they can regain public confidence, a Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. official said Tuesday.

Harry Meanwell, Ford's general parts and service manager, told a public forum on rising car repair costs that Canadian car servicing establishments can no longer afford the reputation of being more interested in making money than in providing honest service.

At the same time Mr. Meanwell said the franchise system of car servicing affords a better avenue for redress in the case of a dispute between a customer and a mechanic.

Under this system, a car maker franchises a service centre and participates in training mechanics to service the line of cars it produces. If a customer is dissatisfied, he can appeal to the parent company.

Mr. Meanwell said the cost of operating service centres and a chronic shortage of good mechanics have reached the point where it is financially impossible for an establishment with a poor reputation to stay in business.

Elmer Greene, president of the Garage Operators Association of Ontario, said the chief blame for expensive servicing and parts lies with the car makers because they do not design cars that are easy to repair.

"The new bill should be designed for the '70s, for the next 25 years, regardless of whether this upsets vested interests in the country—and I'm talking about vested interests in the union movement as well as in the business community," Mr. Mackasey said.

"The problem facing this country in the '70s is our ability to compete—with the United States, with the Common Market."

He urged employers to "get with the 20th century."

Stressing his belief in the private enterprise system and the free collective bargaining process, he warned it "will survive only if it meets the challenges the young generation has posed in recent years."

Exports To U.S. Higher

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite the U.S. surtax on imports, Canadian exports to the United States continued to increase during November, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

But a sharp increase in the amount of U.S. goods coming into Canada cut Canada's trade surplus for the month to $102 million, compared with $336 million in November, 1970.

Canadian exports to Britain, the European Economic Community and Commonwealth countries were down compared with November, 1970, but imports from all regions were up.

The change in Canada's balance of trade with the U.S. came as the U.S. Congress was debating measures to stimulate exports.

The U.S. government had announced Aug. 15 a surtax of up to 10 per cent on imports, designed to attack the trade balance problem by discouraging imports. But imports from Canada continued to increase each month since then.

Total exports last month were $1.6 billion, while imports were $1.5 billion. Exports were up to 6.4 per cent and imports 27.7 per cent from the same month a year earlier.

For the 11 months from January to November, exports were $15.3 billion, up 6.9 per cent, while imports were $14.3 billion, up 10.6 per cent.

Canadian exports for the month to the U.S. were $1.1 billion, up 19.4 per cent from $948 million a year earlier. Imports from the U.S. were $1 billion, up 28.8 per cent from $781 million.

Canada's trade balance with the U.S. was $129.3 million, down from the November, 1970, surplus of $137 million. But over the 11-month period, Canada's trade surplus was up—$1 billion this year compared with $868 million last year.

Merchandise trade surpluses with the U.S., however, are traditionally offset by deficits in non-merchandise trade between the two countries—payment for services and tourists expenditures, for example.

Welland Cargoes Are Large

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Cargoes shipped through the Welland canal have exceeded the 60-million-ton mark for the second season in succession and there is still a chance last year's over-all record will be broken.

Tonnage is running slightly behind the 1970 rate but St. Lawrence Seaway Authority officials today blamed the late start in shipping last spring because of extensive icefields in Lake Erie.

However, they expect a late season rush during the next few weeks to more than compensate.

The seaway was scheduled to close officially last Sunday But the Welland canal will continue regular operations through Dec. 31 and on a day to day basis to Jan. 7 as traffic and weather allows.

Foreign-flag vessels have all cleared and the only traffic expected from now on is domestic.

India Triumphs

Surrender in East Halts All Fighting

Rival Generals

Lt.-Gen. A. A. K. Niazi, left, commander of Pakistani forces in East Pakistan, has surrendered his forces after arranging a ceasefire with Indian Army Chief of Staff Gen. Sam Manekshaw, right. Originally given 16 hours to surrender, the Pakistani forces were eventually granted an eight-hour extension. (AP-Photo)

India Army in West Told to Cease Firing

From AP-REUTER

The Indian army triumphed on its eastern front today with the unconditional surrender of Pakistan's army in East Pakistan. Then the Indian government ordered its troops on the western front to stop fighting as of Friday night in a unilateral ceasefire.

The Indian cabinet's decision to call a pause in the Kashmir area was made despite a declaration by Pakistan's president that he would carry on the war with India until the "occupied areas are taken back."

In announcing the Indian government's decision, an official spokesman said:

"We have repeatedly declared that India has no territorial ambition.

"Now that Pakistani armed forces have surrendered in Bangla Desh, and Bangla Desh now is free, it is pointless in our view to continue the present conflict.

"Therefore in order to stop bloodshed and unnecessary loss of life, we have ordered our armed forces to cease fire everywhere on the western front, with effect from 2359 hours Indian standard time on Friday, Dec. 17, 1971."

"It is our earnest hope that there will be a corresponding immediate response from the government of Pakistan."

The time given is 8 p.m. local time, equivalent to 9:30 a.m. EST.

The eastern and western Pakistani fronts are separated by about 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

In the east, Indian soldiers marched victoriously into Dacca and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said in New Delhi:

"Dacca is now the free capital of a free country."

It has been the provincial capital of the East wing of Pakistan.

Mrs. Gandhi said refugees who had fled from East Pakistan to India were already returning to the area which India calls Bangla Desh, or Bengali homeland.

The Pakistan president, Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, apparently refusing to write off East Pakistan, broadcast his intention to put out two weeks hence a new constitution that the province would apply to "both the wings" of Pakistan.

Peterborough Hotel Manager Shot to Death

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — Police said today they are questioning two men and a woman in connection with the fatal shooting Wednesday of the manager of the New Grand Hotel.

Murray Green, 50, father of three sons, was shot twice in the chest with a 38 calibre revolver during a struggle with a holdup man.

Police said a woman employee of the hotel witnessed the shooting, but they have not released her name, or further details of what she saw.

China Says India Violates Border

HONG KONG (Reuter) — China accused Indian armed forces today of crossing the Sino-Sikkim border and carrying out reconnaissance on Chinese territory, Radio Peking said.

The charge was made in a protest note sent by the Chinese foreign minister to the Indian embassy in Peking, said the broadcast monitored in Hong Kong. It quoted the protest note as saying:

"According to reports from Chinese frontier guards, at 1310 hours and 1655 hours (3:10 p.m. and 4:55 p.m.) on Dec. 10, 1971, seven Indian armed personnel in two batches successively crossed Sese La on the China-Sikkim boundary and intruded into Chinese territory for reconnaissance."

"The Chinese government hereby lodges a strong protest with the Indian government against this and demands that the Indian government immediately stop its activities of intrusion into Chinese territory."

Kingston Mayor's Yule Box Contains 41 Parking Tickets

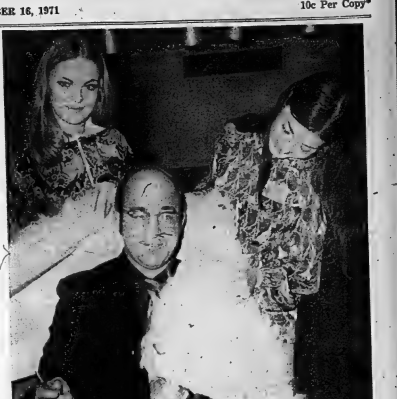
The tickets were all dated Dec. 15 and each was issued between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. to motorists who had violated the city's overnight parking bylaw for winter control, which went into effect at 1 a.m. Area of Dec.

Mrs. Swain gave the 53 tickets to parking authorities.

The box contained a Merry Christmas note for the mayor and a message: "It is better to give than to receive, therefore we are returning these to Sarah."

The box also contained "some rather exotic remarks" not printed "for the boys," the mayor said.



The parking authority officials said they plan to process the 41 tickets and then turn them over to the court.

The normal disposition for the court is to increase the fine to $4 and $3 in court costs, bringing the total payment to $7.

The bylaw, to remain in effect until March 31, says cars must not be parked overnight on any city street.

WATERLOO (CP) — Pensioner Frederick Straws says old dogs should get the same sort of tax exemption as old people. To prove his point, the 68-year-old man went to jail Wednesday for two days rather than pay a $10 fine for failing to buy a tag for his 14-year-old dog, Bootie.

French Report Pledge

U. S. to Lift Surcharge When Currency Revalued

PARIS (Reuter) — The U.S. 10 per cent import surcharge will be lifted when international currency parities are realized, French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said today.

He said this was part of the agreement reached in the summit talks this week in the Azores between President Nixon and French President Georges Pompidou.

The surtax on imports was imposed by Nixon as part of his Aug. 15 economic package to help lower the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit.

Canada was among the countries bitterly opposing the surtax, which directly affected 22 per cent of its exports.

Giscard d'Estaing, who took part in monetary talks on the Azores, said in a speech to French businessmen:

"It is understood that the American surtax on imports and other fiscal measures favoring American products will disappear at the time a realignment of monetary parities takes place."

A communique issued by Nixon and Pompidou said they would "work toward a prompt realignment of exchange rates through a devaluation of the dollar and revaluation of some other currencies."

Group of Ten Experts Gather at Washington

WASHINGTON (CP) — Amid widespread anticipation that the four-month monetary and trade crisis is ripe for progress, the deputy finance ministers from 10 leading non-Communist industrial nations meet here today to put together an agenda for their ministers in talks beginning Friday.

While the finance ministers of the Group of Ten concentrate on world currency values and broad policy decisions affecting international commerce, bilateral talks about specific trade barriers may be carried out in what is likely to be a series of meetings between United States trade negotiators and their counterparts from other Group of Ten nations, including Canada.

The Canadian delegation which arrived here Wednesday night included not only Deputy Finance Minister S.S. Reisman, but also, unexpectedly, Deputy Trade Minister James Grant.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson and Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, are expected later today.

Canadian officials said Grandy will be available for bilateral talks on trade and other specific problems with U.S. officials should the Americans wish such discussions.

Since U.S. spokesmen have been stressing that removal of the 10-per-cent U.S. surcharge on imports depends on success in negotiating a "package deal" — including currency values, trade barriers, defence-cost sharing and other problems — the likelihood of direct Canada-U.S. talks was considered reasonable.

Guarantee for A White Christmas?

They briefly solved the White Christmas season problem in Florida this week — as record temperatures made snow vanish in places like Belleville. Here, students frolic at Miami day school in five inches of snow specially shipped in 30 youngsters, suitably attired, could have northern-like frolic with the temperature at 80 degrees. Last night it rose to 50 degrees in the Belleville - Trenton area

If White Christmas Is Ahead Mercury's Peak Is Deceptive

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Today is the day for dreams of a white Christmas.

It will have two dreary—even dangerous in spots — but Wednesday's freezing rain front eventually set a new record for warmth in the Belleville-Trenton area.

During the night the temperatures hit a high of 50 degrees at CFB Trenton — the highest for that time since they started keeping records at the base about 40 years ago.

A high of 53 degrees was recorded in Toronto, breaking the previous mark of 50 degrees for Dec. 15 set in 1862.

It won't be quite that warm during the coming week-end. Nonetheless, with only nine days to Christmas, forecasts sound almost still warped.

Saturday says a Trenton forecaster, will be cloudy with some rain or rain. Low temperatures will be in the 20s with 35-40 degree high. Sunday it should be partly cloudy with a low near 30 degrees and a high about 40.

With such unusual warmth what snow hid fallen earlier has rapidly disappeared in the southern Quinte townships and communities.

The Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed today reported snow had "practically disappeared" from the area.

In the Bancroft area, reported the department, snow in the bush was down to a mere two to three inches compared to six inches earlier.

Yesterday's freezing rain storm — which hit Belleville in the early morning — gradually came unstuck as temperatures rose to that new record.

Winds, however at times were heavy, with maximum gusts of 50 miles an hour reported at the Trenton base.

Belleville had a total precipitation of .75 inches during the freezing fallout and Bancroft .50 inches.

EDMONTON (CP) — It was warming up today for Albertans who had had it so cold Wednesday.

The weather office said temperatures were heading for a relatively balmy zero after plunging to record lows for Dec. 15 at eight locations.

It was 41 below at Edmonton International airport Wednesday night.

Subdivision Schemes Outlined to Council

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — The last regular meeting of council this year was concerned with land development and matters pertaining to it.

Two revised proposals and one revealed for the first time suggest the growth in permanent homes and summer cottages will continue.

The prospects of more new construction in the township follows a record year in residential building with permits issued in the last 11 months representing well over a million dollars in property values for addition to the assessment rolls.

In November, with weather conditions better than average, the pace in new construction starts remained at a high level. Building permits issued represented $119,000 for the period.

In the time set aside for delegations, Jack Allin of Belleville presented his amended plan of subdivision for development of property on Peat's Point. Under the new proposal, Mr. Allin seeks permission to build permanent homes on one-acre parcels of land. There would be 12 separate dwellings involved and he proposes to provide the water and disposal facilities for them. The submission was approved by council.

A change in the original plan of subdivision for a cottage development on Massassauga Point received council's approval as well. The new principal, John Sheridan, showed a revised plan which called for lot sizes to be increased and the developer to supply water and sewers. The developer proposes to service all 72 cottage sites in the undertaking.

Howard Weese of RR 1 Carrying Place was advised to seek approval of the community planning branch for his proposal of a subdivision for permanent homes in the vicinity of Asbury. He outlined his intention to supply water and sewage facilities to the proposed location south of the road from Carrying Place to Rossmore.

Both Mr. Sheridan and Mr. Weese brought to council's attention their preference for install lagoon systems for disposal of sewage.

The second firehall in the township at Carrying Place has been completed and was turned over to council by builder Bob Frost.

Council was informed plans are already under way for the official opening ceremony.

Council is deciding between telephone and radio as the most reliable and efficient alerting system to install in the new firehall. Bell manager Bob Carlton of Trenton and E. George Thompson of Belleville acquainted council with the advantages of using telephone to relay alarms to volunteers.

Council ordered an agreement drawn up for signing to permit the Department of National Defence facility at Mountain View use of the township dump. The station's dump near the airport is being closed, council was told.

Council agreed to continue fire protection for Sophiasburg township.

Centennial Concert Tonight

A musical winter wonderland will be performed this evening in the Centennial Secondary School auditorium.

A concert of both seasonal and contemporary music will headline the show with high light performances by a girls' choir and a flute trio.

Included in the show will be the musical presentation of Holiday On Ice and Winter Wonderland.

Both senior and junior bands will be performing. In addition to the orchestra will be the less orthodox jug band.

Admission to the evening will be 50 cents, and all proceeds are placed into the band fund.

"This is our only source of revenue to finance band tours such as the one in the past week," said Monty Emmerson, music teacher-conductor.

The show will begin at 8 p.m. and should last until about 9:30 p.m.

Trenton Family of Nine Stuck in Hotel Rooms

TRENTON (Staff) — Ted Norton, his wife and seven of their 10 children have been living in three small rooms of the Gilbert Hotel here since last June.

Norton, 46, honorably discharged from the Canadian Armed Forces in the spring, after serving 19 years as a cook, says he can find neither a job nor home for his family. Owners of the Gilbert, Mr. and Earl Sutcliffe, allow the family to stay although they cannot afford the $12 a day for their rooms.

Armed Forces officials allowed the Nortons to stay in base housing for four months after payments of $111, plus $183 mobility pension paid by residence on Mr. Norton's retirement. The family has lived in hotels since that time — at the Gilbert through indulgence of the owners.

While on base, Ted Norton applied to the Ontario Housing Corporation's Trenton office for a home but was told he was ineligible because he was not a resident of Trenton. Later, on a visit to OHC offices in Belleville, they said they could not. The latter office should have accepted their application but by that time no OHC housing was available.

From May to September, the family lived on monthly welfare payments of $111, plus $183 mobility pension paid by the Canadian forces.

Mr. Norton found work in Toronto but found, after travel expenses were taken out of his income, he was only going deeper in debt, he says. He returned to the welfare rolls Tuesday.

The Nortons are now looking for a home and work anywhere in Canada. If they find something before April 1972, the Canadian Armed Forces will pay moving expenses.

Mayor Duncan McDonald said today the Nortons had contacted him when they were living at Middleton Park but he had not heard from them for months. He said he was not aware of the fact they were living at the Gilbert, a local night-spot.

"At this time of year it is a pretty hard situation for people to be in," commented the mayor, recalling the town has faced this kind of problem all years . . . we had people living in tents over by the lake this summer because we had not enough accommodation in town."

Picton Post Office Mail Load Heavy

PICTON (Staff) — The volumes of mail now handled by workers at Picton Post Office has increased this month caused by the spirit of letters to a Mr. Claus who resides at the North Pole.

Most of the cards, Christmas kitters and packages also are being distributed to the heavier mail load.

Postmaster Robert Carter said yesterday the mail volume is "up a little, by about 40,000 pieces."

He added that this could represent a deceptive increase because volume could taper off before the holiday season ends.

Mr. Carter noted that the extra mail has created no problems for him or his staff this year and said that it involves a busier period of about 10 days.

Three seasonal employees have been hired this year to assist the regular 9-member post office staff.

Mr. Carter recalled that several years ago the post office hired temporarily 15 holiday helpers. Because systems have modernized and the public has grown "much more sophisticated" the early mailing it is no longer necessary to employ so many extra workers at Christmas time.

Mr. Carter commented that a recent postal survey showed that about 80 per cent of the Christmas cards mailed here this year were enclosed in sealed envelopes and were sent at a priority rate.

He said that this fact is presumably due to the low cost difference between sending sealed and unsealed cards. Sealed cards can be mailed for seven cents while unsealed cards may be dispatched for six cents.

The postmaster suggested a two- to three-day difference in delivery dates between the two classes.

The December 13 deadline for mailing out-of-town cards and packages has passed and the local deadline of December 20 is fast approaching.

Mr. Carter observed that there is no backlog of local mail at the Picton post office

Trenton to Get New Industry

TRENTON (Staff) — A new industry to be established in North Trenton will employ 46 people when it starts operations next year and this figure is expected to double within five years.

Baring Industries (Ontario) Ltd. will manufacture cigarette tubes and hard operated cigarette making machines at its $750,000 plant to be located on Sidney St. on a three-acre site just south of Crane Canada.

Hon. Allan Grossman, Ontario Minister of Trade and Development, announced yesterday the company has been granted an Ontario Development Corporation performance loan of $82,500 and a term loan of $137,500 to help construct and equip the factory.

Products manufactured by the company will replace Canadian imports valued at about $1 million annually.

Construction will start early in 1972 on the property formerly owned by the town. Tender calls will be zoned out within the next few days.

Mayor Duncan McDonald credits a telephone call from the firm of Barry and Percival to Mrs. M. Hewson, with negotiations which have led up to the ground work for the company's decision to locate here.

Retiring Educators Honored at Dinner

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Two well known educational administrators retired last night at a dinner attended by more than 60 of their friends and colleagues.

J. M. Cousins, superintendent with the Hastings County Board of Education and R. O. Dulmage, executive assistant to the director of education were honored with a testimonial dinner at Centennial Secondary School.

Both will leave the board's employment at the end of this year, after more than 40 years' service each to education in the Quinte area.

Enlivening the evening were two vocal parodies in tribute to Mr. Cousins and Mr. Dulmage — one sung by six elementary school principals and Mr. Musgrove, and another sung by director of education Eric Runacres, with superintendents D. C. Stirling and L. F. Reid, and L. D. Reid at the piano.

Mr. Cousins, educated in Belleville and at Queen's University, began his teaching career at Queen Victoria School in 1931. He became vice-principal of Queen Mary School in 1946, principal of King George School in 1951 and of Prince Charles School in 1956. He was supervising principal in 1958 and an inspector of public schools the following year. With formation of the county board in 1969, he became an associate superintendent of schools.

His career in education was interrupted by the war, when he rose to the rank of Lieutenant - Colonel with the 9th Anti-Tank Regiment.

"Seated in this room are some of the finest teachers in Canada," said Mr. Cousins in his reply to the tribute paid him by Mr. Moore.

Remarking on the dedication of the teachers he worked with during his early years in education, he remarked "My God, with the salaries they earned then they had to be dedicated."

Mr. Cousins called the present board of education and its administrators "one of the finest groups I've been associated with.

"We are now at the point where we can sit down and insult each other for 15 minutes without getting mad at each other," he said.

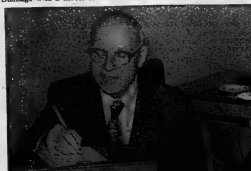
Mr. Cousins was presented with a Tom Roberts painting and, together with Mr. Dulmage, with a Kiwanis certificate of appreciation by Gerald Brennan.

Mr. Dulmage exhibited the quiet wit that has brightened educational circles for the last 46 years.

"I have a perverse sense of humor," he said. "Some of Eric Runacres' goals and objectives are over my head."

Mr. Dulmage was born and educated in Prince Edward County and began teaching elementary school there in 1925.

"I went from the sublime to the ridiculous," he said, noting that he had seven pupils in his first year of teaching, and 60 in his last year at Deseronto Public School.



"One was in grade 9 and one in grade 10 — so-called." And now they say this open concept in schools is a new thing."

During the war, Mr. Dulmage was adjutant at Fort Frontenac in Kingston, and joined the administrative arm of education as assistant business administrator with the Belleville board of education in 1947. He became secretary-treasurer with the Bay of Quinte District High School Board and executive assistant when the county board was formed.

Mr. Musgrove presented Mr. Dulmage with a model of the desk and chair that will be delivered to his home at a later date.

In the final remarks that closed the evening's tributes, board chairman Donald Williams echoed the sentiments of those present by referring to the two guests of honor as "these beloved men".

Roy Dulmage, left and J. M. Cousins, right were honored last night on their retirement after a collective 86 years devoted to education in the Quinte area. Mr. Dulmage gave his miniature desk, a model of the real one yet to be delivered, a workout at the testimonial dinner held to mark the event.

Raising their voices in musical tribute to retiring superintendent J. M. Cousins last night was a sextet of six elementary school principlus one. The satirical musical comments on the careers of Mr. Cousins and Roy Dulmage, retiring executive assistant with the Hastings county board of education, highlighted the farewell dinner given in their honor.

That's the most an Accutron® timepiece will gain or lose in one month's time. And you'll get it in writing.*

Accutron beats like a watch. But it isn't. It doesn't have a mainspring, a hairspring, or a balance wheel.

These parts make a watch run fast or slow. Accutron has replaced them with an electronic-powered tuning fork. It splits each second into 360 equal parts. And makes the Accutron timepiece so precise, it won't gain or lose an average of more than two seconds a day. In fact, we guarantee accuracy to within 60 seconds a month.* Just one darn minute.

The old-fashioned balance wheel principle is used in all watches, but the Accutron tuning fork movement has accuracy that's impossible to duplicate with any other gears.

About Face

In view of the Godlessness of our times, the killing and the maiming in other parts of the world, not to mention recent events of this nature in Canada, the decision of FLQ activist Pierre Vallieres to renounce the terrorist organization and terrorism as a political force is of prime significance.

The majority of the people of this country, and of most countries, are for peace and goodwill. Most of us are too concerned with living to want any part of the madness that governs minority factions consumed by hate and bereft of human compassion.

And when one who formerly espoused such tactics, namely Pierres Vallieres, renounces violence and urges others so-inclined to do likewise, it is indeed cause for hope that saner policies may prevail among those who seek political change in Quebec.

That some are of a different mind, fellow activist Charles Gagnon for example the says Vallieres has "put himself on the bourgeois side" — a typical leftist denunciation — does not detract from the influence for good Vallieres' statement will have.

Valleres of course still talks in terms of the "struggle for liberation" of the Quebec people, but instead of the FLQ he now comes down on the side of the Parti Quebecois as the political force to bring this about. As Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque put it, lucid reflection (by Vallieres) had been brought to bear on "the sterility of armed agitation, . ."

Subversion in Quebec

That Pierre Valleres' decision in favor of normal democratic processes does not sit easy with FLQ policies may be understood more clearly against the background of other news emanating from Quebec.

It is all so clear who the mentors of these people are. Ever since Che Guevara burst on the scene in the wake of the Cuban revolution in 1959, and considering the even lengthier-known views of Mao Tse-tung, the techniques of subversion, of infiltrating the establishment, not to mention the tactics of urban guerrilla warfare, have received their strongest advocacy and attracted including many otherwise non-adherents around the world.

U.S. Devalues

Devaluation of the American dollar and revaluing of other currencies to achieve a realignment of the Western world's exchange rates: that would be believed the great American economy reduced to such straits? But there it is — the result of the country's vast spending program, much of it on defence as well as its support of other countries' economies in the postwar years, the sequel also to the increasing strength and trading positions of such countries as Germany, France and Japan. It is not a happy day for American prestige, but the development does show regard for the need for an end to the fiscal uncertainty the Western world has been experiencing of late.

Caught in the Act

The apprehension of half-a-dozen Belleville juveniles caught removing colored lights from Christmas trees should give city parents something to think about. How many parents are aware of what their offspring are doing out of the house after school? Or do they care? We would hope so. We would hope also that they will take appropriate disciplinary action, for it is regarded that because of the ages of the youths no charges are contemplated. Let parents put a stop to this sort of nonsense, before we add to the growing numbers of footloose youths with nothing better to do than break in to city and private property and vandalize.

Next Federal Vote Will See Many Pick Up That Pension

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Perhaps more than in any other Parliament within living memory, time in terms of age, health, ennui, and boredom will be changing the face of this one, soon to be entering the fourth and almost certainly final year of its life.

Seldom, if ever, in the last 30 years, have so many parliamentarians, with the election still six months or more away, been talking of calling it a political day.

While among some of the older MPs heading into retirement there is a tendency to "make way," as some of them variously put it, "for younger men," there is another reason.

The parliamentary pension makes it financially possible.

And this was not always so. Perhaps one of the reasons parliamentarians have risked — and felt — the hot flash of public criticism over their pension deals is that some of them remember a former acting Conservative leader.

He died broke, and Parliament remembers it because the Commons took up a collection to cover the funeral expenses and provide maintenance for his widow.

Initially Parliament was oversensitive perhaps to its image, and in its first pension plan went for a ton of $2,000.

But it gradually overcame its financial timidity and as the pension scheme paid off up to last year, an MP could draw an annual $9,000 on retirement after 20 years in the Commons.

But who, you ask, ever does the course that long?

Well, there is John Diefenbaker and there is George McIlraith who will have clocked-22 years each by the time Prime Minister Trudeau calls the election.

And there are Calgary's Douglas Harkness with 21 years, Lethbridge's Hellyer with 23, Prince Edward — Hastings George Hees with 22, Vancouver's Harold Winch with 20 and Saint John's Tom Ball with 19.

So there are men of long, mileage who have made public service their careers, often with some very real financial self-sacrifice, and who have every pension dollar coming and more.

But last year, Parliament, unsure of its rapidly diminishing public image, threw timidity over pensions out of the window and went for a deal that a half dozen or more MPs, Conservative and New Democrat, branded as "unconscionable".

The pension maximum now tops $12,000 for a backbencher after 25 years with cabinet ministers qualifying in half the time again.

Fair ball. After 25 years of that kind of life, and it is far less easy now $12,000 probably is reasonable. For if an MP is to last 25 years he has to have earned successive re-election by the sweat of his brow in serving his constituents and his riding. If he had not, could he have lasted that long?

The rub comes in the short-term pension.

And there will be some short-term MPs going onto the retirement list. Some will be voluntarily in advance of the vote or as losers after it.

Pensions now start after just six years in the Commons, time only for one full Parliament and a half.

Why six years?

There were a couple of MPs with split terms which, by the time the election is under way, will have served the six qualifying years . . . just.

The starting eligibility was tailored expressly for them, and went up to the day last night need that pension with the threat of defeat very real.

Six years will get each of them almost $4,000.

But that is every year for life with two percent more each year.

Or take the two-Parliament, eight-year MP who bows out at age 60. He has a life expectancy of another 35 years. In pension contributions he will have laid out $10,000, with the taxpayers ponying up the balance, and receiving more than an annual $5,000 pension, will get back nearly $250,000. For just eight years of work.

Nice investment, eh?

Let us have a minute of all once while the old age pension er, after a life-time of work figures that one out.

No other segment of Canadi an society now has it as pen sweet as the politicians.

Now, as good, grey Stanley Knowles, "conscience of the Commons" says, since the election is the time for you to put your vote where you mouth is, there are two options to satisfy the clamouring rabble on this pork barrel.

Make sure your MP serves no more than one Parliament, or four years.

Or, if already he has served two Parliaments or six years, make sure nobody defeats him so you will not have to pay that pension to two MPs.

It's simple, eh?

Sure is. But isn't the pension?

Government Reorganization A Definite Need

Queen's Park
By DON O'HEARN

There will be a lot of cynicism in the first reaction to the Cronyn plan for restructuring the government.

This will be particularly true within the government service itself since bureaucracy resists change. However, this is not a proposal to be knocked. Modernization of government certainly is needed. And possibility of at least some important improvements can be seen in this plan.

The biggest weakness of the government has been strength and disorder. There has been duplication of effort, projects of would-be geniuses that haven't been warranted, waste and confusion.

This has been mainly possible because each department has been a little empire in itself. Departments have been reviewed only by treasury board, and its interest has been in holding down costs rather than in programs themselves.

There will be some curb on this under the new plan.

To take the piece of land men plowed yesterday, the man in agriculture who sees it as a farm will also consider it as a preserve for for land development. He will know others will be thinking of it for this use and he will at least want to have his arguments prepared.

Also automatically there will be more control on wild goose scheming.

If a senior official feels it would be a good idea to dig a hole in a lake he will give it second and third thought. For he will know he will have not only his own minister, but also four or five others to convince. Then there should be less duplication.

For example there now are two women's bureaus in the government — one in labor and the other in trade and development. Both these departments will be in the policy field of environment and resources development. One of the bureaus should go.

The plan admittedly could be a flop. To be really successful it is going to require a spirit of co-operation and considerable intelligence by the members of the cabinet. And along with this more direction than most have exercised over their senior civil servants.

Then the plan is based on decisions by committees, and this could mean too much committee use. But, once again, it isn't to be expected. It's a step in a direction where there is pressing need.

Abortion: an Attack on Human Life

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I must protest against the free publicity Gwen captioned You'll Never Guess Who Just Got Aborted" as direct to the matter how we excuse it, abortion is always a direct attack on human life. This was acknowledged by nearly every doctor who dealt with this question before the House of Commons, health and welfare committee and 28 medical witnesses, only one tried to deny that abortion destroys human life; and his denial was neither clear nor consistent.

But many people either fail to realize this fact, or else they are unwilling to face it. They would rather believe that abortion only destroys "potential life, or that it is "piece of tissue" or a "clot of blood". Myths like these must be dispelled before we can place abortion in its true perspective.

Out of ignorance or bigotry, some people try to argue that the scientific facts about abortion are only "religious" be cause Dr. Hellyer and Trudeau ists with no religious faith agree that abortion destroys human life. By the time most abortions are performed the baby within is clearly known with a human face, hands, feet, a functioning heart, brain and other organs.

We bear a great deal about a woman's "absolute right" to her own body. But we are not allowed to get drunk while in charge of an automobile. We are not allowed to take certain drugs, and there are many other things we may not do with our own bodies. So what gives us the "absolute right" to destroy the body of another human being?

An unborn child is sometimes unlawfully killed by someone "already living" or "already here". But this child is also "already living" and "here". The essential difference is that he is hidden in the womb, and so more easily ignored. But a child is no less human and no less alive just because we cannot see it. As one doctor told a Commons committee: there is nothing magical or mystical about the birth process.

An unborn child is indeed very small and totally dependent. But a test of our civilization is the care and protection we give to the weak and helpless. Moreover, a civilized society does not judge the worth of a human life in terms of the immediate usefulness, or in terms of size. To regard this child as expendable, to assume that its life has little value, is to deny the very basis of civilized justice and the equality of all human beings before the law.

We cannot improve the status of women by destroying the rights of other human beings.

We guarantee justice for women only by guaranteeing justice for all. Any attack on the weakest of human beings is an attack on every one of us.

American Eating Habits Discourage Good Health

Chicago Tribune

Nutrition, or the lack of it, has reached such a deplorable state in the country that many people are literally eating themselves to death. As adviser editor Ron Kotulak warned in his recent series on nutrition, we are rapidly becoming a nation of overweight, undernourished slobs.

The infant mortality rate in this country is higher than it should be, and our susceptibility to heart disease is among the highest in the world. And our enormous food surpluses, malnutrition is a grim reality.

That this can happen in the world's wealthiest and most technically advanced nation is a paradox of alarming proportions. In contrast, the health conscious countries of Scandinavia enjoy the world's greatest longevity. In Japan, national concern over diet has not only improved their health, but exploded the myth that Asiatics are inherently diminutive. A generation of Japanese teenagers has grown up to the same size as their Western counterparts.

The blame for the American situation is widespread and rooted in our modern way of life. Mother's home cooked meal has been replaced by the TV dinner. Americans fill themselves with junk merely because it tastes good and is attractively packaged and easily to prepare. The food processing industry panders to this laziness and ignorance millions of dollars into advertising to encourage it. The federal government, which is supposed to be looking out for the consumer's good, has largely given the food processors a pass.

With such findings as Ron Kotulak's coverage to light, action will have to be taken. It would be next to impossible to change our lifestyle, but the food companies can start using the nutrition back into convenience foods that they take out in processing. If the will there will be growing pressure for the federal government to see that they do something. Someone has to see to it that we eat our greens.

Drug Store Item

Editor,
The Intelligencer

I would like to make clear the statement that Dr. Thosteson made concerning the product Kwell in his column on Monday, December 13.

The so called Kwellada here, is probably a prescription product in the United States as the doctor had said. However, in Canada, our Food and Drug Directorate has deemed Kwell safe for general distribution without a prescription.

Teenagers and Drivers Are A Very Mixed Bag

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was driving to Belleville and I picked up a lovely young girl. I love teenagers. As we were approaching the railway crossing there were three young ladies walking along and as I was telling her how I give kids rides, I said "I'd pick up the trio if I were going their way." Well, just as I passed them they spat at my car.

They didn't know me nor that I love young folk but what had they against me and how right did they feel doing that. How good in their hearts did they feel. I wonder? What a nasty thing to do.

Also I read about Safe Driving Week. Well in Belleville they sure aren't courteous. I waited ages to left turn from Hastings Manor. I'm no slow poke on crossing, but the sun was so strong in the west it was difficult to see approaching cars. No one slowed to let me in.

As long as some get these days it seems to matter how rude they are.

However, not all are like that. On Pinnacle a young man stopped to let me get out of the parking lot. There was a lot of traffic at the time. How much better people would all feel if they did kindnesses like that more often.

Santa Pays Early Visit

Members of the Picton Kiwanis Club, the Picton Kinsmen Club and the Picton Kinnette club joined forces to entertain more than 70 young sters who gathered at the Salvation Army Hall for a glimpse of St. Nick.

Chairmen were Kiwanian Harry Sisty and Kinsman Donald Watt.

Service club members doubled as chauffeurs last night to bring children to the party which began shortly after 6 p.m. with a hot dog supper.

After a dinner music was supplied by members of the IOOF junior band under the direction of Creighton Lockyer. Carol sheets were distributed among the young guests and the hall was filled with the sounds of Away in a Manger.

The jolly old gent arrived just in time to be greeted by the tune Santa Claus Is Coming To Town. He stopped to speak with each child and then opened his bag to distribute presents.

Two merry clowns, Danny Sisty and Kevin Watt, entertained party guests with their antics and promptly inspected the gaily wrapped parcels hurriedly opened by the children.

When Santa had distributed his gifts he told the boys and girls to expect another visit next December when he will again come to town.

Damage to the fence totalled $50 and the Iggleden car sustained $125 damages.

Goodbye for Another Year

It was goodbye for another year from the Jolly Old Elf, himself, after a successful Christmas Party for underprivileged children at the Picton Salvation Army Hall last night. The event, a joint effort of the Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Kinette Clubs, included carol singing sessions, featuring the IOOF junior band, and gift giving for the youngsters. More than 70 guests were in attendance.

Library Loans 27,000 Books

More than 27,000 books were borrowed from the Belleville Public Library during the month of November.

The distribution was 14,829 from the downtown library and 3,277 from the East Hill branch. Almost 11,000 books were borrowed from the children's library.

The highlight of last month's activities around the library was the Young Canada's Book Week celebration. One hundred and thirteen children entered the shadow box contest including four from the William R. Kirk School.

Again last month the puppet show was staged with a small film presentation. This drew an audience of 150.

Also held in the Belleville Library this past month was the meeting of the Regional Film Librarians.

Representatives came from Kingston, Peterborough, Haliburton, Lindsay, Picton and Cobourg to attend the session where discussion was held on film policy. Several films were also reviewed during the meeting.

Fire Destroys Barn, Cattle

PICTON (Staff) A barn owned by Ameliasburg Township farmer Ralph Connors burned to the ground shortly after 3 p.m. yesterday as firefighters struggled against high winds to save a nearby home.

A spokesman for the Ameliasburg Fire Department said today that the blaze at the third concession of Ameliasburg was caused when heavy winds blew hydro wires against the barn. The result was that the wires touched over end of the barn and sparks flew out the other.

The firemen added that as the woods swept through the burning barn, the blaze became just like a fire tornado.

It is believed 18 to 20 head of cattle stabled in the barn, perished in the smoke and flames. Firefighters managed to pull several pieces of farm machinery to safety.

The Fire department despatched three trucks to the scene, with one remaining on standby duty until 1:30 a.m. today.

Mr. Cannon's farm home escaped the blaze that engulfed his barn in the late afternoon.

No estimate of fire damage was available this morning.

Great Britain Remains Big Overseas Investor

LONDON (CP) — For more than a century the United Kingdom has been a large-scale investor overseas, and today she has an ever-increasing accumulation of overseas assets. Her investments have helped her through the financial strains of two world wars and with an estimated value of £14.5 billion at the end of 1970, they remain a source of immense strength to her economy.

At the same time these investments have played an important part in the economic development of the host countries, both through their productive contribution as a whole and through the introduction of technological innovations. Moreoever, direct investment is usually accompanied by managerial skills and know-how which might not be otherwise available.

Direct investment overseas by British companies produced estimated net earnings, excluding those of oil companies, of almost £700 million in 1970 and generated additional exports from the United Kingdom. Annual net earnings since 1961 have averaged £440 million, compared with an average annual capital outflow of £325 million (and average outgoings of £555 million for imports and £470 million for government expenditure overseas during the same period.

These earnings arise of course because the investments are of great value to the countries in which they are made. The enterprises owned or partly owned by British companies make a significant contribution to the economic growth of both developing and advanced countries.

The last decade has seen the annual flow of new direct investment by United Kingdom firms (excluding oil investment) increase from £200 to £500 million, although such flows are susceptible to year-to-year fluctuations. Largely because of continuing balance of payments problems, successive U.K. governments have during the last decade sought to influence the scale and finance of this overseas investment.

During the 1960s they evolved a system of exchange control on direct investment in all countries of the non-sterling area, and introduced the voluntary program of restraint on investment in the four developed sterling-area countries—Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Irish Republic. In general the growth of the Euro-currency market has helped mitigate the restrictive effect of these controls.

Freedom for companies to invest in any part of the world on a continuing basis is important to the economic strength and prosperity of the capital-exporting and host countries, as well as to the companies themselves. The arguments for the freedom of international trade and freedom of capital movements are similar and complementary.

Free movement of goods and of capital puts scarce resources to the most profitable use, improves the international pattern of production and thereby increases output and income. Free capital movement can to some extent act as a substitute for free trade; thus the more the restrictions on trade, the greater the importance of the free movement of capital. It should be remembered that the majority of developing countries best on expanding their manufacturing sector, have used tariffs and similar restraints on trade to protect their newly-established industries.

Investment in these industries becomes the only way in which foreigners can continue to do business and is therefore especially important to these countries' traditional trading partners. At the same time such investments contribute to the development of the host's economy.

It is, then, unlikely that Britain's traditional role as a major overseas investor will be altered. Britain is a major exporter (and importer) of capital, and her industry believes that such international investment is beneficial both to the investor and to the host country.

Prairie Ministers Talk Of Farm Machines Tests

EDMONTON (CP) — There are indications a centre to test farm machinery will be re-established on the Prairies, but just when and how remains uncertain.

The agriculture ministers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta have held several talks on setting up a testing centre, but that's about as much as they'll say.

Last May, after five years of study, Dr. Clarence L. Barber's one-man royal commission on farm machinery recommended an independent agency be set up to test and develop farm machinery.

Dr. Barber said such an agency would help farmers choose the right machines and models for their operations.

Since then, federal action on the report has been slow and the agriculture ministers—led by Jack Messer of Saskatchewan—started discussing the need, location and administration.

They have declined to reveal specifics, but sources indicate there may be differing opinions on whether it should be administered by an independent organization or through existing university facilities.

While Ottawa says only that the Barber report is "being studied as a package" and that talks with the industry are progressing, the ministers have reached the how-to-finance stage in their talks.

Machinery testing was set up by the CCF government of Saskatchewan in the early 1950s.

Called the Agricultural Machinery Administration, it was scrapped in 1964 when Ross Thatcher led his Liberal party to victory ousting the CCF.

Three years later, United Grain Growers, in a survey of some of its more than 55,000 Prairie members, said 80 per cent of the replies indicated farmers wanted farm machinery sold on the Prairies tested in the Prairies and 70 per cent said manufacturers should be "forced" to test all their machinery.

A. M. Runciman, UGG president, said his board of directors "strongly supports machinery testing."

E. A. Boden, Saskatchewan Federation of Agriculture president, said his organization also approves the idea.

Dobson Lea, president of Unifarm which represents about 30,000 of Alberta's 50,000 farmers, says he has discussed testing with Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner.

He said Unifarm would not object to the test location being in Saskatchewan.

The development comes as when farm machinery sales—in a slump during the last three years—are on an upswing.

Since 1968 in Saskatchewan, between 150 and 200 dealerships have folded because of economic conditions and consolidation.

But during the first six months of 1971, Statistics Canada said sales of new implements and equipment, including repair parts, increased 30.3 per cent from the same 1970 period in Saskatchewan and 33 per cent in Alberta. In Manitoba during the same period sales declined about two per cent.

There are also indications imported tractors may be making more impact on the Canadian market which, Dr. Barber said, is dominated by Massey-Ferguson Ltd., International Harvester and John Deere.

But the lack of service and parts still poses a problem for the purchaser of an imported unit from Italy, Romania, Russia and Japan. However, sales show a steady increase with Italy sending 918 tractors during the first eight months of 1971 compared with 281 in 1957.

In Winnipeg Canadian Co-Operative Implements Ltd. now is manufacturing Swedish Volvo self-propelled and pull-type combines under contract and sells imported Volvo tractors.

George Hirst, Komeco president, said he started importing three years ago and it "took at least six months before we sold the first six units."

"Our farmers were wrong about buying equipment previously untested on the Prairies, but now our first customers are coming back and sales are tremendous."

Mr. Hirst said his competitors tell me our prices are always about 10 per cent lower but if the Japanese yen is revalued upwards the price difference would be reduced."

Page Harrison, from the University of Alberta, says a Western Canada testing centre would cost only $150,000 a year to operate after an initial capital investment of between $500,000 and $1 million.

Venezuela Buys Planes

Canada Sells 20 CF-5 Jets

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has sold 20 CF-5 jet aircraft to Venezuela, a joint announcement by the trade and defence departments said Wednesday.

The value of the sale, under negotiation for several months, was not disclosed, but informants said it is about $25 million.

Eighteen of the ground support planes will come from armed forces stocks. They will include 16 CF-5A single-seaters, and two CF-5D dual models to facilitate training of Venezuelan pilots.

They will be replaced in the Canadian inventory by 18 new trainer models to be produced by Canadair in Montreal. The company will also produce two new CF-5Ds for Venezuela.

The defence department early this year took delivery of the last planes in a 115-plane order of CF-5s, manufactured at Canadair under licence from Northrop Corp. of California.

The CF-5 was designed primarily as a close support bomber with interceptor capabilities. Two squadrons have been formed in Canada, at Bagotville, Que., and Cold Lake, Alta.

However, many of the planes were placed in storage primarily at Trenton—until the defence department decided on a role for them.

In the defence white paper published this summer, the new role was outlined—that of advanced trainer. The CF-5s will replace aging T-33 Silver Star jets in this function.

Production of the additional aircraft is expected to begin soon.

Unemployment Insurance Rules Will Be Outlined

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will publish regulations shortly to clear up confusion about who is entitled to new unemployment insurance coverage starting Jan. 2, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said Wednesday.

He told reporters the regulations should end uncertainty expressed Tuesday by Jean-Paul L'Allier, Quebec's minister responsible for the provincial civil service, as to whether Quebec teachers and hospital workers would be included in the federal plan.

Governments Consider Parley on Prisons

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer and provincial attorneys-general may meet this winter to discuss an overhaul of the correctional system, it was learned Wednesday.

Mr. Goyer told a Senate committee investigating the parole system that it is "high time" a conference was held "to examine the correctional system in an over-all manner."

One possible area is whether jurisdiction should be determined by the length or type of sentence a prisoner gets. At present, it is determined by length—with anyone sentenced to two years or more serving his time in a federal prison.

Mr. Goyer said that deciding by type of sentence could mean, for instance, that the provinces would have jurisdiction where sentences were simply punitive while those needing treatment—or considered dangerous—might go to federal prisons.

He suggested that the subject of parole might also be discussed. Several provinces wanted more jurisdiction and some had special problems.

AIR CANADA'S FIRST FASHION CO-ORDINATOR — Phyllis Amerose has been named Air Canada's first internal fashion co-ordinator in-flight service. The appointment is the first step in a program to introduce a new look of fashion for in-flight personnel, as shown here in the new jackets designed to be used by pursuers on flights to the Caribbean. Co-ordinated wardrobes for the airline's stewardesses are scheduled for early next summer. (CP Photo)

A Variety of Ensembles for Air Hostesses

MONTREAL (CP) — Off with the uniforms, on with a winsome wardrobe is the word for Air Canada hostesses, says 23-year-old Phyllis Amerose, the airline's first fashion co-ordinator for in-flight services.

Starting next spring, stewardesses will take to the air in a variety of ensembles designed to meet individual lifestyles and incorporating "something suitable for every age-group and figure."

Emphasis will be on excellence in materials, cut and design as well as versatility in mix-and-match outfits highlighted with scarves, jewelry and a personal approach in make-up.

Styles will be modified continuously as different crews experiment with various outfits for comfort, fashion flair.

"Handbags, for example, would be roomy enough to hold all the items a stewardess needs during flight, but not ugly and bulky," says Phyllis. "And it's easy to design a stylish but comfortable working shoe."

The changes will be gradual but the focus will stay on a continually evolving career wardrobe.

"We are not little girls," says Phyllis whose background in the airline business includes six years as a stewardess and in flight supervisor.

"The image we intend to project will be based on good fashion sense with a flair, keyed to future trends as well as current styles."

WEDDINGS

CAIN — PASCOE

Rev. William Lamb officiated at the recent ceremony held in Holloway Street United Church when Carol Suzanne Pascoe, daughter of Mrs. W. Turner of 101 Bridge St. West and the late Ernest Pascoe was united in marriage to Thomas Michael Cain of Yeomans Street, son of Mrs. Ethel Cain and the late Frank Cain.

The bride chose for the occasion a sheer white A-line crimplene dress with lattice style sleeves edged with navy blue. She carried a single lace pink mum.

The bridegroom was attended by Terry Scott as best man.

At the reception held afterwards at the Sergeants' Mess, Belleville armories, guests were received by the bride's mother in a pale mauve crepe dress with sheer sleeves and yoke complemented by a corsage of maurice limited mums.

Mr. and Mrs. Cain are residing at 9 Wellington Crescent.

St. Julien Chapter Holds Yule Tea

The sparkle and glow of the Christmas season greeted visitors as they entered the hall at the Kiwanis Centre on Saturday where the St. Julien Chapter IODE held its tea and sale of Christmas baking. Guests were welcomed by Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, Regent, and Mrs. C. P. Lenk, vice-regent. Many admiring glances were directed at the display of beautiful Christmas gifts arranged under a decorated tree opposite the door. These were the articles for the Gifts from Santa draw.

At the far end of the hall, underneath the banner and flags of the Order, was a gay tea table with red cloth, centred by a shining Christmas table decoration, red candles in silver holders and a silver tea service at each end from which several members poured tea during the afternoon. Individual tea tables with white cloths and small candle centres provided a place for visitors to rest and chat.

Along one side of the hall stretched a long table filled with Christmas baking of all kinds — puddings, cakes, mince tarts, fruit breads, and all varieties of Christmas cookies attractively arranged on plates. On the opposite side of the hall, a table held a fine assortment of novelties, from nylon swishers, decorative soaps for the boudoir and Christmas napkin rings to knitted articles for the family.

Miss Rosa Spry from Stirling, provincial councillor for this area, drew the winning tickets on the Gifts from Santa draw, and Mrs. Whittemore announced that Mrs. V. Ryan of Trenton was the winner of all the lovely gifts. A phone call by her sister, Mrs. R. Bailey informed her of the good news and Mrs. Whittemore extended to her the congratulations of the Chapter on her good fortune.

The Chapter appreciates the co-operation of the merchants, and the many people who bought tickets on the draw. The proceeds will enable the Chapter to assist in their many worthwhile projects in the community.

Matter of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Do bachelors get tired of being carefree?

NO. The only reason that many bachelors give up being carefree is that girls can convince them that being married is better than being single. Some bachelors who cannot give up being carefree to take on the responsibilities of marriage are afraid to see if they could get by without continually displaying the wit, the charm and the so-called dashing existence that traditionally go with being a carefree bachelor.

Can a loafer learn to like exercise?

YES, and it would be a help to someone who likes to loaf to last through the long tedious routine he must go through to get fit. First, however, he will have to change his attitude toward his daily doses. Instead of regarding the routine as a grind, he might try to look forward to doing it. He might even buy his dress pants in a size too small. Working to get a waistband to fit looser could make him like his exercises.

Is it immature to demand immediate satisfaction?

YES. Anyone who must always have immediate satisfaction hasn't developed much since his earliest days when everything as far as he was concerned had to be done right now. After an individual becomes properly oriented in time and is able to understand the future and the past as well as he does the present he can be called mature enough to realize that satisfaction need not always be immediate to be appreciated.

Ann Landers

Boy Needs Help

Dear Readers: You've been asking for a reprun of this column since 1968. Here it is:

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me why normally intelligent people seem to take leave of their senses at Christmas. I refer to those individuals who compose interminable chronicles of the year's activities, have them mimeographed (usually a poor job) and proceed to send the drivel to everyone whose last name they can spell.

Isn't this the height of arrogance? What makes these people think anyone (save a special few) are interested in wading through all that stuff?

For several years we have been receiving family newsletters and I've had it up to here. I guess what really galls me is the way everyone tries to paint such a glowing picture of affluence and success. I have before me a fistful of chatty little Christmas letters from all over the country. I'm going to lift a few sentences from each to illustrate the point. (The names of persons and organizations have been changed for obvious reasons):

"Dear Friends: What a wonderful year we've had. Jim was named vice-president of the bank so we celebrated by buying a Mercedes and taking a trip to the Orient. In addition to his boy scout work, Jim served as chairman of the United Fund drive. He is still on the hospital board and president of Kiwanis. Just for laughs he played the lead in a little theatre production last June and everyone said he was better than the star who did it on Broadway. His first love, however, is still conservation and he continues to work hard as chairman of the Committee to Fight Dutch Elm Disease.

"After completing my term as Junior League president I swore I would take life easy but it seems I am more involved than ever. I accepted the vice-presidency of the garden club and am still active in the DAR. Our church organist became ill and they asked me to substitute so I accepted. I ran the rummage sale for the Eastern Star again this year and managed to squeeze in a course on flower arranging which was offered by a Japanese exchange student.

"Jim Jr. won his letters in football and basketball. He is on the all-star debate team and placed third in the national oratory contest. We were surprised when we read in the paper that he had won $100 in an essay contest sponsored by the American Legion. Jim has already been accepted by Harvard. Debbie was elected president of her class at Dana Hall. She is almost as tall as her mother. Our pet Weimaraner got a little horsewoman—won a blue ribbon in the Show at Greater Point," and so it goes—until you could puke.

Next year, Ann Landers, I'm going to send a newsletter to all the people who have been sending me newsletters. It will read something like this and I hope they get the hint: -

Dear Friends: We had a perfectly rotten year. Hal was passed over for promotion again so he got mad and quit. He hasn't lined up a new job yet but he is listed with two agencies and looks in the papers every day.

Hal Jr. was defeated for homeroom monitor. He flunked French and will have to go to summer school. Billy has not had a haircut since August and had to hock his guitar to pay for repairing his Honda which he wrecked. My mother-in-law's annual two-week visit in May turned into two months and my migraine got so bad I had to go back into therapy.

As I write this, the whole family is down with the flu and I don't feel so good myself. We hope next year is better. It couldn't be worse. Love to all. —Mary

Successful Living

Thirty-five Years of Progress in Mental Health

By DORIS CLARK

Have you ever had a friend who is very opinionated, or easily offended? Maintaining such a friendship can be quite tricky. Sometimes, even with the best of intentions, you can alienate this type of person, then spend months or even years regreting the hard feelings.

How can you mend such a broken friendship? With love, pure and simple. Do something nice for that person. Bake her a cake, or make her some other little gift, depending on your talents. Deliver it in person. Let her know that you want to let bygones be bygones.

Of course it's hard to do! But so worthwhile. Even the hardest heart softens at the touch of love. It's so perfectly explained in this little poem by Edwin Markham—

"He drew a circle that shut me out —
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
But Love and I had the wit to win:
We drew a circle that took him in!"
— Dot Turcotte

Dear Doris: I came across an old newspaper which reports the following: Dudley, England: A large department store in this Worcestershire town stayed open an extra three hours so that 100 old-age pensioners could do their Christmas shopping in peace. — Cockney in Canada.

Dear Cockney: Well, bless their little present-picking hearts! Hope it still goes on and heaps of others catch the idea. Santa is bound to approve.

Dear Doris: For a WI meeting I am to address them on' The Glory of the Home is Hospitality. If you have ideas or a poem on this motto would you please send it along? — Mrs. X.

Dear Mrs. X.: How near is your nearest public library? That's the place for you to go.

But consider these ideas:

1. The very word "home" suggests a place where a person may go for tender and loving care. (Exception: The home of the God-bless - us-four-and-no-more variety).

2. Hospitality means reaching out a welcoming hand to the visitor at the door. It means offering a refreshment even if only a cookie. More often it turns out to be a cup of tea, or something stronger; or an impromptu invitation to stay for supper.

3. The very essence of home and hospitality go together. They mean ministering to the tired or friendless one who finds the care he needs in the place where the fires of love burn brightly.

4. You have mentioned the word "glory". Perhaps the sincerity of the love expressed in hospitality is what gives it the glory.

I wouldn't give you two cents for a family dwelling where this kind of an atmosphere does not exist. Where there is no open door, no loving servile, there is likely to be discord — and perhaps even, the makings of family breakdown.

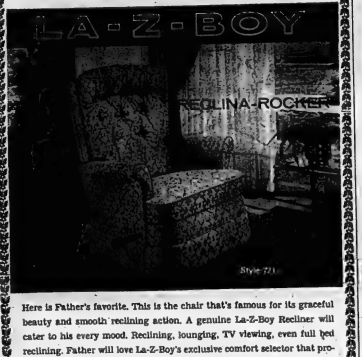
* * *



Have you an idea — about people — that you'd like to share? Write Doris.

University Women Enjoy Party

The Four Seasons' Saganoska Room was the setting on Thursday evening for the Belleville and District University Women's Club annual Christmas dinner.

The group compiled with the Christmas gift-giving tradition, not by exchanging gifts, but by donating a present suitable for someone who is mentally ill. This being the 20th anniversary of this club function made it an especially memorable occasion.

After club president Miss Muriel Gibson welcomed the 65 members to the festively decorated dining room Mrs. A. E. McFarlane said grace and proposed a toast to the Queen. All did justice to the delicious and attractive Christmas dinner buffet covered by Mrs. J. E. Johnston and Mrs. H. W. Burns.

In her after-dinner remarks Miss Gibson paid tribute to recently deceased club members and recalled, from the minutes, the highlights of the original Christmas dinner held in Belleville in 1951.

Mrs. E. Thompson of the membership committee, asked that attendant new members be introduced. Mrs. J. Boyd, Mrs. W. S. Babbitt, Mrs. J. E. Kustec, Mrs. P. Harris and Mrs. D. A. MacIntosh each introduced Mrs. J. M. Foat, Mrs. F. K. Jefferson, Mrs. Lewis Lambert, Mrs. R. J. Morden and Mrs. J. C. Scotfield respectively, and welcomed them to the club.

The evening's program was not only different but seasonably appropriate. After a glowing introduction by Mrs. R. S. Burt, Mrs. D. T. Mac - Kinnon, better known as Canada's Director of Home Economics Poultry Products Institute, Dorothy Batchelor, B.H. Sc., demonstrated and wittily described how to bone, cook and carve one's Christmas turkey.

The table on which she worked was bedecked with many beautiful—Christmas ornaments, all by-products of the poultry industry. There were egg-shell tree ornaments and eyes a Santa Claus complete with cutter and reindeer.

After Mrs. R. E. Barrett presented Mrs. MacKinnon with a floral tribute as a token of thanks for sharing her very professional skill and ideas, Mrs. J. M. Haig ended the evening with readings on Christmas by such noteworthies as George Bernard Shaw and William Shakespeare.

Medical Care Bill Gets Approval

TORONTO (CP) — A Liberal amendment to remove eligibility requirements for persons 65 or older to receive free medical care was defeated Wednesday in the Ontario legislature.

The defeat on a voice vote was an easy first test for the Progressive Conservative government which was returned to power with 78 seats in the Oct. 21 provincial election. The Liberals hold 36 seats and the New Democratic Party 19 in the 117-seat legislature.

Both opposition parties supported the amendment by Richard Smith (L—Nipissing) made during committee study of legislation to eliminate medical premium payments for pensioners and merge the province's medical and hospital plan.

Three bills incorporating the changes were given third reading, the final step before royal assent.

The legislation, introduced by Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence, requires pensioners to apply for the premium-free service, and also stipulates they must have been residents of Ontario for one year in order to be eligible.

Mr. Smith's amendment would have made eligibility automatic, without application, at age 65.

Unexpected support for the amendment came from Leonard Reilly (PC—Toronto Eglinton) who said the government should not place "any obstacles at all" in the way of pensioners getting the free service.

Mr. Lawrence said he agreed with "the spirit of the amendment in its entirety," but that it could not be done at the present because of administrative problems. His department did not know how many persons in Ontario were 65. An application was the only way to find out.

He said Ontario, along with the nine other provinces and the federal government, are currently seeking ways to make medical care service portable across Canada.

Teachers Quit

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Robert Welch says a dispute among teachers and principals in the Rainy River-Fort Frances area will "resolve itself" without intervention from the provincial government.

James Foulds (NDP—Port Arthur) said 84 teachers and three principals have resigned, and asked what Mr. Welch plans to do to ensure continuing education for 1,750 children. The board is advertising for replacements.

Mr. Welch said he is not sure the resignations have been accepted.

Routine Check On Tely Death

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Gordon Carton said Wednesday that his department's employment standards branch plans an investigation next month into labor relations tied to the closing of the Toronto Telegram in October. Mr. Carton told the legislature such investigations are routine.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, had asked the minister whether he has been informed that Telegram management is cutting off severance pay for those who found other work when the newspaper ceased publication Oct. 30.

He also asked why The Telegram had refused vacation pay to some employees.

Mr. Lewis asked "what special rights and privileges" The Telegram has in Ontario that allows it to violate the Labor Relations Act and what role its former publisher, John Bassett, has on the cabinet.

Mr. Carton said no one dictates to his department.

Outside the house, he said he had not heard that the newspaper will not provide vacation pay for some employees, and added "we have stepped in on two or three other companies" on the vacation-pay issue.

He said that, with 1,200 employees put out of work, this was the "largest full closure" in Ontario.

Nursing Home Chains Seek Ontario Licence

TORONTO (CP) — Companies that operate chains of nursing homes in the United States and Western Canada have applied for licences to open homes in Ontario, Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said Wednesday.

He said the significance of multiple ownership is being assessed by the health department. Applications will go through a nursing home review board to be set up "within days."

Mr. Lawrence told the legislature the department is concerned over both the quality of care in such homes [illegible] homes are a facile way to accumulate enormous sums of money without scrupulous attention to the quality of care.

They were speaking during debate on $34 million in supplementary estimates for the department which were approved after about 10½ hours' debate Wednesday.

Reporter Says India Planning 'To Give Pakistan A Lesson'

TORONTO (CP) — A reporter who returned Wednesday from covering phases of the India-Pakistan war said it appeared unlikely India is ready yet to accept a lasting truce despite Pakistan's appeal for a cease-fire.

John Drewery, CBC correspondent who had worked mainly out of Calcutta during the last seven weeks, said in an interview there were indications the Indian Army would continue fighting until Bengalis had set up an independent Bangla Desh government.

Mr. Drewery, who said his coverage of the war was severely hampered by "government control of the news, said it appeared "India intends to give Pakistan a lesson" after other bitter wars between the two countries.

Mr. Drewery said that if Dacca, East Pakistani capital, surrendered or fell,"it was likely that India would move its troops to the northwest and continue the war. Dacca remained under heavy fire Wednesday night.

But Mr. Drewery said it was impossible to give an accurate day-by-day account of the fighting.

"We were allowed to see nothing unless they said we were allowed to see it. There is a very definite attempt by Indian authorities to take over complete management of the news.

"We were told lies . . . we were confined to one side of the war.

"We never saw a true combat because they wouldn't let us see action. We were never allowed to move with the troops unless they (the authorities) thought it was advantageous to them.

Mr. Drewery, adding that propaganda was rife on both sides, said that Indian reporters were allowed to cover the action with cameras and written reports—"but most of the stories that appeared in the Indian newspapers bore no relation to the facts."

"I couldn't believe there reporters were in the same places I was."

He said one newspaper reported the Indian forces were 20 miles from Dacca and the next day they were 40 miles away, and there was no indication they had retreated.

"There was no censorship applied to our stories; it was just that they wouldn't allow us to be where the pertinent action was."

He also said Canadian money and supplies sent to aid East Pakistan refugees appeared to be put to good use. There were reports of mass hijacking of material, he said, but he saw no evidence of that and Red Cross officials said the refugees were being reasonably cared for.

Reporters were returning to East Pakistan for one trickle, he said, and for many it was a return to famine. Thousands of acres of ripening rice would remain unharvested because many refugees were farmers.

Dow Suit Next Year

TORONTO (CP) — Environment Minister George Kerr told the Ontario legislature Wednesday he expects the government's $25-million suit against Dow Chemical (Canada) Ltd. of Sarnia to come before the courts next year.

He was replying to Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) who had asked Attorney-General Allan Lawrence what stage the proceedings had reached.

Ontario began the action last March contending the company was responsible for depositing mercury in the St. Clair River.

It is seeking $25 million in damages to the waterway's fishery and another $10 million if the company is found guilty and says it cannot clean up the alleged pollution.

Urban Planner Quits Job

Lithwick, Rebuffed by Colleagues, Proposes Research Agency

TORONTO (CP) — Harvey Lithwick, the academic who flirted briefly with government bureaucracy, is setting up an agency to undertake what he believes his one-time employer cannot accomplish.

The Carleton University professor, who drafide the outline for a federal urban affairs department in 1970, now is raising funds for an independent research institute.

He said in an interview his proposals met with insurmountable opposition and resistance from within the civil service, and he quit his post as assistant secretary of the new urban affairs secretariat to return to his teaching job.

He had hoped that the federal government could come to grips with, and perhaps solve Canada's urban problems.

"It just can't be done within the existing civil service affecture," the Harvard-trained economist said.

Mr. Lithwick's blueprint for the urban affairs department included establishment of "a giant federal shopping basket for urban aid."

"All Central Mortgage and Housing" (Corporation) would have to do would be to hand the money out. The provinces would each be allotted a certain amount of money, but that money would be theirs to use on any program they wanted."

He said Urban Affairs Minister Robert Andres oeme h m "a free hand. But when it came to standing up to CMHC and changing its function, there was nobody standing behind me."

His proposed research institute, for which he hopes to raise $320,000, could take on independent policy-making projects, he said.

Its findings, he said, would be free from government interference and vested interest groups and if its findings were properly publicized, the institute could become a powerful voice in Canada.

Horrid Dream Proves True

ST. LOUIS (AA) — Teen-ager Wilma Chestnut thought it was a bad dream. A man was slashing her eyes with broken glass, blinding her so she couldn't identify him in connection with an apartment break-in.

And then she woke up in a hospital room, not seeing. It was no dream.

When she awoke to darkness she had her roughest period of despair, said her mother, Colla Chestnut.

"She told me about it; she just about tore up the room," said Mrs. Chestnut, adding that the next day the despair was gone.

That was in late September. Now Wilma, 18, is making her way through the hallways of the Missouri School for the Blind, in the jargon of the school, "tooling up."

The unusual aspects of her case brought donations from around the world. Dr. Gene Barbour, a director of a fund set up to channel the money into education and rehabilitation for Wilma, said the total probably will reach $100,000 soon.

Some persons have offered their eyes in case a complete eye transplant becomes possible one day—the only way Wilma would ever be able to see again.

Wilma's attitude has been "fantastic," Barbour said. "She's showed no signs of depression. She sees the bright side of everything."

Arrested on a charge of assault with intent to maim was Johnnie Lee Brooks, 30, of St. Louis. He has pleaded not guilty and is being held without bail. The case is expected to go to trial next month.

Alberta Folk Turn To Wine

For years whisky, rum, brandy and beer were by far the most popular in the province.

But no more. Aided by some subtle encouragement from the Alberta Liquor Control Board, wine now is the fastest-growing item on the basis of sales at liquor outlets.

Wine sales now total almost half those of liquor. Ten years ago they would account for hardly one-tenth the retail volume.

Tom Richards, ALCB director of stocks, said there are several reasons for the rise in wine sales and affluence is obviously one of them.

"I believe," he said, "one of the reasons for the increased consumption of table wines is the low mark-up policy on table wines adopted by the board 10 years ago."

He listed the prices for a popular Portuguese wine in various provinces and the additional provincial sales tax:

Saskatchewan $2.65 and a five-per-cent sales tax; Ontario $2.39, 10-per-cent sales tax; British Columbia $2.15, five-per-cent sales tax; Quebec $1.85, eight-per-cent sales tax; Alberta $1.65, no sales tax.

"And we have higher transportation costs than most provinces," Mr. Richards said.

It was cheaper to ship most things from Toronto to Vancouver and back to Alberta than it was to ship directly from Toronto to Alberta.

He also feels the board's new ruling of a maximum 125-per-cent profit on bottles of wine in Alberta restaurants is likely to keep the popularity of wine surging.

Another service for wine drinkers by the ALCB was outlined by Mr. Richards.

"We're not going to keep up with the connoisseur buying in London. But first we try to meet the demand of the average drinker in Alberta.

"And lately our policy has gone in the direction of the specialist drinker."

Mr. Richards said a specialist drinker has a reasonably good chance of being satisfied by the selection offered on the lists of the province's outlets.

But some specialist wines have not yet graduated to the printed lists and there is a special warehouse stock form at all outlets of 20 choice wines that can be ordered on a bottle basis. This special list offers such selections as the $10.90 Chambertin Clos de Bzze 1966 and a $14 white burgundy called Mer rachet Marquis de Laguiche 1969.

Mars Visit Years Ahead

HOUSTON (AP) — Many space experts believe it will still be two or three decades before man lands on Mars, despite successful unmanned surveys of the Red Planet.

"It's so far forward in the future it tends to lose a bit of credibility," said Dr. Dennis E. Fielder, a member of the advanced planning team at the United States Manned Spacecraft Centre.

Space experts have made a rough profile, based on current technology, of what a Mars mission would be like, but the schedule of such a voyage depends largely on the rate of funding for the space agency and the direction of the space program.

Under a crash program, "with unconstrained spending," said Fielder, an American could walk the surface of Mars as early as 1982 to 1983.

"It's a 'can-do' type of mission by then, but there would be a lot of hazard," he said.

A more conservative, but still rapid, approach would put men on Mars in the late 1980s, but this would still "penalize the other programs in the space agency," Fielder said.

More likely, he said, man will go to Mars in a stairstep fashion, climbing upward on the technology developed from less ambitious goals.

Current thoughts on a mission to Mars call for a spaceship the size of a battleship—about 400 feet long—to be assembled in earth orbit. The main ship would have three nuclear engines.

On board, a crew of 12 would live in a self-regenerating ecological system. They would process waste water for reuse. Their air would be cleansed and breathed again and again.

Food might be grown on board, with plants helping to supply oxygen for the crew.

After a voyage of more than 200 days, the craft would orbit Mars, and a landing craft would descend to the surface, Fielder said.

The landing crew would be prepared to stay several weeks or months.

Using techniques from the Apollo moon program, the landing crew would launch itself off Mars, rejoin the mother ship and rocket homeward.

After another crossing of more than 200 days, the Mars voyagers would arrive back at earth orbit. They then would use a shuttle down to their home planet.

Subway Crash Blamed On Jammed Throttle

MONTREAL (CP) — The automatic braking system functioned but a jammed throttle prevented a Montreal subway train from stopping before it smashed into a parked train last Thursday, says a preliminary report on a subway accident that resulted in an underground fire that lasted nearly 25 hours.

The preliminary report, by Gerard Gascon of the Metropolitan Transport Bureau, was read Wednesday night to a meeting of the Montreal Urban Community.

It said the system's automatic braking mechanism functioned properly, but a throttle "jammed or (was) held in the drive position until, or almost until, the impact" of the brakes.

Fire broke out when an undercarriage on the stationary train touched the electrified rail.

The automatic braking system was installed to stop a train if the driver applied the brakes a little late, the report says.

Near-blind Man Fills Complex Think-tank Job

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Samuel Genesky doesn't let his near-blindness deter him from travelling everywhere alone or working at a complex and demanding job with the United States "think-tank" firm, the Rand Corporation.

In fact, Dr. Genesky, who is totally blind in one eye and has limited vision in the other, eschews all the traditional symbols associated with the blind.

He never uses a white cane, preferring instead to carry a pair of powerful field glasses in a case slung around his shoulders and a powerful magnifying glass in his pocket.

The California mathematician was in Toronto Wednesday to tell the meeting of the American Academy of Optometry about a closed circuit television device developed by a fellow worker at Rand Corp. that enables the almost-blind to write and to read books.

With 20-750 vision in his usable eye, Dr. Genesky must stand within 20 feet of an object that a sighted person could see at 750 feet. Even then he can only see a recognizable outline; for clear vision he said his usable eye has a rating of nearer 20-2,000.

But, he thinks nothing of taking his field glasses from their case to look at a sign or a traffic light. If that's not enough, he asks someone.

"It doesn't embarrass me—you just have to make up your mind that it's more important to see than to worry how you look to others."

Dr. Genesky lost his sight immediately after birth, but his parents raised him never to use his near-blindness as an excuse. If he failed at something, it was because everyone fails occasionally, not because he couldn't see.

In his early childhood he spent his first eight years of schooling at so-called "sight-saving" classes in his native Bedford, N.S., then spent a year at a school for the blind.

Then he got into the public school system and worked his way up through high school, university and finally to his PhD by using the "zone-to-page" technique of reading.

About six years ago Dr. Genesky and his colleagues at Rand began discussing ways of making it easier for him to read and write.

The present system uses a TV camera, set vertically above a frame placed on the desk and a monitor. Movable tracks on the frame allow a book or writing pad to be moved easily in either direction to bring the desired portion under the focused camera lens. The image can be flashed on to the screen in black on white or the reverse.

Magnification of the image can be altered also.

Ulster Ire Grows as Briton Says Military Solution Unlikely

BELFAST (AP) — Anger and frustration were reported swelling among Northern Ireland's Protestant majority today over a British admission there is little hope of a complete military solution to the violence which has tormented Ulster for more than two years.

And as if to underscore the gloomy forecast, guerrilla gunmen early today severely wounded another British soldier on patrol in Belfast, adding to the two already in danger of losing their lives from gunfire Wednesday.

British Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, who holds cabinet responsibility for Northern Ireland, shocked Protestants Wednesday when he told reporters it was likely the terrorists "would not be defeated, not completely eliminated, but have their violence reduced to an acceptable level."

The battle being fought by 14,000 British troops against the Irish Republican Army is a hard one, he said, and there appears to be no limit "to the evil these men can do."

Maudling's statement, made after two days of intensive talks in Northern Ireland with army and government chiefs, drew a swift retort from Rev. Ian Paisley, a hardliner who speaks for a powerful body of Protestants.

He said no level of violence would be acceptable to the people of Northern Ireland.

They would be "even more frustrated by this public declaration that it is not the intention of the British government to absolutely win the battle against the IRA," he said.

Paisley demanded an emergency debate in the Northern Ireland Parliament over the issue, while fears rose that Maudling's admission could spark a violent Protestant reaction once its implications of never-ending strife struck home.

The IRA's bomb-and-bullet terror campaign, which has brought 197 violent deaths in 28 months, is aimed at bringing Northern "stand under the rule of the Irish Republic. The North's one million Protestants —95% outnumber Roman Catholics two to one—are implacably opposed to union with the overwhelmingly Catholic republic.

Early today three British Army patrols came under fierce gunfire in Belfast's Falls Road; an IRA stronghold. Rifle, machine-gun and other automatic fire raked armored vehicles and the troops opened up into the darkness in return.

One soldier was said by military headquarters to have been hit in the stomach. An ambulance carrying Man to hospital was peppered with shots.

Snipers with high velocity weapons ambushed two military patrols Wednesday.

Weather and Work-to-rule Campaign Cause Toronto Airport Tangle

TORONTO (CP) — Bad weather and an Air Canada employees work-to-rule campaign which started Wednesday caused heavy congestion for a time at Toronto International Airport.

But the situation eased Wednesday night as weather conditions cleared and allowed planes to arrive. Flight cancellations and delays here and at Montreal took place as weather closed major airports in the United States. At Montreal freezing rain and an electrical storm moved into the area Wednesday evening.

Heavy winds and lashing rain over Ontario during the day hit air travel. An Air Canada spokesman said at 6 p.m. 35 of the day's more than 100 scheduled flights were cancelled and 28 were delayed.

Elsewhere across the country the weather caused some flight delays and cancellations at Halifax, but there and at other cities Air Canada reported no disruption because of its working to rule by the company's 2,000 ticket agents, airport workers and reservation clerks.

Protesting a breakdown Monday at Montreal in contract negotiations that have been under way since early September, the employees, members of the Canadian Air Line Employees' Association, began performing "by the book" at 3 p.m. local times.

At Toronto, nearly 1,000 tired and disgusted passengers, carrying crying children, Christmas presents and baggage jammed into the airport waiting for flights.

Some said they had stood in line for up to five hours to buy a ticket. But the tickets weren't much good until the late-arriving planes landed and delayed flights were rescheduled.

An association spokesman said that under the work-to-rule program duties would be carried out "by the textbook . . . not cutting corners."

However, Ted Morris, Air Canadian public relations officer, said:

"Our rules are designed not to impede progress but to perfect it."

He said if work was performed by the book "people ought to get better service."

Employees in working to rule follow every detail of procedures laid down for issuing tickets and handling baggage, including some normally ignored during busy periods.

In Ottawa, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said outside the Commons that working to rule is self-defeating.

"It doesn't require any intelligence to work to rule," he told reporters. "It doesn't help your cause. If unions want to resort to actions that are unnecessary or weaken their position at the bargaining table, that's their own decision."

During the holiday season from Dec. 21 to Jan. 3 Air Canada has scheduled a total of 469 extra flights. Toronto is the most sensitive area, with the airport expecting to handle 6,000 to 9,000 boarding passengers a day, rising to a possible 10,000 on Dec. 23.

Stranded Passengers Ate Reindeer

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 130 airline passengers arrived in Vancouver Wednesday, some of them telling how they began their Christmas holidays with reindeer steak while stranded for 48 hours in Greenland.

The passengers were picked up by a Pacific Western Airlines flight diverted from London, after their charter plane froze up while refueling at the remote arctic community of Sondre Stromfjord.

Some passengers said it was so cold at Sondre Stromfjord that their fingers burt for an hour after wrapping up in blankets and walking only about 50 yards from the stranded airplane to a hotel at the terminal.

Two Guards Acquitted at Napanee Trial

NAPANEE, Ont. (CP) — Prison guards Grant Soider and Bernard Evans of Millhaven penitentiary were acquitted by an Ontario Supreme Court jury Wednesday of assaulting prisoners from Kingston penitentiary.

The 12-man jury deliberated for about 45 minutes before reporting its verdict to Judge Gerald Smith.

Soider was charged with assault causing bodily harm to William Knight, who was being transferred with other prisoners last April from Kingston penitentiary, the scene of a four-day riot, to Millhaven penitentiary.

Soider has been a correctional officer since 1968.

Evans, a prison guard for four years, was charged with common assault.

Lawyer Stuart Willoughby of Kingston, representing the two guards, said in his submission that a great deal of evidence given by convicts "was rehearsed."

"Do they have a real regard for truth?" he asked.

Crown Attorney Clay Powell of Toronto said in his summation:

"They are a bad lot and they've got bad records and they're criminals. But they're still entitled to the protection of the law in our country."

If convicts do not receive the same protection as others, he said, "the whole system will break down."

During the trial, Knight testified that Soider struck him on the head when he was being transferred to Millhaven.

Knight said he then was forced to run the gauntlet of 10 to 15 guards along a prison corridor while the guards struck him.

When he had run the gauntlet, he testified, he was met by Evans, who grabbed him by the shirt, knocked him against the wall and on to the floor.

Eight Millhaven guards have been charged with 17 offences of April 19, 20 and 21.

The others charged are Peter Hinch and Albert Sweet of Napanee, Robert Earl Goodwin of Corbyville, Ont., Lester Earl Landstra of Odessa, Ont., Paul Joseph Cote of Kingston and William Craig Greer of Gananoque, Ont.

The other prisoners involved are John Hance, Brian Beaucage, Norman McCaud, Cicho Santana and William Crosby.

The other trials will begin January.

Tongue Tied?

Centennial's Vahe Parmaksezian isn't really sticking his tongue out at the opposition, just grimacing from the effort required to help teammate Rob Vanderwater stop Quinte Secondary School guard Rick Meagher. The senior Saints used some tough defence of their own to down Centennial 78-55, avenging an earlier exhibition loss to the Chargers. The senior victory gave Quinte a sweep of the Bay of Quinte COSSA basketball tripleheader.

Quinte Seniors Settle Old Basketball Account

Quinte's senior basketball team squared an old account as they paced their school to a Bay of Quinte COSSA sweep over Centennial Wednesday.

The senior Saints pressed Centennial's seniors into a 78-55 loss to gain some measure of revenge for a 64-61 setback to the Chargers in playdowns for the Queen's Tournament.

A tough 2-2-1 zone press gave Centennial a great deal of trouble. In their earlier defeat of Quinte the Chargers were able to get the ball down floor to their forwards to take advantage of the backcourt weakness caused by the press.

Last night, however, the Saints were able to tie up the Centennial guards well enough to fashion a big 42-23 lead at half time. The Chargers managed to revive in the second half but could only cut the lead by two points in the 78-55 loss.

The win gave Quinte a 9-3 record over-all this season, while they are 2-0 in regular season play.

Steve Nash netted 16 points for the winners with Neil Dunning adding 14, Kim Hunter 12 and Rick Meagher 11. For Centennial it was David Deal with 17 points and Vahe Parmaksezian and Brian Morphy with 11 each.

In junior action Terry Collins counted 23 points and Brian "Silk" Hale 21 to lead Quinte to an 83-30 win. The midget contest saw the Saints complete their sweep by a 66-27 count. Steve Hale had 14 points for the winners with Rick Bradford adding 12.

Seniors Receive Help From Different Sources

Belleville Quintes were getting help on two fronts Wednesday.

One bit of assistance came in the form of a $100 donation from the Belleville and District Real Estate Board for the sponsorless senior hockey entry.

The other was an evening's advice from Goat Renwick, president of the OHA Senior A league Galt Hornets, who met with members of the Quintes' steering committee to discuss means of boosting senior hockey in Belleville.

Renwick reminded the group that Galt's road to senior hockey success has not been as simple as two Allan Cups the past three years would take it seem.

He explained that the Galt senior hockey organization had to financially start from scratch after funding Galt Terriers' unsuccessful World Championship appearance at Colorado Springs in 1962 after winning the Allan Cup.

Mr. Renwick indicated he felt Belleville and Galt were in similar positions with regard to population, industry, and that the teams experienced many of the same difficulties. For example, he noted, a number of the Hornets, like the Quintes, are commuters, with four coming from St. Catharines, 70 miles distant for home games and practices.

While their new executive pondered Mr. Renwick's remarks and promotional hints, the Quintes had a big turnout for their second practice of the week, with only Mike Rexe absent. The Peterborough defenceman missed last Saturday's 3-2 loss in Owen Sound after injuring a shoulder in Friday's 9-1 romp over Woodstock.

The Quintes have only one game over the weekend, an 8 p.m. Saturday home tilt with Barrie Flyers.

Boomer New Boss

WOODSTOCK (CP) — John Van Boekel, Woodstock Royals president, announced Wednesday night that Royals' goaltender Ron Boomer will become head coach of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A club.

Centre Gerry Striegle will serve as an assistant coach and will scout most of the games, Van Boekel said. The two replace Keith Tolton, fired last November.

Kilmer Passes Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — On a date now lost to history, Bill Kilmer took one of the psychological tests professional football clubs force on their players now and then. One look at Kilmer's paper told the tester that he would make a "perfect Kamikaze pilot."

Kilmer never did become a Kamikaze pilot. But he channeled the traits that surfaced in that test into becoming a winning quarterback in the National Football League.

Cocky despite what the pros consider limited skills and gutsy because of it, Kilmer has provided the passing ability and the leadership to guide Washington Redskins to a spot in the NFL's post-season playoffs.

And, suddenly, people are asking what is Billy Kilmer like, just as they asked several years ago what Joe Namath was really like.

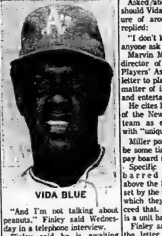
Billy Kilmer, some say, is tough enough to be a Marine lieutenant, and entertaining enough to charm the ladies. He dresses mod, but the last style is somewhat of a compromise between Namath long and Johnny Unitas short.

His main weapon seems to be his ability to get his troops to follow him and the nickname Furnace-Face has been lasped on him because of how red his face gets when he is angry.

Kilmer's success has come this season after playing for San Francisco 49ers and New Orleans Saints and old Furnace-Face now is the toast of Washington, saluted as the guy who brought the Redskins their first post-season berth since 1945.

"Of course, I had my doubts about coming to Washington" said Kilmer. "I never even thought that I could beat out Sonny Jurgensen, and I didn't want to spend a year on the bench. You get rusty in a year and then nobody wants you. I wanted to go somewhere I knew where I could play regularly."

There was no doubt that Kilmer would be No. 2 quarterback to Jurgensen, a 37-year-old 15-year all-pro, when he arrived in Washington. Then, Jurgensen injured his arm in a pre season game and was scheduled to be out for a minimum of seven weeks.



Coach George Allen, who had traded vigorously to build for a winning season this year, called on Kilmer to lead the Redskins. He hasn't been disappointed.

"I knew I could do the job," said Kilmer. "I'm not a kid just learning the game."

Blue Past Peanut Stage

OAKLAND (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue, the American League Cy Young and most-valuable-player awards winner, will get a "substantial raise" over last year's $14,750 rookie contract, says Oakland Athletics owner Charles O. Finley.

VIDA BLUE

"And I'm not talking about peanuts," Finley said Wednesday in a telephone interview.

Finley said he is awaiting word from baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn on contract guidelines.

Blue himself is on the way to Vietnam with Bob Hope and other entertainers, but he has been quoted as saying "I'm going to make a whole lot more money next year."

"I don't know. I've never had anyone ask me for $100,000."

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players' Association, has sent a letter to players bringing up the matter of increases for athletes and entertainers.

Miller pointed out that it may be some time before the federal pay board rules on sports.

Specific individuals are not barred from salary boosts above the 5.5 per cent guideline set by the board, but the unit in which they work must not exceed that. The question of what is a unit has not been defined.

Finley said he had a copy of the letter but would have no comment.

Howe will lace on his skates Jan. 24, to join his sons on Detroit Junior Wings against the National Hockey League Wings. JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The perennial basement team of the Eastern Hockey League, Jacksonville Rockets, have been dissolved.

Beset by debts estimated at $30,000 and poor attendance, the franchise held by Winter Sports Inc. was surrendered and the team disbanded Wednesday.

Three games billed to materialize and general manager Bob Sabourin said "all avenues of hope were exhausted."

He said six players made tentative connections with other EHL teams and efforts would be made to place all of them.

This was the seventh season for the Rockets here and they spent most of them in last place. Only once did they make the post-season playoff.

TORONTO (CP) — Longshots paid off at Greenwood Raceway Wednesday night with the daily double returning $1,056.80 for $2. There were 21 ticket holders on the combination of Misty Time in the first race and Shelly Tar in the second.

Miss Herrington's victory paid a big $72.40.

QUEBEC (CP) — Witnesses in the trial of hockey players Mike Bloom, of St. Catharines Black Hawks, testified Wednesday they saw him strike a Quebec City policeman after a hockey game last spring.

Bloom is charged with striking Constable Yves Cruz of the Quebec City police after a game between the Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series and Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Junior Hockey League May 9.

Jean-Paul Turcotte, a former referee, said the game, which the Remparts won 6-1, was the most violent he had ever seen.

Filion Passes All-time Win Record

NEW YORK (CP) — Herve Filion, the world champion reinsman from Lachute, Que., brought home three more winners at Yonkers Raceway Wednesday night to push his all-time lifetime record of 3,647 harness-racing wins.

The 39-year-old native of Angers, Que., who has his stable in Lachute, surpassed the record of 3,646 triumphs by veteran Billy Haughton, who is 17 years older.

Filion broke Haughton's mark by winning for the third time on Wednesday night's card with General Dayan in the eighth race, a $5,000 mile race. The winner paid $6.80. He also won the third and seventh races on longshots paying $16 and $12.60 to win.

The three wins increased Filion's total for the year to 530, also a world record.

His earnings of more than $1,770,000 by horses he has driven in a single season also is a record.

Filion set his career world record by driving standardbreds over a 20-year-period, about nine season fewer than Haughton.

On Tuesday night, the Canadian drove home six winners, equalling a record. Jimmy Cruise did it at Roosevelt Raceway in 1958. Filion previously had been a six-time winner with Ed Mayer and Bob Farrington, all at Freehold Raceway.

Five of the six winners were horses from his own stable. The Filion barn leads all others with 12 successes at the Yonkers meeting, still another record.

Involved in a three-sulky collision at Freehold Raceway Aug. 9, he suffered torn ligaments in his shoulder and facial cuts that required seven stitches.

Four days later he returned to the New Jersey track and won one race, then drove to Roosevelt Raceway that night and won five straight.

He followed it up the next day with two more victories at Freehold and four more at Roosevelt, including the $50,000 American Trotting Championship.

"I had to make up for lost time," he explained.

"He never stops," said Norman Dauplaise, another French Canadian driving in the New York area. "He's like a machine . . . not too many people can keep up with him."

Last year Filion travelled 250,000 miles by plane and car, appearing in an average six races a day, six days a week at tracks in the United States and Canada. This year he added Australia and New Zealand to his itinerary.

The season closed at Yonkers with Wednesday night's card, but the little horseman is scheduled to drive 12 races on the Saturday and Sunday cards at Ottawa.

"I love the sport and the travel," he says. "I'm very thankful for what I've got."

Three NHL Goalies Contribute to Offence

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rare occasions, indeed, these days when goaltenders can boast they contributed to the offensive efforts of their teammates.

But there were moments to remember on three National Hockey League fronts Wednesday night, all in winning efforts.

Chicago's Tony Esposito sent Bobby Hull away for the winning 2-1 Black Hawk decision over Buffalo Sabres, Ken Dryden shelled Frank Mahovlich's opener in Montreal Canadiens' 7-1 score against Los Angeles Kings, and Gilles Villemure assisted on a Jean Ratelle goal in New York Rangers 6-2 drubbing of Philadelphia Flyers.

The assist for Dryden was his third of the season. Other goaltenders who have aided on goals during the 1971-72 schedule include Gerry Cheevers of Boston Bruins, Roy Edwards of Pittsburgh Penguins and rookie Jim McLeod of St. Louis Blues.

Elsewhere Wednesday night, Toronto Maple Leafs edged Pittsburgh 3-2 and Minnesota North Stars used Murray Oliver's two goals and Gump Worsley's "mere" goaltending to subdue St. Louis 4-1.

The Rangers, leading Montreal in the East by three points, move into Boston Garden tonight against the third-place Bruins while Philadelphia is at home to Buffalo.

The opportunities were few at Chicago, each team getting only 19 shots, but the Golden Jet made the most of his chances, scoring both Hawk goals.

Pit Martin set up the opener at 4:07 of the first period, then Esposito scooped the puck behind the Chicago net to Hull, who skated the length of the ice before putting it behind Sabre goaltender Dave Dryden.

Defenceman Brad Park made it five goals in two games as New York, scoring twice in the Ranger onslaught that knocked Philadelphia goalie Doug Favell out of the game—the eighth time this season the New Yorkers have sent the opposing netminder to an early showers.

Ratelle's score, at 17:31 of the second period, marked Favell's exit and opened a 5-2 lead for New York. Bruce Gamble, who came on in relief, faced another 15 shots, yielding a third-period goal to Walt Tkaczuk, as the ever-pressing Rangers poured 51 shots at the Flyers' cage.

The game was marked by severe fights, including the rerun of a fight that took place between New York's Glen Sather and Flyer defenceman Rick Foley a week ago.

TONY ESPOSITO

The two clashed at 18:32 of the second period in what started as a preliminary to the feature bout of the game between Pete Stemkowski of New York and Barry Ashbee.

With the Stemkowski-Ashbee fight under control, referee Ron Wicks found the Sather-Foley conflict getting out of control and wound up giving both game misconducts as well as the heave-ho to New York defenceman Jim Neilson for interfering in the original fight.

Worsley, still fuming after his previous start last Sunday when Chicago jammed four goals behind him and drove him from the game after the first 12 minutes, admitted he was mad after Wednesday's game.

"You're mad at everybody and anybody when something like that happens. Nobody likes to have that done to him," added the 42-year-old veteran who previously played with Montreal and New York.

Minnesota coach Jack Gordon was reminded after the game that Worsley, who has allowed only 23 goals in 14 games, once threw his stick at Toe Blake, Montreal coach, for removing him.

"He was feeling pretty low about it," said Gordon.

"I can't blame him for the Chicago game. The way they were going, I don't know who could have stopped them. I took him out to stop their momentum."

The Sunday victory sent Chicago four points ahead of Minnesota atop the West Division. Worsley is expected to get a chance to revenge the loss when the two clubs meet at Minneapolis Saturday night.

Christian Bordeleau scored the St. Louis goal in the third period after Minnesota had opened a 4-0 lead.

"It's better that they get them then than right at the last like the other night, if they get them at all," reflected Worsley in the North Stars dressing room.

Jacques Lemaire's goal and assist at Los Angeles paced the Montreal. It was his 10th goal of the season at the 37-second mark of the second period opening the winner.

Several players from both teams were shaken up in the bruising struggle, but the most serious injury, to Toronto centre Jim Harrison, actually took place last Sunday in Buffalo.

Ratelle Returns To Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jean Ratelle of New York Rangers moved back into a first-place tie with Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League scoring race Wednesday.

Ratelle scored his 18th goal of the season to help the Rangers beat Philadelphia Flyers 6-2. Ratelle and Esposito have 51 points each.

Juniors Strike for Coach

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Junior hockey players in two southern Ontario centres are exercising their democratic rights to protest management's right to hire and fire personnel.

Aurora Tigers have walked out en masse over the firing of coach George Storey and manager John Barraon. Six players with Milton Flyers say they'll play no more until Carl Hyment is reinstated as coach and manager.

Storey and Barraon were fired by the Metropolitan Junior E team's executive earlier this week because Storey was incurring too many suspensions.

Western League Doomed ?

SEATTLE (AP) — The president of the Western Hockey League says it is doomed unless its cities somehow attain major league status.

There are three routes to that status, president Bill MacFarland said Wednesday, and a decision must be made by June.

"It's either major league status or go out of business, I think," MacFarland said. "We can't operate as a minor league as the cities are now. We're in major league cities competing against major league sports."

The league has asked the National Hockey League what its expansion plans are. The NHL has said it plans to expand from its present 14 teams to 24 teams during the decade. It already has named Long Island, N.Y., and Atlanta as two choices.

If WHL cities are not included in NHL expansion plans, MacFarland said, his league would declare itself a major league and bid against the established league for players, or join the World Hockey Association, the fledgling group which says it will become a second major league.

The brother of Red Storey, former National Hockey League referee, was in the midst of a five-game suspension—his fifth since taking over the coaching job midway through last season —when he was fired.

Hymers was fired suddenly from his job at Milton last Sunday. No reason was given at the time for the sacking, nor was there any enlightenment arising from a meeting of the Flyers executive Wednesday night.

Murray Hood, president of the Flyers of the Central Ontario Junior B league, would say Sunday only that Hymers had been released.

Hood was not available for comment Wednesday night.

Ottawa Will Buy Banned Mini-sub

OTTAWA (CP) — The Vancouver firm of International Hydrodynamics Co. Ltd., has accepted a federal government offer to buy a miniature submarine, earlier slated to go to Russia, a trade department official said Wednesday.

He was commenting on a reported statement Tuesday by Al Price, a company director, who said that no offer had been received from the federal government.

Not only did the federal government make an offer, said the official, but the company accepted it.

It was revealed Monday that the federal government cancelled an export permit Dec. 1 for the sale of the $2-million research submarine to Russia.

Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said the permit was cancelled on grounds of Canada's national security after "new information" had been gathered and following consultation with the United States.

Joyce McWilliams, comptroller of International Hydrodynamics, said in Vancouver she planned to phone Ottawa today to see who is making the statements regarding a federal government purchase offer.

"As far as my knowledge goes, we are still under contract to the USSR," she said.

Diocese Will Aid Schools

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The council of the London Roman Catholic diocese voted Wednesday to continue financial assistance to six Catholic high schools in southwestern Ontario, provided they eliminate deficits in their operations.

There had been some doubt the schools would continue operation next year after Premier William Davis's announcement in October that the provincial government would not extend provincial financial support to Roman Catholic schools beyond the present Grade 10 level.

The resolution, approved by the council of clergy and laymen, came from the diocesan senate of priests.

The six schools are F. J. Brennan and Assumption in Windsor, St. Patrick's in Sarnia, St. Anne's in Tecumseh near Windsor, St. Joseph's in St. Thomas and Catholic Central in London.

Marijuana Said Top Cash Crop

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says in an Ottawa dispatch that marijuana is becoming a top cash crop on some Canadian farms.

The newspaper says the yield of the drug cultivated on one acre and "sold at the farm gate can be enough to pay for a new car with a V-8 engine and power options."

But what farmers are growing marijuana is a matter known only to the census taker, who is bound by law not to tell—especially not to tell the RCMP.

The report says farmers in several provinces listed marijuana in the "other-crops" category of their census returns, and listed its sales "in the etcetera category under sources of income for 1970."

Because it is illegal to reveal statistical information from the census, the newspaper adds, figures on such things as the cash yield per acre or total acreage for the country are not available.

32½-hour Week Sought

Hydro Employees Open Talks on Pay Increase

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees opened contract negotiations with Ontario Hydro Wednesday with a demand for an 11-per-cent pay raise in a one-year agreement for the 17,000 Hydro employees.

The wage demand was one of 104 proposed revisions CUPE negotiators suggested for the existing collective agreement which expires March 31.

Wednesday's meeting was a preliminary session to full-scale bargaining which starts in January. The demands, by Local 108, CUPE, ranged from minor language revisions to money and "issues of principle."

Among Glassford's major demands:

—A reduction in the work week to 32½ hours from the present 35 hours for office and technical employes who now earn between $107 and $285 a week. Tradesmen want a 37½-hour week, and now are working a 40-hour week on base rates ranging from $3.63 hourly for laborers to $5.06 for linemen.

—The union wants a "25-and-out" clause in its new contract-retirement after 25 years' service or at age 60 on full pension. It also asks increases in pensions in line with cost-of-living increases.

Hydro officials had no immediate comment on the union demands and the provincially-owned utility has yet to submit its counter-proposals.

Hydro May Become Top User of Natural Gas

CHATHAM (CP) — Ontario Hydro could become the biggest customer of Union Gas Co. if a proposal to fuel two hydro generating plants in southwestern Ontario with natural gas is carried through.

Spokesmen for the two utilities, said conversion to natural gas from coal is being discussed for hydro plants at Windsor and at Courtright, near Sarnia.

Union Gas president, Bruce Wilson, said earlier this week the conversion is being considered by hydro because of cost and because of air pollution caused by the use of coal as a fuel at the plants.

Mr. Wilson said that consumption of natural gas at the plants could reach 20 billion cubic feet by 1972 and 40 billion by 1979, making hydro Union's "largest customer by far."

A hydro spokesman said that only two of four generating units at the Lambton Generating Station at Courtright would be converted to gas consumption and then only on a part-time basis.

He said gas would be used for only about one day a week at Courtright, at times when there was a danger of an inversion causing air pollution in the area.

Pay Dispute Is Settled

MONTREAL (CP) — The overtime/pay dispute that led to a 36-hour provincial police strike last September has been settled, Guy Magnan, president of the Quebec Provincial Police-men's Association, said Wednesday.

About 1,000 policemen worked 22,000 hours overtime during the crisis, making the overtime bill about $200,000.

Mr. Magnan said officers who worked on their days off during the October, 1970, kidnap crisis will receive time-and-a-half payment.

Agreement on the wage dispute between the two parties, giving the QPP a basic salary of $10,471, was announced Monday.

Negotiations have been in progress since Oct. 17.

In late September, the 4,000-man force held a series of study sessions to back demands, leaving the province without QPP protection for 36 hours.

Diet Questions Aid Extended Foreign Authors

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker asked in the Commons Wednesday why the Canada Council is spending $100,000 to import foreign authors to "tell Canadians how to write."

The former Conservative prime minister suggested to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier that the money could be better spent on Canadian authors, perhaps including those in the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

Mr. Pelletier said he will look into the action by the council, which distributes government money to encourage the arts. He was not aware of the specific grant mentioned by Mr. Diefenbaker and, while checking, would also examine whether Mr. Diefenbaker had oversimplified the matter.

Air Canada Has Option To Buy Four Concordes

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has an option to purchase four supersonic Coricorde aircraft of the type which carried French President Georges Pompidou to his meeting with United States President Richard Nixon this week in the Azores.

An Air Canada spokesman said Wednesday the option means only that the airline has bought the right to purchase planes at a certain point in the Concorde production schedule, but this does not commit Air Canada to such purchases.

Claude Taylor, Air Canada vice-president, said recently the high cost of operating planes such as the Concorde, their possible environmental damage and a general economic slowdown in the Western world has left airline executives less than enthusiastic.

He said Air Canada would not operate any supersonic aircraft if there was "appreciable detrimental effect on the environment."

Pharmacists Face Charges

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario College of Pharmacy says charges of unprofessional conduct have been laid against a number of Ottawa pharmacists in connection with Parcost, the Ontario government's low-cost prescription program.

The disclosure, made Wednesday in a news release, did not indicate how many pharmacists were involved but said the charges of "improper conduct in the professional sense" were laid in regard to prescription prices.

Winnipeg Firm Seeks Soviet Sales

ST. BONIFACE, Man. (CP) — A suburban Winnipeg company whose products have already filtered through the Iron Curtain more than once is hoping to crack the large Moscow market soon.

Dennis Herbert, general manager of Spiroll Corp. Ltd. in St. Boniface, said the firm was one of two Canadian companies invited to send machinery to a non-public exhibition in October in Moscow and has a foot in the marketing door already.

The company, founded seven years ago to produce and sell a range of patented machinery for the pre-cast concrete industry, has since acquired two subsidiaries in Britain and made several sales in Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Herbert said selling in the Soviet Union is an immensely complicated and lengthy effort requiring the approval of the money people, the import people and the industry people. An invitation to a non-public exhibition was a sign of near-acceptance.

The machines which Spiroll hopes to sell in Moscow cost about $65,000 to $70,000 each but are normally sold in packages which include support parts and maintenance. By the time the machine is installed and operating, the customer has usually spent about $500,000 including labor.

"The Russians and the Poles are way ahead of us in terms of systems building," he said.

"They have huge and growing populations and are building whole cities on the tundra."

The type of building Spiroll is trying to promote can be assembled quickly with all parts factory produced and no pouring of wet concrete, enabling construction to continue year-round.

The company began with a patent on a machine which produced pre-cast concrete floor sections and by next year expects to have a machine to turn out pre-cast hollow-core wall panels.

Mr. Herbert said more than 95 per cent of Spiroll's production is exported with about 50 per cent of that to United States markets.

However an order from Moscow is not expected for another 12 months.

The bidding:

1 ♥	Dble	Pass	1 NT
2 ♥	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠

Opening lead — seven of hearts.

The Air Force has a slogan: "The difficult we do immediately. The impossible takes a little longer." It would seem from this deal that South was a full-fledged member of the Air Force.

West led a heart. East won with the nine and continued with the A-K. Declarer had to decide whether to ruff the third heart high or low, for he had no way of knowing where the trump queen was located.

South decided to ruff with the ace on the basis that West was more likely to have the greater spade length, including the queen, than East. He then led the ♠10 of trumps, finessing successfully both times. However, when East showed out on the second trump lead, it appeared that West had a gilt-edged trump trick — for he still had the Q-7, while dummy had the lone king.

But declarer, undaunted, managed to do West out of his trump trick. Abandoning further spade leads for the moment, South entered dummy with a diamond, returned a low club, and finessed the jack.

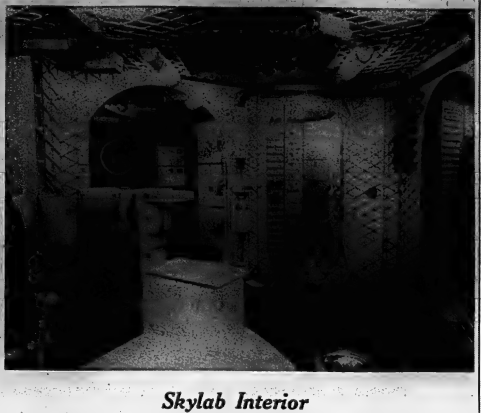
He next cashed the ace of clubs and A-K of diamonds, then exited with a club to East's king.

By this time all hands were reduced to two cards. South had the 9-8 of spades, West the Q-7, and dummy the king of spades and nine of clubs.

East, whose last two cards were hearts, was obliged to lead one. When South ruffed with the eight, West suddenly found that his apparently impregnable Q-7 were completely trapped.

His sure trump trick was absolutely and positively obliterated. Whether he ruffed with the seven or the queen, declarer was certain to make the last two tricks and the contract. South had accomplished the impossible.

Tomorrow: The rebid.



Hampers Need Help

PICTON (Staff) — More than $700 has been donated this season to the Christmas Hamper Appeal launched by the Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society.

These hampers filled with food, clothing and toys are packed and taken to needy families shortly before Christmas.

Hampers are delivered to approximately 75 families and contain $15 to $25 worth of food. Each youngster receives a toy and a clothing item.

Donations for the hamper appeal can be made by contacting Mrs. Dianne Woods or Miss Lou Nelson at the Picton office of the Children's Aid Society or by telephoning 476-2765.

Government Plans to Force Cut in Emissions from Cars

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced proposals Wednesday that would force manufacturers selling cars in Canada to drastically reduce polluting exhaust emissions.

The three offensive substances to be limited are nitrogen oxide, carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons.

Nitrogen oxides would be cut back in two stages.

On Jan. 1, 1973, nitrogen oxide emissions would be limited to 75 per cent of that measured from 1971 vehicles.

On Jan. 1, 1976, the required cutback would be to 10 per cent of current emissions.

Nitrogen oxide, toxic in large concentrations, contributes to the forming of smog.

On Jan. 1, 1975, emissions of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons would be restricted to 10 per cent of current government standards.

Carbon monoxide causes toxic effects at high concentrations by interfering with the oxygen transport in the blood supply.

Hydrocarbons react in a similar way to nitrogen oxides in forming smog.

The announcement was made jointly by Transport Minister Don Jamieson and Environment Minister Jack Davis in a news release.

The proposals would require amendments to the Motor Vehicle Safety Act.

In figures, the proposals would restrict grams of carbon monoxide emitted per mile to 3.4 in 1975 compared with the current limit of 39.

Pitman Doubts Courses Make Good Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — If the taxpayers is going to pay for more highly-qualified teachers, there should be some effort to see that they will provide better teaching, Walter Pitman, former Ontario New Democratic Party deputy leader, said today.

Writing in The Globe and Mail, Mr. Pitman, who was also the NDP's education critic, said that in an effort to upgrade their academic qualifications, many teachers are taking university courses.

But, he added, "the assumption is at least questionable that better teaching can be assured by any kind of university experience."

Mr. Pitman, associate professor of history at Peterborough's Trent University and former president of the Ontario Educational Association, said that often this upgrading is only an attempt by teachers to get university credits which result in higher salaries.

He said school administrators pay a grand to pay for more by teachers "haven't the slightest relevance to their role as teacher and are likely to have a negative effect on their performance as teachers."

"In other words," Mr. Pitman said, "we are receiving the worst of all possible worlds: the possibility of poorer teaching at a higher cost."

Among possible solutions, Mr. Pitman suggests that it should be possible for teachers to carry out their programs of study in such a way that they could relate to community services.

"The most effective way of cutting costs, he continued, "would be the more efficient use of community resources and the inclusion of parent helpers in the classroom. Further, teacher education students pursuing their degrees and teaching certificates could act as teacher aides and teacher assistants while they're at school."

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

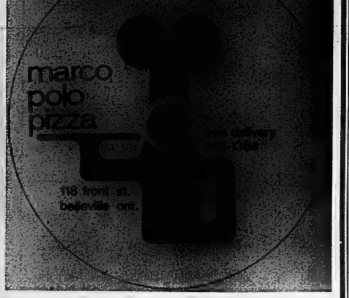
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes, speeds up healing of the injured, irritated tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was greatly and quickly relieved . . . normal reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Amazingly, case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was occurred in cases of long standing, and most impressive of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.



This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured tissue and strengthens it against future trauma. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

Don't suffer needlessly from itching hemorrhoids. Preparation H lubricates and tissue cleansing. Thus painful, it helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Serling Fantasy A Treat

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Serling, with help from Edward G. Robinson and some other good actors, turned out a fine holiday fantasy on Wednesday night's Night Gallery.

Messiah on Mott Street was a story combining Christmas and Hanukah, about a penniless and sick old Jew who is fighting to stay alive for the sake of his beloved little grandson, an orphan. He defied his doctor and then the angel of death, telling his grandson that the shadow the boy saw was the Messiah visiting to bring good news.

The story, essentially a fable about love and goodwill, was climaxed by a miracle.

The fascinating aspect of NBC's Columbo segment of Mystery Movie is the format that lets the viewer in on the crime and the identity of the criminal at the outset. The fun is watching dogged, apologetic Lieut. Columbo as he pulls together the clues leading to his solution.

Peter Falk, working in his usual devious way Wednesday night, made some clever deductions as he solved the murder.

With all the detectives and investigators floating around network channels, it might seem that producing and selling a mystery series would be a fairly simple project. It's not. This Friday night NBC's World Premiere film will be They Call it Murder, a series pilot using the late Erle Stanley Gardner's character, district-attorney Doug Selby, as the leading character.

Producer Cornwell Jackson and his wife, former actress Gail Patrick, have been working on a Doug Selby series since the days when another Gardner project, Perry Mason was in its network hey-day—more than six years.

NDP Skittish

OTTAWA (CP) — In an outstanding act of Christmas charity, the New Democratic Party allowed Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield to steal the show Wednesday at the NDP Christmas party.

The NDP used Mr. Stanfield as the climax to what was already a very, funny—and sometimes risque—skit on King Arthur at the round table.

King Arthur, whose wife —Guinevere—proved to be unfaithful, was played by former NDP leader T. C. Douglas.

The villain turned out to be Sir Lancelot, a reference to Jim Laxer, head of the NDP's radical Waffle caucus.

When King Arthur took Guinevere to task for being an adultress, she rejected him as being a male chauvinist.

Then, in marched Sir Stanfield, who said:

"I want to make one thing perfectly clear. The Conservative party has always stood for help for the helpless, hope for the hopeless and bras for the braless.

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

After 100 years of behind-the scenes charity, Belleville's chapter of the International Order of Odd Fellows is opening its doors to the community.

For the past month, the secret society, which celebrates its local centennial this week has made its new Bay Drive banquet facilities available to partying organizations.

In the past, funds have been raised almost exclusively within the membership but today, requirements have changed. No longer can the 120-man lodge internally support the multitude of programs with which it is involved.

And it is Belleville that will benefit most from the expanded outlook.

Over the past two weeks, the order has played host to Loyalist College and Towers department store, as well as to 256 Christmas party-goers from Simpsons Sears.

Club 81, named after the local IOOF branch number, will cater to as many as 300 people and is ideal for weddings, dances or general meetings. A stage, complete with speaker system, is located at one end of the 2,000-square-foot air conditioned hall while up-to-date bar facilities dominate the other end.

The new building bears little resemblance to its former appearance. Until a year ago, the great halls were festooned with knitting machinery as Bagden Mills rolled out high quality socks.

Now, the main hall has undergone a $30,000 renovation and modern kitchen facilities have been installed. On the same floor is the Odd Fellows' new meeting room, built in a similar style of clean simplicity.

Talk is already under way about expansion of the banquet room sometime next year.

Cooking is done by wives of lodge members or by participants in the Rebekahs, the Odd Fellows' sister organization. The men are responsible for maintenance and any of the heavier chores that might come up.

Odd Fellows bought the building for $50,000 when the mill shifted to Trenton after nearly a dozen years in Belleville. The local chapter had met above Woodley Furniture on Front Street since 1915.

The idea of an IOOF banquet hall is not new to this area. Both Stirling and Picton have similar facilities.

The farthest Odd Fellows ever extended their efforts in the past was to conduct card parties. But a broad range of charitable enterprises, including such diverse concerns as eye research and student visits to the United Nations, have made solicitation of the public dollar a necessity.

In keeping with its motto of friendship, love and truth, the order spends more than $4.2 million each year for relief of members alone. Widowed families and those who are aged receive a large proportion of the funds as do victims in distress during adverse times.

Optical research has been a vital cause for the Odd Fellows. They recently donated $750,000 to the eye institute of John Hopkins University in Baltimore and many members have signed cards pledging their eyes after death.

Not many members seem to know, but one old hand suggests it derives from the initial supporters of the lodge whose origins date back to 1797 in London, England.

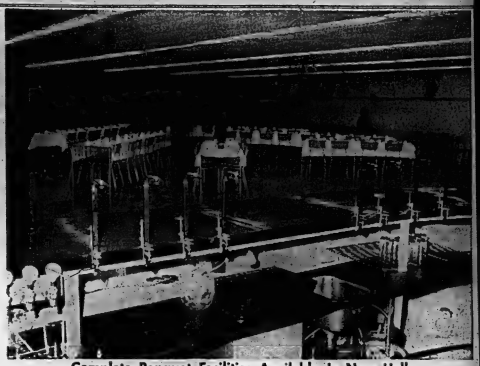
"There were folk who would see a blind man or beggar in the street and help him. In those days, it was considered unusual to do that kind of thing," the veteran recalled.

Out of this group of apparent trend breakers sprang an organization calling itself the Manchester Unity. Thomas Wyldie, an expatriate Englishman, changed the name to Odd Fellows when he came to the United States in the early 19th century.

Lodge 81 was established in Belleville December 18, 1871, in the East Robertson block on Front Street. Its original aims were to provide shelter and jobs for itinerant workers.

Many of the initial members were Front Street merchants, among them Albert L. Geen, an Odd Fellow for more than half a century, whose descendents still operate Geen's drug store. Today the order consists primarily of working men although persons from all walks of life are welcome.

Religion plays an important role in lodge affairs. The entry requirement stipulates that "those who would be members ... believe in a Supreme Being."



For many years, the IOOF maintained a lily-white image, much to the disgust of racial minority groups and many enlightened members. But over the past 15 years, old barriers have been removed, with the result that Indians, Negros, and other races no longer face discrimination.

He also says he can't understand why meetings are held in camera.

"In my 25 years, I've never seen anything that couldn't not be out in the open."

If the banquet hall proves successful, Belleville's Odd Fellows may implement more programs which will bring them into closer contact with the community. The days of secret societies are drawing to a close but 100 years of tradition are hard to turn your back on.

Committee Members Appointed

Wednesday was appointment day in Sidney Township as 13 positions on a variety of committees were filled for the coming year.

Nominated for the second time to represent the township on the Quinte Planning Board were Reeve Jack Bush, the current board chairman, and councillor Reg McCurdy. Mr. Bush will also act as the township's voice in the Lower Trent Conservation Authority.

The Community Centre Board will consist of Hadley Richardson, Glen Myers, Winfield Harder and Bob Ewing.

The Committee of Adjustment remains unchanged with Horace Knight, Harleigh Hamilton, Harold Deller and secretary-treasurer Hugh Lyons reappointed.

No Snow, No Races

PICTON (Staff) — Old man winter's failure to co-operate with the Picton racing club has forced cancellation of weekend snowmobile races scheduled to be run at Picton fairgrounds.

Race chairman Archie Kingma said yesterday that the races planned for Sunday, December 16, will be held one month later on Sunday, January 16.

Oil Contract Goes to Gulf

Sidney Township Wednesday awarded its 1972 fuel oil contract to Gulf Oil of Canada.

Gulf was lowest among eight bidders, asking 3.155 per gallon. Tenders for the contract to heat the township hall were let at the end of November.

Farmers to Be Observers at Labor Council Meetings

Local farmers have decided to become better acquainted with their fellow city workers.

Beginning next month, district farmers, many of them members of the National Farmers Union, will attend meetings of the Quinte District Labor Council where they will sit in as observers.

The purpose of the venture is to initiate a flow of information between the two groups which, in the past, have seldom come in contact. Since the farm union is not, yet incorporated in the Canadian Labor Congress, its members are not eligible to join the labor council. They will be free to make comments and solicit information although they will have no voting rights.

Stanley Graham of Campbellford, field representative for the farmers union, told Tuesday's council meeting that his organization is currently striving for collective bargaining powers.

He also urged council members to boycott products manufactured by Kraft Corporation. He charged the company with exploiting its monopolistic grasp of the dairy industry resulting, he said, in many area farmers being forced to give up their land and head for the city

Commons Debate on Tax Reform Bill Enters Its Final Stages

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons debate on the government tax bill began its three-day dance of death Wednesday.

Opposition members—including Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) and John Skoberg (NDP—Moose Jaw) used their last words to condemn government use of the guillotine rule to end the debate, while Liberal MPs defended the measure.

Meanwhile, to the Senate, a war dance started by angry senators last week continued about the brief period they will have to deal with the bill.

The Senate won't receive the bill until Friday—Dec. 17—but the government wants it through Parliament by Jan. 1.

Senate Opposition Leader Jacques Flynn has said he would move today to adjourn the Senate until Jan. 18, preventing it from dealing with the bill before the new year.

But there are only 19 Conservative senators compared with 66 Liberals, one Independent Liberal, two Independents and one Social Credit and the motion likely will be defeated after brief debate.

It will be decided today is whether the Senate will sit Saturday and silver extra hours to debate the bill.

Liberal senators Tuesday called for a conciliatory approach to government demands and Senator Flynn indicated he would pass the bill when it appears Friday rather than trying to delay it.

Senator Ernest Manning (SC—Alberta) said Wednesday it would be impossible for the Senate to discharge its responsibility on the bill by the year's end.

"If it is to become law, it should be made clear to the Canadian people that it did not receive the meaningful consideration of this House," he said.

"Either the Senate has a meaningful role or it has not. The time has come to find out."

Senator Louis Beaubien (PC—Quebec) said Senator Paul Martin, government Senate leader, should have warned the cabinet the Senate had to have the bill by Dec. 8 if it were to be dealt with this year.

Opposition senators groaned when Senator Sidney Buckwold (L—Saskatchewan) suggested the bill could be given the equivalent of 10 days normal consideration if members were willing to sit morning, noon and night.

Senator Beaubien said members were entitled to make holiday plans in advance, and that the Senate would be reduced to a corporal's guard next week, if the bill were rushed through and only a few senators were allowed to consider it, the Senate would look pretty ridiculous.

In the Commons, Mr. Alexander said the bill was beyond "the immediate mental digestion of any MPs," and incomprehensible to ordinary Canadians.

Mr. Skoberg said Canadians would never understand the bill because debate had been cut short.

But Maurice Foster (L—Algoma) disagreed.

The one million lower-income Canadians who would be removed from the federal income tax roll understood the bill, he said.

So did the 4.7 million Canadians who would pay lower taxes under the bill, and the 800,000 working women who would get child-care allowances.

Mr. Foster also guaranteed that the "tycoon friends of the Tory party" who had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars opposing the bill through full-page newspaper advertisements in recent months understood the bill.

"Some of those people understand that the tax-free ride that they have had is over."

The House was debating an amendment to the bill proposed by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) that would reduce taxes for all taxpayers by $75, except for those who would pay less than $75 in tax under the bill.

Mr. Alexander supported the amendment, saying it would relieve misery for the five million Canadians on or below the poverty line.

Gerard Laprise (SC—Abitibi) proposed an amendment to Mr. Knowles's motion that would have removed the $150 ceiling on employment expenses any employee would be able to deduct from his income for tax purposes under the new legislation.

The change was ruled out of order on procedural grounds.

To Your Good Health

Patient with Bladder Trouble Allergic to Citrus Fruits

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 21 and three years ago was hospitalized for all the symptoms of "chronic cystitis." Urine tests were always negative and the hospital had no luck in finding the cause of this severe inflammation of the bladder. The only explanation was that I must have a low-grade infection that didn't show up in the tests.

Why is it that reputable urologists never suspected that it might be allergic to food? Out of desperation, the foods that cured me me. By process of elimination I found that I could not tolerate, even in small amounts, tomatoes or tomato products, lemon, orange, or grapefruit.

By eliminating them entirely from my diet, I got rid of the trouble Is there any common denominator to these foods that would account for my allergic reaction to them? When I think of all the money I spent on tests, I could scream.—M.M.H.

I certainly can't explain why your urologists didn't suspect allergy; I can't necessarily explain why I miss a significant point now and then, however much as I try to be "perfect." Some urologists may be allergy-minded. Others I know prohibit citrus foods as a routine matter.

In urinary tract, disorders, infection and anatomical defects are by far the most common causes. When they can be totally ruled out, then you have to look for other causes. And I think doctors have to be allergy-minded, because unusual allergies can pop up most unexpectedly at times.

I most certainly will say this: You are to be commended for some astute detective work.

Since all the foods you mention that do contain a bonafide allergic acid—that would appear to be the common ingredient that happens to bother you. (If so, watch out for limes, too.)

But what seems to be so and what actually is so may not always be the same thing. There might be some other common factor I don't know about.

I have one additional comment. Since those foods are the best prodiffic sources of vitamin C, you must guard against leaving yourself lacking in that. You may find that you can tolerate occasional portions of the juices but can't take them every day. Trial and error would be the best answer to that. Or you may find that taking vitamin C in tablet form won't bother you. I suggest trying it.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How long can a person in her early 60s live who has Parkinson's disease but is taking L-dopa? Is this drug really as marvelous as they claim?—N.S.

Annoying as Parkinson's disease is, it is not likely to have any appreciable effect on length of life. L-dopa, once the dosage is properly regulated, is bringing excellent results for something- like 75 per cent of patients. Degree of improvement varies. Some who were unable to work have gone back to their jobs. Some aren't helped. If you have been helped by the L-dop your life expectancy is good perhaps that of any 60-year-older.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been taking allergy shots (desensitization) shots for hay fever every four weeks for two years. I would like to get pregnant this the spring and wonder if it is safe to take these shots in the first months of pregnancy.—Mrs. D.V.L.

Such "shots" are a pollen extract and to the best of my knowledge should not affect the baby in any way.

Room Offered for Retarded

A proposal for shared facilities to accommodate retarded children in the Bancroft area is under consideration by the public and separate school boards in the area.

Hastings - Prince Edward separate school board has offered use of a room in the Bancroft school to the Hastings county board for use by trainable retarded children.

If the facilities available at the Bancroft separate school are adequate for the number of pupils finally enrolled, the classroom will be made available to the Hastings county board at no charge.

FAMILIAR CYCLIST

BLOOMFIELD, Oct. (CP)— In rain or shine, whatever by a weather, D. Sydney Smith can be seen pedalling her bicycle on most days and along the road to and from Bloomfield. She carries everything she needs for her many chores in plastic bags in the front and at the back of her bicycle. She is believed to be the only local resident living in Canada and rises at 4 a.m. to cycle to Bloomfield when she has a grave to dig.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Thursday, December 16

Aries (March 21-April 19). You're pretty sure you're close to wonderful, but it's still up to hear it from someone else for a change. If compliments are rendered, try to show a little modesty.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). With the year soon drawing to a close, it is time you got your finances and accounts in order. Look for professional help to keep a larger share for yourself.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). You'll probably be tickled pink with gratitude you get. Partners have really gone overboard to get the very best. For once, they know what you really want.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Those who have worked their fingers to the bone all year thinking it's useless are due to be repaid in full. Bonuses run into high figures.

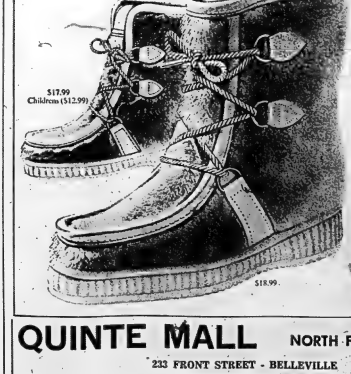
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). The holiday season seems to sneak up on you by surprise every year, providing a last-minute headache over gift giving. Ask the folks at home to help you out.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Regardless of how many times in the past 11 months empers have flared or feelings have been hurt, all is put aside in the next two weeks. Be first to forgive.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Unless you plan to spend the holidays by your lonesome, you'd better get cracking, cleaning up the house, sending out invitations. Don't wait until the last minute.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Budget problems can make this year's shopping more of a challenge. Skill aspects are fine for finding real bargains if you're willing to look for them.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). It's most important that you find the perfect gift for someone special on your list. It may hold a second meaning beyond the holiday wish.



Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It's completely within your power to change your present humdrum outlook to something more appropriate to the season. Don't keep worrying whether you'll receive your fair share.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Surprises you're planning are assured to remain secret for the next nine days. It could be that dear ones aren't expecting anything grand,' so they're not snooping in corners.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). It's not family pleasure that makes your spirits buoyant. It's year's end, but the fine development in your career or public life. The family's quite proud of you.

Today's birthday — A past spell of lean years contributed to your going overboard now that money flows freely into your purse. You could either become a miser or a spendthrift. Either one won't please partners.

Red Lake Folk Fight Tire Stud Ban

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Michael Golster is ready to go to court today with 31 others charged with violating an Ontario ban on studded tires and plead guilty.

He says he's also prepared to go to jail rather than pay a fine, normally $20 and costs, for breaking the provincial law implemented this year barring use of the studs.

"It's a political issue, really," said the 39-year-old general medical practitioner, chairman of a group called the Citizens Committee for Studded Tires.

"We're going to plead guilty to this thing because we don't have the time to fight it as a legal battle."

Dr. Gloster, a native of London, England, who came to this remote northwestern Ontario town 12 years ago, declined to say how many supporters of studded tires would choose jail, if he goes to jail the district of Red Lake will be left with four doctors.

The group says the ban, which went into effect in November across the province, may be suitable for urban southern Ontario roads, but not for northern winters.

In this mining town of 2,200, located 200 miles northeast of Winnipeg, supporters say studded tires are necessary for safety and don't damage snow-packed roads.

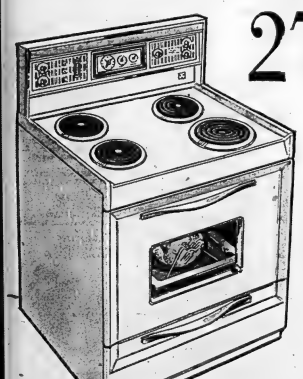
Transport Minister Charles McNaughton told the petitioners by letter no change in the law is expected. He said studs damage the roads and aren't that much help to motorists.



Mr. McNaughton told the legislature this week the Ontario government is investigating use of plastic chains for car tires which may be more effective and less damaging to road surfaces.

Two Women Deny Blackmail Attempts Against Man Murdered in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Two women connected with slain travel agent Robert Neville told the Alberta Supreme Court Wednesday they knew of no attempts to blackmail him as a result of their relationships.

They were testifying at the non-capital murder trial of Keith Elgin Latta, 42, of Kingston. The Queen's University law professor was arrested at his home one week after the June 13 shooting in Edmonton of Mr. Neville, 38, a travel agent.

Crown Counsel W. J. Stanton told the court Monday that Latta had told friends on his arrival in Edmonton in June that he had come to help Neville who, he said, was being blackmailed for philandering.

Maria Ban and Valerie Lane were asked by Mr. Stanton whether they had ever been mailed Neville, whether either of them had a grudge against him, or whether they had known of a blackmail attempt by anyone else.

Both replied "no" to each question.

Both said they had had sexual relationships with Mr. Neville.

Mrs. Neville told the court she had been aware of other women in her husband's life and at one point in 1969 had filed for divorce as a result of her knowledge.

However, "we came back together . . . he was a fine husband and father."

Mrs. Neville also testified that as far as she knew there were no debentures owing against her husband's business, Neville World Travel Services Ltd., and that the business was financially sound.

Mr. Stanton told court Monday that Neville and Latta had been partners in the agency but the accused had sold his shares and had been paid for them by last April.

The partnership, he said, included a $37,500 life insurance policy taken out by each on the other's life. The policies were identical except that the one covering Neville contained a double-indemnity clause calling for payment of $75,000 if Neville died an unnatural death.

Testimony from Crown witnesses Tuesday said that Latta and Neville had dissolved their partnership early in 1971.

In Tuesday's testimony, H. K. Scragg, manager of a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in Kingston, testified that Latta approached him on June 17 to establish credit in the event that he might need a loan later in the month.

He said possible security on the loan would have been an insurance policy on Neville's life.

Neville's body was found on a Sunday, hours after he was shot at the travel agency in downtown Edmonton.

Witnesses testified Tuesday that a key found near the body opened a locker in the city bus station.

In the locker were two items bearing Latta's fingerprints: A [illegible] section and a road map of Italy, witnesses said.

Other items included a quantity of ammunition for a .32-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver, an Italian-English dictionary and two newspaper clippings with pictures of Neville circled in ink.

Crown's last witness of the day was Earl McCullough, a [illegible] police detective, who [illegible] court he had searched both Latta's home and office in Kingston.

A corporate seal for Neville World Travel Services Ltd. was entered as an exhibit after the [illegible] it from Latta's home in June.

Future of Family Farm at Stake In Egg Inquiry Says Kent Brief

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The recommendations of a one-man Ontario inquiry into egg marketing could determine the future of the family farm, a brief to the inquiry said Wednesday.

The Kent County committee of the Ontario Egg and Fowl Marketing Board presented its brief on the first day of hearings by district court Judge James F. W. Ross of Thunder Bay. Judge Ross was appointed by the cabinet Sept. 19 to investigate the egg industry.

"We believe that quotas, rather than help the small- or medium-size egg producer, would actually lock him in a production situation that would eventually become untenable," the brief said.

It recommended the egg and fowl marketing board "stop promoting quotas and spend a comparable amount of effort, persistence and research toward improving the pricing and marketing structures. . . ."

Egg producers from Lambton County told Judge Ross a vote conducted in November showed the majority of producers favored production controls, inclusion of Ontario in a national marketing plan, power for the Ontario marketing board to set prices and some form of protection for small producers.

Judge Ross is to hear about 40 submissions by Friday, when the session here ends.

Second Chance for Draft Evaders Called Political Dodge

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation before the United States Senate that would, in effect, give American draft dodgers a second chance was labelled a "political football" Wednesday by a spokesman for the Canadian Council of Churches.

Rev. Robert Gardiner, co-ordinator of a council program to assist American draft evaders and deserters coming to Canada, predicted it would prove unacceptable to a vast majority of those it could affect.

Introduced Tuesday by Republican Senator Robert Taft Jr., of Ohio, the bill would allow evaders to return to the U.S. without fear of prosecution if they agree to serve three years, either in the armed forces, as aides in hospitals or in a government program to improve cities.

"It really has nothing to do with young Americans in Canada," said Mr. Gardiner. "They are involved, yes. But it's a political football . . . an attempt to diffuse the issue with the approach of the presidential election next year."

He said the bill would do "absolutely nothing" for deserters who make up what he termed a significant proportion of Americans who have come to Canada to escape military service.

Senator Taft estimated there were 70,000 evaders in Canada, but Mr. Gardiner put the figure at about 45,000.

However, Dee Knight, editor of Amex, a Toronto magazine for American exiles, said the total is between 70,000 and 100,000.

Both Mr. Gardiner and Mr. Knight predicted the bill would be viewed as "insulting" by most exiles in Canada.

"It comes nowhere near dealing with the reasons why they came here in the first place. The Vietnam war has not ended," said Mr. Gardiner, a former Anglican chaplain at Michigan State University.

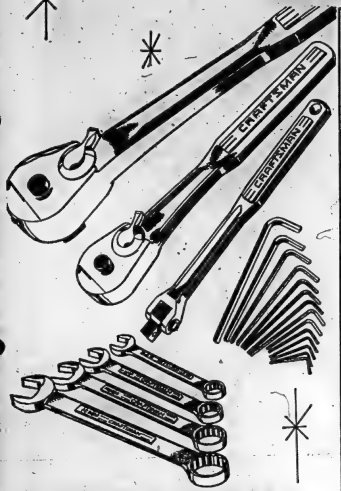
Mr. Knight, a draft dodger who came to Canada 3½ years ago from San Francisco, estimated deserters now make up nearly half of the exile population.

He said amnesty for draft dodgers would in many cases mean "freedom to visit grandparents," but "deserters, the people who need this most, aren't getting it."

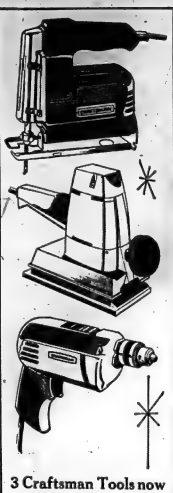
Prisoner of Chinese 'Alone So Long'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An army civilian employee who spent nearly half of his 19 years in a Communist Chinese prison in solitar: said Wednesday he was generally well treated by his captor: but that the loneli ness had left its mark.

"I was alone so long," said Richard G. Fecteau, 43, of Lynn, Mass., his voice almost inaudible at times, as he met with reporters for the first time since his release Monday in Hong Kong.



"I was in solitary the first three years and the last five or six years," in a prison in Peking, Chinese capital.



A doctor described Fecteau as withdrawn and cautious. Otherwise, he appeared in good health.

Mary Ann Harbert, 25, of Palo Alto, Calif., a prisoner for more than three years, arrived at the same time as Fecteau. Physical examinations of both were completed at the nearby Valley Forge Medical Centre to which they were brought Tuesday after a 27-hour flight from Hong Kong.

Maj. Allen Yanoff, staff physician, said both appeared somewhat tired but "otherwise were essentially normal."

Pakistan Accepts Indian Ceasefire

Yahya Khan's Men Told to Hold Fire

From AP-REUTER

President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan of Pakistan accepted the Indian proposal for a ceasefire on the western front today, ending the 14-day war on the Asian subcontinent.

Radio Pakistan said Yahya ordered Pakistani forces to stop fighting at 8 p.m. — 9:30 EST — when a unilateral Indian ceasefire in the west was to begin.

"I am accepting the Indian proposal for a ceasefire in the interest of peace and stability in the subcontinent," Yahya said.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi had announced the ceasefire Thursday after Pakistan's army in East Pakistan, 1,000 miles from the western front, surrendered unconditionally.

In a speech today, Mrs. Gandhi told the Pakistani government to accept the ceasefire offer "or the consequences will rest squarely on the rulers of Pakistan."

The ceasefire acceptance came in the wake of the biggest tank battle of the brief war in West Pakistan.

The tank engagement was in the Sailkot sector where West Pakistan territory drives a wedge between the Indian states of Kashmir and Punjab.

There was some fighting still going on in East Pakistan despite the capitulation of the East Pakistani army, in a formal surrender at Dacca Thursday.

The commander of India's eastern front said some Pakistani soldiers in outlying areas apparently had not received instructions from their headquarters in Dacca and were still fighting. These included units at Khulna and near Sylhet and Comilla, said Lt.-Gen. J. S. Aurora.

Berlin Pact Signed

"First I'd like a list showing manufacturers suggested retail prices!"

BONN (Reuter) — East and West Germany formally signed a transit agreement today regulating access to Berlin from the West.

It is the first major political agreement between the two states since the Second World War and is designed to end a perennial source of international friction in the divided country.

The agreement, thrashed out in protracted bargaining over the last 13 months, was signed in the Palais Schaumburg, Chancellor Willy Brandt's official residence, by the two principal negotiators, State Secretary Egon Bahr, for West Germany, and State Secretary Michael Kohl, for East Germany.

It guarantees unimpeded transit for travellers and freight traffic across Communist East German territory between West Germany and isolated, Allied-held West Berlin.

The agreements will not take full effect until the Big Four powers sign a final protocol. The Soviet Union is expected to withhold its signature until the West German Bundestag ratifies the Soviet-West German non-aggression treaty in the spring.

Euromart Link Is Seen For Canada

LONDON (CP) — The Evening Standard says active consideration is being given to associating Canada closely with the European Common Market once Britain becomes a member.

Columnist Sam White, in a Paris dispatch, says he wouldn't be surprised if this suggestion is discussed by Prime Minister Heath and Prime Minister Trudeau in their Ottawa meeting today.

"It would be a way, in short, of calling in a part of the new world — and one which is most resonce to U.S. economic domination — to strengthen the balance of the world," he writes.

While Canada could not become a member of the European partnership, the link might be a form of associate membership such as that of France's former colonies in Africa.

White suggests that French backing of Canadian association would be politically useful to Trudeau and would take a lot of steam out of French Canadian separatism."

Bangla Desh Sets up Mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — The infant nation of Bangla Desh has set up a hopeful diplomatic mission to the United States in makeshift offices above a fabric store in downtown Washington.

No national emblem marks the doorway, the elevator ride is shaky and the cellophane tape that tacks the new flag to the wall speaks of impermanence.

But the diplomats who man the Bangla Desh mission look for the day when they will have an embassy to call home, signifying recognition as a nation by the United States.

Benson Gives Opinion

Progress on Trade Side Needed at Money Talks

WASHINGTON (CP) — The finance ministers and central bank governors from the 10 richest Western nations started concerted efforts today to settle world currency values, with Canada's Finance Minister E. J. Benson stressing beforehand that movement on trade questions also is essential.

Benson told reporters before entering the conference at the Smithsonian Institution that he couldn't indicate whether he thought the Group of Ten could settle their monetary differences today or Saturday at the meeting.

"There will have to be some movement on the trade side," he said, referring particularly to United States negotiations with Japan and the Common Market countries over trade barriers to American exports.

But he insisted that Canada-U.S. trade differences are "more symbolic than major" and a settlement of currency questions does not depend on resolving trade issues between the two countries.

Benson said Canada will be maintaining its previous position that the Canadian dollar must be allowed to float on foreign exchange markets until currency values settle down after the changes in value being worked out now by the Group of Ten.

A prolonged stalemate on the vexing question of exchange rates apparently was cracked at the last Group of Ten meeting in Rome. President Nixon gave the talks a further push when he agreed, in talks with French President Georges Pompidou, to a devaluation of the American dollar.

But when French officials suggested later that the meetings here could result not only in currency agreement but also removal of the 10-per-cent American import surcharge, U.S. treasury department officials quickly stepped in.

They announced that, as far as the United States is concerned, an agreement on monetary exchange rates would only be part of a total package the U.S. is seeking. Other parts of the package are removal of barriers to American exports and a sharing of defence costs.

While other delegations indicated varying degrees of hopefulness about the talks—scheduled to last two days—the Japanese came down safely in the middle. Finance Minister Mikio Mizuta told reporters there is about a 50-50 chance for agreement on new currency values.

Today's meeting was preceded by detailed bilateral negotiations between U.S. officials and their counterparts from several other nations, including Canada.

Senior officials from the trade, finance and external affairs departments in Ottawa met privately at the state department with American negotiators for what a Canadian source described later as "extremely technical" discussions about Canada-U.S. problems.

Part of a continuing exchange between the two countries, the talks are believed to have touched on such matters as the automotive agreement, defence spending and tourist allowances —all questions the U.S. has said it wants to negotiate more favorable treatment from Canada.

In their vigorous efforts to put right a distorted balance-of-payments picture, U.S. officials are counting on both multilateral agreements and bilateral concessions from their trading partners to improve the position of American exports on world markets.

Bilaterial talks are expected to continue on several fronts as the finance ministers and governors of the central banks meet to discuss currency questions at the Smithsonian Institution.

Vengeance Feared

Captive Pakistanis Allowed to Keep Arms

CALCUTTA (AP) — The commander of India's eastern front said today that defeated Pakistani soldiers are being permitted to keep their weapons until they are safely in prisoner of war camps because of fear that the vengeful Bengalis "would butcher them."

"The bitterness in Dacca—you have to see it to believe it," Lt.-Gen. Jagir Singh Aurora told reporters.

Aurora, who Thursday accepted the surrender of Pakistani forces in East Pakistan to the cheers of Bengali throngs, said he expects all Pakistani troops to be disarmed within two days.

Movement of prisoners of war from camps in East Pakistan to India will begin "as soon as it can."

Indian soldiers would remain in East Pakistan to help repatriate non-Bengalis, re-establish law and order and communication lines and help return refugees from India to their homes, but most would withdraw within weeks.

The bitterness of the combat was reflected in Aurora's comment on reports of atrocities committed on civilians by Pakistani soldiers.

"The number of cases that have been brought out indicates they shot a certain number of people before withdrawing," he said.

"The treatment of women by Pakistani regulars was extremely bad—I've been places where we found women inside bunkers."

At the surrender, the Pakistanis still had enough ammunition to have fought on for a long time, Aurora said, "but they had lost mobility entirely."

Fleeing Gunmen Kill Constable Tagging Car

MONTREAL (CP) — A veteran motorcycle policeman, who was putting a routine parking ticket on a car, was shot and killed Thursday night by three fleeing gunmen who robbed a department store and then stopped a sack containing $50,000.

Constable Jean-Guy Sabourin, 35, was caught in a burst of machine-gun fire by the trio as they ran from the Robert Simpson Co. department store at St. Catherine and Metcalfe streets. He died later in hospital from two bullet wounds near his heart, the seventh Montreal policeman to be wounded by gunfire in the last three months and the second to die.

Police said the bandits entered the store after it closed at 9 p.m., apparently using keys they had for the outside doors. Inside they held up accounts office employees who were sorting out the night's receipts and fled down several flights of stairs with the money in a canvas sack.

A company spokesman said about $50,000 was in the sack but the trio left it behind after the shooting and it has been recovered.

The three gunmen escaped in a car later found in a nearby lane. Police were seeking the trio and possibly a fourth man who drove the getaway car.

Quinte Dentists Plan Clinic Matching Denturists' Prices

Quinte area dentists will go along with the Ontario Dental Society plan to open 10 clinics across the province to provide dentures at costs comparable to those charged by denturists.

Dr. H. A. Elliot, president of the Bay of Quinte Dental Society, said the members of his organization will set up a clinic to provide low cost dentures for "those who require or request this type of service."

Reacting to illegal operations by denturists, the Ontario Dental Society announced Thursday it will open clinics at Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, Oshawa, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Sudbury, Peterborough, Sarnia and Belleville.

The announcement said the clinics are scheduled to be operating by the end of February, and will expand eventually into a province-wide network.

However, said Dr. Elliot, because the Bay of Quinte Society is small compared to the others and may have difficulty finding staff, he doubts its clinic will be in operation by the end of February.

Dr. Elliot said he knows of no "open publicized denture clinics" in the Bay of Quinte area.

One is believed to be in operation in Napanee.

Conservation Authority To Retain Property

The Moira River Conservation Authority has had a change of thought about disposing of isolated blocks of reforestland land in the authority.

From the time of the authority's formation back in 1947 until 1967, the chief function of the board was to purchase marginal and sub-marginal land for reforestation purposes.

But during the past four years the price of land has increased beyond its value for forestry and no reforestation land has been purchased in the past four years.

During the active period more than 18,000 acres of reforestation land had been purchased — some of it in isolated areas where management programs posed something of a problem.

As a result, there was brought back some of the isolated tracts could be sold and during the summer approximately 4,000 acres of such lands were inspected.

The object of the inspections was to determine the suitability or usefulness of the board's long-term objectives.

These include proper land management as a basis for public information and education, increasing use of land for a variety of recreational purposes and providing a more suitable environment for fish and wildlife.

Carl Thompson, reading the forest advisory board report, said that during last summer's inspection, the committee found that the isolated reforestation tracts were serving a useful purpose outside that of growing trees.

He said these public lands were being used for hiking, snowmobiling and for hunting.

As a result the committee felt that all properties should be retained by the authority regardless of their isolation.

Forestry officer William Hiscock of Tweed did not quite agree that all the land should be retained in perpetuity.

This should be the case, he said, only if the land fills a need.

Rabies Suspected In Rawdon Man

A Rawdon township man must take anti-rabies treatment after the disease was identified in a cat — the second such claimed incident involving humans and rabid animals in he Quinte district in recent weeks.

Dr. C. R. Lesk, public health officer for Hastings and Prince Edward counties said the man had been scratched earlier this week when attacked by the cat.

Federal veterinary laboratory tests revealed the animal was rabid and this means the man must undergo a 14-day injection treatment, usually considered an uncomfortable process.

No identities or place names were given by the health official.

However, Dr. Lesk said, the incident occurred on a farm where — six weeks ago — a rabid fox, attacking chickens, was killed by the farmer's dog. The dog is still under quarantine. How the cat received the disease has not been ascertained.

About the same time, two children in Prince Edward county were placed on anti-rabies treatment after they were feared bitten by a rabid dog.

At that time, Dr. Lesk issued a general warning to pet owners to keep animals from running at large since colder weather will force wild, rabies-carrying animals closer to inhabited areas.

Bus and Car Meet

At approximately 8.15 a.m. today, this school bus and car met at the corner of Dundas Street and Church Streets. The car owned by a Montreal rental firm, was turning right on Dundas when it came in collision with the left rear wheel of the bus. Neither students, bus driver nor automobile driver have been reported injured.

Authority, Ontario Compromise on Dam

Moira River Conservation Authority consulting engineers and engineers from the conservation branch of the Ontario Department of Energy and Resources have struck a compromise on proposals for an ice control dam in the Moira River at Belleville.

Two years ago authority consulting engineers chose the old Lott dam site near the Belleville Creameries and a scale model was constructed at Queen's University to test its performance.

But conservation branch engineers were not entirely satisfied and suggested that the old city quarry site north of College Street should be considered for possible dual ice control structures — one at the quarry and the other at the Lott dam site.

Yesterday at the December full authority meeting at Campbellton, it was learned that department engineers were now recommending the Lott site — but with the addition of river bank dikes to increase the discharge capacity.

Keith Lathem, authority consulting engineer, said he did not know full details of the department recommendation. These were included in a covering letter but have not yet been received by the authority.

Plans call for engineering and land acquisition for the $700,000 project to be carried out this year with an item of $255,000 being included in the 1972 budget for the two items.

Seventy-five per cent of the $255,000 would be covered by a provincial grant with Belleville's share as the chief benefitting municipality paying 22½ per cent and the authority 2½ per cent.

The authority will later examine the compromise dam proposal and make a recommendation.

Total authority budget, as recommended to the 1972 board, calls for an expenditure of $372,000 of which $274,995 would be covered by grant, $70,725 by the chief benefitting municipalities, and $28,000 through local levy.

The levy of $28,000 for a member for general authority expenditures is $2,000 more than last year.

Just over half of the total local levy, or $15,179.58 would be paid by Belleville, with the Thurlow levy being $4,061, that of Hungerford, $1,672 and Sidney $1,691.

The 14 other member municipalities would make up the balance of the local levy with individual municipal payments ranging down to $100, depending on the amount of their assessment within the watershed.

Cambridge Adds Mall Property

Local realtor Douglas Grant said today that the sale of 13.35 acres of property adjacent to Highway 401 and immediately to the west of the Quinte Mall had been completed.

The property, formerly owned by the Boyd family, has a frontage of 1,225 feet along Highway 401 with a depth of 490 feet and extends from the present mall property to Lemoine Street.

Purchase of the latest block of land brings to about 69 acres the property now owned by Cambridge of which 26 acres is taken up in the new mall. Some months ago Cambridge purchased 30 acres on both sides of Bell Blvd., from North Belleville Realty, which also has sold about 40 acres to New York interests.

Mr. Grant said one of the reasons for the most recent purchase by Cambridge Leaseholds was to allow clearing away of cedars and other underbrush which now hinders the view of the Mall from eastbound travellers on the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway.

Lorne McDougall, one of the directors of North Belleville Realty, said the New York buyer of the 40 acres west of Lemoine Street, has provide an option to purchase as a long term investment.

Mr. McDougall said as far as he knew the New York purchaser had no immediate plans for development of the 40 acres.

City council has given approval for the early extension of Bell Blvd. west to Sidney Street, and construction of the roadway will in all probability speed further development in the area.

The immediate benefit of the Bell Blvd. extension, however, will be to provide an entrance from Sidney Street to the Quinte Mall.

Conservationist:

Brush Wolves Deer Chasers

Lands and Forests Department conzention that brush wolves or coyotes don't chase deer was questioned at Cannifton yesterday by the Richmond township representative on the Moira River Conservation Authority.

In answer to an earlier comment from W. F. Cheshire game management officer with the department at Tweed at a full authority meeting that it was roving dogs, not wolves which were responsible for the big majority of deer kills, Carl Richmond said he was sick and tired of hearing that dogs were to blame.

He said he had seen coyotes chasing deer and last fall had heard them every night for a month".

He said this had been in areas where there was no human habitation and consequently there would be no dogs.

The game officer's comment about dogs chasing deer was made in response to a general query on the success of this year's deer hunt.

Mr. Cheshire said hunt had been poorer than usual and said the deer population might be improved if there were fewer dogs running at large.

"It would help in game management if the dog by-laws (keeping dogs tied) were enforced; especially in late winter," the game officer said.

Mr. Cheshire said timber wolves did chase deer and hunted in packs but said this species was few in number in this district.

Brush wolves or coyotes were more numerous but the game officer said they hunted alone and did not chase deer.

When Mr. Richmond said he had seen coyotes chasing deer, Mr. Cheshire said he would very much like to have had the occurrence verified.

Arrested were William James Bowers, 21, James Sheldon Zebedee, 20, and Robert Thomas Hunter, 17, all of RR 5, Trenton and Randal Gary Trites, 19, of 13 B Mill Street, Stirling.

Red Cross Program Growing

Red Cross water safety programs now under way are proving to be a rousing success. And the prospects for the immediate future look even brighter.

More than 300 persons are enrolled in weekly classes being conducted at Type Model by the Kiwanis Club and the Belleville branch of the Red Cross. In addition, examinations for the instruction program currently in progress at the YMCA are drawing to a close.

Water safety will also receive a boost when the new swimming pool at the Ontario School for the Deaf opens shortly.

The December meeting of the Red Cross also heard Cecil Heard, chairman of the blood donor's service, announce that the first clinic of 1972 will be held Thursday, Jan. 20, in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall.

Bata Joins Select Few

Thomas J. Bata, the man who founded the Quinte district's most dramatic industrial venture of its time — and still probably the biggest area industry — has been named a Companion of the Order of Canada.

Mr. Bata, head of various Bata Shoe companies around the world, was among 12 prominent Canadians whose appointments to the order were announced today.

As a young man in his early twenties he fell heir to the Bata enterprises founded in Czechoslovakia by his father.

In 1938, he came to Canada, an industrialist of 24, and superintended the building of the Bata Shoe plant and its industrial village of Batawa on the west bank of the Trent River near Frankford.

Now 57, Mr. Bata lives at Don Mills, but makes regular visits to the Batawa plant and community.

As a new member of the Order, he is among such Canadians as Robert A. Ford, ambassador to Russia, and composer Harry Somers.

Gov.-General Roland Michener, whose office announced the names, will make the investitures at a later date.

Companions of the Order of Canada are picked for "outstanding service or the highest degree, especially service to Canada or to humanity at large."

City Tour for Northern Students

Intelligencer official guide Mrs. Beverley Lewis explains how type is set from automatic punched tape, to fifty students and their teachers from Coe Hill and Gilmour. The youngsters, whom their principal explains are somewhat isolated, take annual field trips to large centres. In Belleville, they were officially welcomed at city hall. They toured OSD, the new Quinte Mall, The Intelligencer, Hastings County buildings and the Hastings County Museum.

Week-long Carnival Planned

Plans for the coming Belleville Winter Carnival are still flexible, and in basic planning stages, but it has been decided by the executive committee, "the general format of the event will remain the same as last year."

A major change for this year's carnival will be the three - day extension. Last year's carnival began with the crowning of the Queen on Thursday night. The same program will be held on Monday night this year, to kick off a full week of activity.

Because of this extension, the framework of the carnival executive was modified so the work load could be spread a little more evenly.

This year, each day is taken care of by a separate club or organization. A representative of each of the groups attends the meetings of the committee, giving reports on the program as it grows for their particular day.

A suggestion made during last night's meeting was to contact other cities across the province and possibly Quebec, asking for information on their winter carnivals.

Attractions which proved popular last year, and to be repeated this year include the Klondike-Monte Carlo Night for those over 18, the annual game between the AN and AF and the Canadian Legion, pancake breakfast and a Klondike Ball.

Area high schools have also been asked to form committees for the type of competition they would like to hold in their schools in conjunction with the carnival.

After in-school competitions the winners would reappear during carnival week to compete for the over-all winner.

"Last year, the program was not as successful as it might have been because the organization work was left until too late," said Mr. Hoskins.

The committee may also have found a way to beat their insurance package, and allow snowmobile races, or sorts, during the carnival.

Instead of racing against each other, the machines will be racing against the clock.

"This way the sport will be safer, and the entire family should be able to participate," said a spokesman for the committee handling the machines.

An added attraction of the week this year will be the presentation of the Art Black Memorial Trophy.

Again this year, the carnival will be selling buttons and toques. These are on order and should be going on sale shortly.

Moira Music Night December 20

Moira Secondary School will present its annual music night Dec. 20 at 7:30 p.m. in the school's auditorium.

Both the senior and junior band under teacher director Ronald Mason will perform. In addition, a string orchestra, stage bands and a rock group made up of band members, will present selections.

This year, for the first time, an elementary school choir will sing. The pupils are selected from choirs at Harry J. Clarke, Bayview and Douglas R. Atkins Schools.

Coe Hill Students Visitors in Belleville

A Coe Hill public school project Wednesday described in-misled educational opportunities for students in northern parts of Hastings County as "difficult."

Field trips and excursions are limited to small town facilities and nature observations.

The solution to this problem? If the facilities aren't near at hand, take the youngsters to a place where they can be found.

And that is exactly what Eldon Gray, principal of Limerick Public School in Gilmour, did yesterday.

Mr. Gray, a group of teachers and adults and 47 students from his and the Gilmour Public School, visited various sites in Belleville as part of their geography environment studies. Each year at this time, the schools select a community to visit which will afford them an opportunity to study first-hand, areas of interest.

City hall laid out the red carpet when Alderman Arthur Keegan presented the students with a visitors' scroll. A teacher had contacted Mayor J. Russell Scott some time ago, and it was through his efforts that the official welcome was made.

The youngsters also toured Ontario School for the Deaf, the new Quinte Mall, where they lunched. The Intelligencer, the hospital's dialysis unit, Hastings County buildings and the Hastings County Museum.

"Distance is a real problem for us," Mr. Gray explained. "These excursions are a real treat for the children. We do it at this time of year, combining it with Christmas so they can see the lighting," he said.

Past tours have included sites in Peterborough and Toronto — notably the Ontario Science Centre.

In all cases, the youngsters ranging in age from eight to 11 years, return to school and prepare projects, maps, and papers on what they have seen.

Winter Workers Brighten Schools

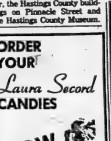
Local schools should be considerably brighter next spring as the result of government winter incentive programs.

Both the separate and public school boards are spending their grants chiefly on painting school buildings.

Under the Provincial-Municipal Employment Incentive Program, boards of education are entitled to grants to pay labor cost, on a small percentage allowed for fringe benefits and materials.

Most of the work by both boards has already started.

The Hastings - Prince Edward separate school board received $5,389 and may get more under further local and provincial winter works programs.



The Hastings county board of education will receive about $31,158. It will spend the money on relief conditions to cover those odd-job, seasonal work due to the heavy community use of schools, fire safety improvements and painting.

Indian Victory

From a military standpoint India's triumph in Pakistan has been a classic victory. The reports are that the Pakistanis in the eastern capital of Dacca have surrendered and this has come about as much from the military expertise of the Indians as from their superiority of numbers and equipment.

India has achieved its principal objective of giving effect to the election victory of a majority in East Pakistan seeking independence, under the national name of Bangla Desh, and which had been denied the people by a repressive central government in West Pakistan.

By driving into India also has made it possible for several million Pakistani refugees on its soil to return to their homes, thus alleviating what had promised to be a catastrophic drain on the civil resources of India, always strained at the best of times.

This was the key to the whole confrontation. India could not tolerate further the growing flood of humanity from across the border. Such aid as it had extended to these people clearly could not have been maintained indefinitely.

If the refugee problem afforded also an element of excuse to revive old hatreds and go to war with Pakistan for nationalistic reasons these can only have been incidental to the overriding need to end the repression in East Pakistan and make it a fit place for its people to live.

For these reasons it is difficult to understand the attitude of the United States. By its hostility toward India Washington has succeeded in doing perhaps irreparable damage to its relations with that country and opened the way to still closer ties between India and the Soviet Union.

India for its part would do well to be magnanimous in victory. If Bangla Desh can become a viable nation in its own right, and the major part of Pakistan 1,000 miles away to the west also respected for its independence, the best interests of all the peoples of the three sovereign units may then be well served.

An unhappy sidelight of this, as of any such conflict, is the killing of innocent men, women and children. But who knows how many thousands of others would have died anyway of malnutrition had the pre-war situation been allowed to continue?

Hardly BBC!

It came as a shock to hear the word "parliament" pronounced parl-ya-ment in the BBC television series on Elizabeth I. And by none other than Prime Minister Edward Heath, a person in the title role, as well as by some of the male characters. But then Miss Jackson's normal speaking voice, as a recent program about her acting career revealed, is not of the purest Oxford, BBC or whatever. Good actress that she is, she comes close to it in this role, but occasionally she betrays a regional intonation.

Could it be that the word parliament was pronounced with a Balkan flavor those days? If so then we could be wrong, but it certainly is passing strange to hear it pronounced thus. Another word in this vein is 'column' which of course should be pronounced as in 'column and not 'colume.'

Seasonal Switch

Much as we fervently desire no repetition of last year's exasperating winter it does seem strange to be basking in near Spring-like conditions with the winds of March somehow switched to mid-December. But Bing Crosby and Andy Williams have been singing that song and we would not object if we had at least an inch or two of snow before Christmas Day.

Those Lights

Still hitting those red traffic lights in Belleville? Certainly we are, and it makes us wonder if there is no justice, not even a law of averages? There is the programmed machine that was supposed to make things smoother, speed things up, make it possible to have the green light come when we want again it does happen that way, but much too often, it seems, we are sitting fuming at a red light.

Book Corner

The Intelligencer, a young reader has seen fit to inform us, has no book review column. He is wrong. This newspaper each Wednesday publishes a Library Corner column featuring latest acquisitions by the library and brief descriptions of their content.

A Sense of Humor Vital

Tax Reform's Exhausting Progress in Parliament

By FARMER TESSINGTON

OTTAWA — The controversial tax reform legislation is pretty serious stuff, but that did not prevent some members of Parliament from enjoying a few final laughs over it.

The Commons spent an extra three and a half hours pulling through the multitude of clauses and amendments and it was probably just as well that none of the Commons' most noted comedians were able to relieve the tedium of the monotonous voting procedure.

Deputy Speaker Russell Honey, who was presiding over the voting, noted at one point that he was laboring under some difficulty because "there is a little bit of murmur in the background."

"That is the taxpayers," shot back Conservative whip Tom Bell.

Later, during discussion of the best procedure of handling the vote on the massive document, Mr. Bell suggested to Mr. Honey that "as we finish each ten pounds of the bill, would you let us know?"

Newfoundland's Jim McGrath rose on a point of order to object to the procedure taking place which he described as a "farce" and insisted he wanted his objection noted in Hansard.

"We want Walter Gordon back," was Mr. Bell's plaintive cry.

Mr. McGrath pointed out at one stage that it was going to be a long night of voting.

"I wonder if it would be possible for us to vote from our seats?" he asked the chairman.

"How would the Senate debate this? They cannot keep getting up and down," Mr. Speer quickwitted Mr. Bell interjected.

The Liberal's Colin Gibson, who understandably is greedy of with cries of "Hoot, Hoot!" when he rises to speak, protested that it was not right to call the government's action on the bill closure when it was really only a time allocation of debate.

"When I look at this, I am reminded of the phrase 'For whom the bell tolls'," Tory House leader Jed Baldwin replied. "It tells for members opposite, members on this side and all the taxpayers of Canada."

NDP House leader Stan Knowles rose at 7 p.m. on a point of order and said there had been some discussion about taking an hour's break in the voting so MP's could get something to eat.

"If we carry on until the end of the bill without a break we will swamp the dining room. We are keeping people here for endless hours and it would be reasonable to have a short break of about an hour," the gaunt Mr. Knowles pleaded.

Mr. Baldwin rose to take credit for making the suggestion of a break in good faith.

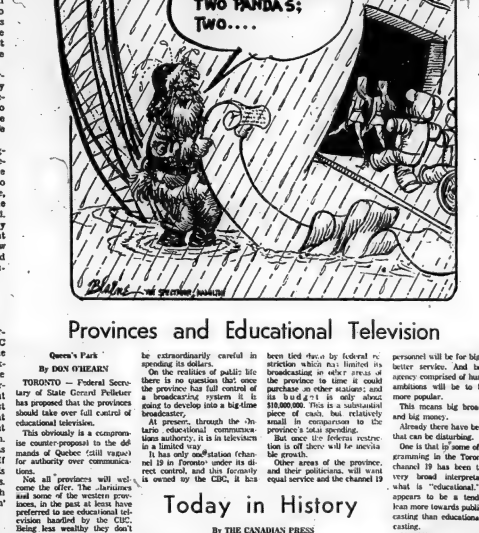
"If the government does not want to do it, that is fine. When family engages in fights, the details are immaterial," he commented.

But Mr. Knowles went hungry for another two and a half hours as government members refused unanimous consent for a dinner break.

Ross Whicher, the Liberal MP from Bruce, got in one of the final orchestral licks in the debate before the voting started. He declared that Parliament has been swinging the left toe long on the tax reform legislation. Then in a considerably more partisan manner, Mr. Whicher declaimed:

"Periodically, the Tories hold a convention and change their name. I remember when they were the party of conservatives party. Then they became the Progressive Conservative party. In view of the way they are acting on this bill, or were a couple of days ago, they should change their name to the Retrogressive Conservative party—looking forward into the past and backward into the future."

But after all the days of debate, all the committee sessions, after the three and a half hours of steady voting, after all the wisecracks, the Hansard reported:



"Mr. Speaker: Mr. Benson moves that the said bill be concurred in. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

"Some Hon. Members: On division.

"Motion agreed to."

All that remained was Communist third reading, passage through a restive Senate and royal assent, and Canadians will have their new tax laws.

Hope you like them!

Provinces and Educational Television

Queen's Park
By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — Federal Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier says he realizes that the provinces should take over full control of educational television.

This obviously is a compromise counter-proposal to the demands of Quebec (still vague) for authority over communications.

Not all provinces will welcome the offer. The Albertans and some of the western provinces, in the past at least have preferred to see educational television handled by the CBC, being less wealthy they don't have the money to tackle it.

This, however, is incidental. The proposal certainly will be welcomed and accepted by Ontario.

It is, in effect, what Premier Davis has been requesting since 1966 when minister of education.

And its acceptability could be either good or bad news for the public.

Good news to those who are looking for more and more television programs to pick from.

But bad news to those who feel that the government must be extraordinarily careful in spending its dollars.

On the realities of public life there is no question that once the province has full control of a broadcasting system it is likely to develop into a big-time broadcaster.

At present, through the Ontario educational communications authority, it is in television in a limited way.

It has only one station (channel 19 in Toronto) under its direct control, and this formerly is owned by the CBC, it has been tied there by federal regulations which restrict its broadcasting to other areas of the province to time it could purchase as other stations; and its budget is only about $18,000,000, a substantial piece of cash, but relatively small in comparison to the province's total spending.

But once the federal restriction is off there will be inevitable growth.

Other areas of the province, and their politicians, will want equal service and the channel 19 personnel will be for bigger and better service. And being an agency comprised of humans its ambitions will be to be ever more popular.

This means big broadcasting and big money.

Already there have been signs that can be disturbing.

One is that in some of its programming in the Toronto area channel 19 has been taking a very broad interpretation of what is "educational." There appears to be a tendency to lean more towards public broadcasting than educational broadcasting.

The OECA itself has been operating in an atmosphere of semi-mystery that is not reassuring. The authority's meetings are not reported in any way, and we in the press bear practically nothing about its activities.

Then in its programming and personnel recruiting there has been some suspicion that the family compact type of operation which has long typified the CBC may be creeping in.

The needy families of Salvation Army Christmas Cheer kettles will make a re-appearance on the streets of Belleville this year.

Since the close of the Red Feather Campaign of the Belleville and District Community Chest, the total has reached $22,182, according to the secretary A. J. Davis.

Old folks in the Hastings County Home are not looking for entertainment and "treats" this Christmas season. On Saturday night the 8th Cub Pack, Belleville, under the supervision of Mrs. Lillian Ashley staged the Christmas Story in a fine performance, later treating the elderly people to candy canes. Last night the Nurses Choir under H. W. Wakefield and Miss Millard gave a splendid choral program.

Deseronto acclaimed Reeve E. M. Roach earlier this month. The remainder of the county futhers are to be elected for another year by virtue of elections for two-year periods held in 1940. Well preserved minute books in the office of County Clerk Erle Denyes tell the story of the last elections held here. Prior to 1940 Upper Canada was divided into districts at that time Hastings was known as the Victoria District and was governed municipally by a commission of 14 men.

The Municipal Act of 1849 established county councils and the Legislative Assembly mended the first warden. The late Edward Parker of Rawdon was the first warden of Hastings, and twelve have succeeded by a long line of illustrious residents.

Is Christmas Meaning Lost?

Thelma Dawn in The War Cry

What has happened to Christmas? I ask you? There is still the baby, the mistletoe and the Christmas trees, but, most are symbolic like so many products of our life. Where are the symbols of the appreciation of nature and the wonderful gift of God's hand?

Gone are the heart gifts. To quote Longfellow "There are gifts that the giver doesn't bear." The warmth of fellowship, the family spirit of love and devotion is often missing.

Let's remove ourselves to the days when the Christmas tree was born in the woods and brought home to be decorated with home-made ornaments and chained popcorn all lovingly fashioned by the children.

Mother used to be in the kitchen making puddings and cakes a month or two before the festive day with each member of the family taking a turn with the stirring. Even the children shared in preparing the Christmas baking. Now it is picked up at the last minute at the supermarket.

Instead of using the orange account to buy expensive gifts which all too often are exchanged after Christmas, the women and girls used and alike, spent loving hours at knitting, crocheting and sewing. They may have used materials better than odd scraps of material, but each stitch was a heart gift for the one who would receive it.

Father used to be in the shed with woodwork and leathercraft.

And the Christmas concert! Each child had memorized Bogan. Each child gave his time and energy to practice, for ice cream and concerts as to who will get the best gift from Santa.

If only we could return to the days with the family hymn sing, the door-to-door caroling, the biblical Christmas story and Dickens 'Christmas Carol read aloud by the family head in turn on the TV, stereo or radio to be entertained.

There is no turning back, but can't we somehow recapture the true meaning of Christmas? Can we not get away from the commercialism?

Strive once more for the values in life of love, compassion, understanding, family fellowship, goodwill towards men and peace on earth. Never lose sight of the fact that it was God's ugsellish gift of the Christ-child that made the first Christmas.

Change in Balance of Power

Nixon Regains Initiative in Dealings with Congress

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — With the Democratic-controlled 92nd Congress within days of the half-way point in its two-year life, it is apparent that President Nixon has seized the offensive in White House dealings with Capitol Hill.

Although a few Democrats protest that the way things have been going simply reflects greater co-operation between these two wings of government, many observers remain skeptical.

Certainly there has been a marked change in the balance of power with the president, cajoling and threatening, bending Congress to his will.

It was not always so. Early in the session the Congress, with an air near arrogance, snubbed the president at every turn. Despite his personal intervention, for instance, Congress rejected a money bill to cover development of the supersonic plane after a lobby had beated battle. Most humiliating of all, the Senate rejected two Nixon nominees—both Southern conservatives—to the United States Supreme Court.

Recently, perhaps encouraged by broad public support for his economic program and his subversion of face-to-face meetings with world leaders, Nixon has been able to demonstrate in his dealings with Congress.

And, rushing to clear business before the month-long Christmas recess, Congress has been unusually amenable to Nixon.

At his bidding, it extended the military draft for two years and provided a $2.4-billion military pay increase he called for. Various attempts to bind him to a set date for total U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam have failed although the Senate could, full of loopholes, was approved.

Congress also approved extension of the president's stand-by authority to enforce wage-price controls at home. Two more nominees—both conservatives—were approved for the Supreme Court and won approval.

When Nixon asked for federal funding for loans to help the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. afloat, he got it—despite a long debate mounted by Democratic critics.

His veto of the new child-care plan, including assistance to poor working mothers, brought forth an avalanche of emotional criticism. But the house could not raise the necessary two-thirds majority to overrule a presidential veto.

Although the pivotal state of White House-Capitol Hill relations gives Nixon the edge approaching the 1972 presidential elections, there is plenty of time and opportunity for Congress to reassert itself in the new year.

It is hard to see how Congress is most productive during the second half, having used much of the first year moving proposed legislation through the committee stages.

Also, the Senate has not given the president a free hand with withdrawal date.

Having failed in earlier attempts, Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and others sought to have such an amendment tacked on to the foreign aid bill. But because of the disarray in the race to conclude elections, they failed to muster the compromise—foreign aid will continue at about its present level until March, when the battle will start again.

In an election-year atmosphere, it could provide a forum in which Congress will seek to reassert its authority. Except for the Moscow mission, President Nixon has highly publicized globe-trotting will be history by then and the Democratic majority might have better luck nudging Congress into the limelight.

Hang in Jane, It's Coming

School's out for Christmas for Jane Connor.

And if she'd gone straight home from school she'd now probably be refrigerating her through some of the balmiest waters on the globe.

Not so for fellow-student David Yuk, also 19, who seems to be basking in the prospects of a snow-filled Christmas holiday.

Jane and David both attend Albert College, which closed school down for its 114th Christmas yesterday — the first city education centre to do so. The public school system is out Dec. 22, Loyalist College Dec. 21).

They were among the 196 Albert 1971-72 enrolment to file away to various destinations — mostly home. .

But for one home is the small but exotic Caribbean island of Anguilla, where temperatures right now would be in the seventies, and she could be swimming and running, she says.

However, she opted to spend Christmas with friends in New York State, and — although armed with suitably heavy clothing, she ponders just what a real, razor-sharp Christmas cold snap would be like.

While current local temperatures have been unseasonably warm, she admits to some trepidation if the mercury plunges.

"Maybe I'll get used to it — but I've never felt real cold before," she says.

She's had her first brush with snow — it snowed for the first time this winter in November — and was, apparently, somewhat surprised.

What she thought it would be was the frosting that congeals around a freezer — "like that stuff in the refrigerator," she explains.

David however — who hails from Hong Kong and is spending Christmas with friends near Tweed — knows what to expect and is hoping for a Christmas heavy with snow.

He'd never seen snow until last year—when he first came to Albert and went to Sault Ste. Marie for Christmas — and his reaction seems to have been ecstatic.

"I was really excited . . . I yelled, screamed and-danced," he laughs.

If he can't have a second White Christmas "I'd be very disappointed."

What I'm waiting for: snow, says David.

She hopes it'll snow again since "I'd like to see some more of it really."

And, after all, she agrees, a Canadian winter is a new experience.

When Winter Comes . . .

There's no snow on the pines, the weather's unseasonably warm, as Albert College closes for Christmas. But David Yuk, here a year from Hong Kong, assures Jane Connor, first - year student from sunny, exotic Anguilla, a Canadian winter can also be something to be enjoyed—when it comes.

Trenton to Seek Grant

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton will be launching an appeal with the provincial government in a bid to receive a grant toward construction of the existing sewage treatment plant here, a grant not available when the plant was built.

Mayor Duncan McDonald confirmed yesterday an attempt would be made to get a rebate for money spent by Trenton on construction of its plant in the late 1950s. The plant was built through municipal debenture financing.

Ontario initiated a program of assisting towns and cities with the financing of treatment centres and trunk sewers after Trenton's plant was completed.

Former Mayor James MacDonald recalls "we had one of the first sewage treatment plants in the province . . . there is a settlement owing to us, we never got our share."

He said that Sarnia had been in the same situation as Trenton, building a plant before today's large scale provincial assistance programs came into effect. He says Sarnia has been compensated in part for its expenses.

The amount that Trenton will be trying to recover may be as much as $125,000, indicated Mr. MacDonald.

Although the town owns the present plant (already in need of expansion) it is operated by the Ontario Water Resources Commission.

Meanwhile, town officials were meeting privately today with OWRC officials to discuss the exact size of expanded treatment facilities planned for the town.

Belleville Is Included In Denture Clinic Plan

The Bay of Quinte Society has 45 dentist-members, practising in Picton, Trenton, Belleville and as far north as Campbellford and above Madoc.

Local dentists will continue to provide "highly characterized dentures" for those who need or request them, said the Belleville dentist.

"We want to retain dentists' supervision in the provision of dentures, because only a dentist can recognize oral diseases, such as cancer," he said. "We intend to provide low cost dentures, but it's a question of what you want to buy, a Chev or a Cadillac."

Association president Dr. L. J. Schiller said a news conference that individual patient care will be reduced by the program but it will offer a set of high - quality upper and lower dentures for a fee averaging $180, compared with the current association - approved fee of $286.

Dr. Schiller said the lower-fee would be similar to the $138 to $200 rates now charged at what he called "illegally - operated, so - called denturist houses" and would be made possible by the high - volume, low - overhead operation expected at the clinics.

"The move is an attempt to curb denturists from selling dentures directly to the public in defiance of the Ontario Dentistry Act which allows only qualified dentists to work on a patient's mouth.

Dr. N. L. Diefenbacher, president of the Royal Colleges of Dental Surgeons of Ontario, said the college was aware of the denturists' houses in the province. He added why a greater effort had not been made to prosecute, he said the college had to have conviction before suspending and did not have adequate investigative staff to deal fully with the situation.

Dr. Diefenbacher disclosed at the press conference the clinics will be operated in part by prosthetic therapists, a new category of dental professionals qualified to see patients and fit dentures under supervision of a fully-trained dentist.

Dr. Diefenbacher said a one-year course to upgrade registered dental technicians to this level had been recommended for the George Brown College of Applied Arts and Technology at Toronto. Dentists themselves would fill the gap until they were available.

He said the clinics would contrast sharply with the "often bad - standard and sometimes worth'ess" services provided by denturists".

Asked whether denturists had not been responsible for formation of the new clinics, Dr. Diefenbacher said the program had been under study but had probably been "accelerated" by the denturists.

Although denturists were condemned by the spokesmen, they refused to cite individual cases where denturist work had been proven inferior to that provided by dentists.

But dentures provided by dentists were "the unsatisfactory ofile," said Dr. Diefenbacher.

Dr. Shiller was asked whether patients were not, in fact, being charged as much as $500 and $600 in some cases for dentures in spite of the $286 association fee.

He said costs varied for patients and he was reluctant to comment but did not feel such prices were being charged.

Figs and Filberts in Yule Dessert

By ALICE DENHOFF

Dried figs are as much a part of the Christmas scene as evergreens, holly and eggnog. It's an old tradition, for in Elizabethan England, port wine, dried figs and nuts, such as filberts, followed the roast goose and plum pudding. Nothing like that these days, today we use California dried figs in tarts, cakes and puddings.

CALIFORNIA CHESS TARTS

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup solid all-vegetable shortening
½ cup water
½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons grated orange peel
½ cup light cream
1 cup toasted filberts, chopped
1 cup California dried figs, chopped
½ cup dark seedless raisins
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine flour and salt in mixing bowl. With pastry blender or 2 knives, cut in shortening until mixture is uniform but coarse. Sprinkle with water, toss with a fork and press dough into a ball. Divide dough in 2 parts.

On lightly floured surface, roll each part into a 5-inch circle. Fit pastry circles into 6-inch tart pans and trim even with edge.

Cream butter and sugar in bowl. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Stir in remaining ingredients. Fill tart shells ⅔ full and bake in 425-degree oven 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes or until firm. Cool, then carefully remove from pans. Makes 12 tarts.

A delicious dessert is:

BAKED FIG PUDDING

½ cup butter or margarine
2 eggs
1 cup unsulphured molasses
2 cups diced California dried figs (about 16 ounces)
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
1½ cups buttermilk
½ cup chopped filberts

Cream butter and sugar in bowl. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Stir in remaining ingredients. Fill tart shells ⅔ full and bake in 425-degree oven 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes or until firm. Cool, then carefully remove from pans. Makes 12 tarts.

A delicious dessert is:

BAKED FIG PUDDING

½ cup butter or margarine
2 eggs
1 cup unsulphured molasses
2 cups diced California dried figs (about 16 ounces)
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
1½ cups buttermilk
½ cup chopped filberts
2 tablespoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon cloves
Brown Sugar Whipped Cream (recipe below).

In large bowl, cream butter; beat in eggs and molasses. Gradually stir in next 4 ingredients. Stir together next 7 ingredients; stir into fig mixture. Pour batter into greased 2½-quart shallow baking dish. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Serve with:

BROWN SUGAR WHIPPED CREAM

1 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons dark brown sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Combine all ingredients in bowl; chill about ½ hour. Whip until soft peaks form.

ORANGE FIG CAKE

¼ cup butter
⅓ cup all-vegetable shortening
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
2 tablespoons grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1¼ cups buttermilk
1 cup dried figs (about 8 ounces)
1 cup chopped toasted filberts
Orange Sauce (recipe below)

In a large bowl, beat together butter, shortening and sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating after each. Add orange peel and vanilla. Sift 3 cups of the flour with baking soda and salt; add alternately with buttermilk to the butter mixture. Mix figs and filberts with the remaining 1 cup flour. Stir into batter. Turn into greased and floured 3-quart bundt pan or 10-inch tube pan. Bake in 350 degree oven 1 hour and 20 minutes, or until cake tests done.

Remove cake from oven and while still in pan, pierce cake all over, using a long skewer. Brush top of cake with some of the Orange Sauce. Let stand 15 minutes. Turn cake out onto serving plate and pierce top and sides with skewer, then brush cake with remaining sauce until all is absorbed. Cool before serving.

ORANGE SAUCE

1 tablespoon grated orange peel
1 cup orange juice
1 cup firmly packed light brown sugar

Combine all ingredients in saucepan and stir over low heat until sugar dissolves.

CALIFORNIA CHESS TARTS, old-fashioned, yes, but rich with figs, toasted filberts, a hint of orange, and raisins.

B andP Women's Club Enjoys Yule Party

An enjoyable time of fun and fellowship had by Mrs. Maude Harrison highlighted the Christmas program of the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club meeting held at the Sun Valley Motel, Monday evening.

Following a tasty turkey dinner, a short business period was conducted by president Lois Brown during which time a report was given by the ways and means committee chairman Miss Ruth MacMillen who expressed thanks to the members for the co-operation in the sale of all the Household Tips books. She also brought forth plans for a fashion show to be held next March with further details to be given later. Plans were also discussed for International night in February.

A fine Christmas program was arranged by Peggy Wood which included the singing of old favorites along with several Christmas carols led by Mrs. Harrison who also provided accordion accompaniment.

Along with a Christmas gift exchange, members also brought appropriate items to be distributed by the Mental Health Association.

Ann Reruns Column Published in 1968

Dear Ann Landers: My son, 16, started to collect Nazi items about three years ago. He has two Nazi flags and German medals all over the place. He also has a German gun and a helmet from the Second World War and other "souvenirs" which he thinks are "nifty." What bothers me most are the pictures on the wall of Adolf Hitler. I am ashamed when people who come to the house see our son's room. I try to keep his door closed, but when he's at home he invites them in.

Some of our friends have asked him why he collects these things and he says he "likes history."

Our son is a good student and has never gotten into any trouble. He has few friends, however, and this worries me. When he was younger he had several pets but he was cruel to them and I said "no more pets." Two years ago he found a stray kitten and begged me to let him keep it. Three days later he killed the kitten by dragging it to death behind his bike.

Do you see any connection in the facts I've outlined in this rambling letter? Please advise. —Worried Mother

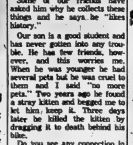
Dear Mother: I certainly do and I urge you to waste no time in getting this boy to a doctor for a psychiatric evaluation. There are several clues which with a lay person can recognize as potential danger signals. Get going and good luck.

Dear Ann Landers: No big deal here, but my wife and I would like an answer. I'm an architectural engineer and my wife and our two children live in a house I designed two years ago. Everything is the way we want it. No guest room.

My parents came to visit a few weeks ago and left very annoyed because they had to sleep on the pull-out bed in the den. Before they said goodbye, they told us we should have put the kids in the den and given them their bedroom.

I say kids should not be uprooted for company. Am I right? I am really not 100 per cent sure, which is why I'm asking. If you say I am wrong we'll move the kids to the den next year. If you say I am right we'll tell my parents they can sleep on the pull-out bed again or go to a hotel. Please advise. —Big Guest Room

Dear N.G.: Sorry—you're wrong. Parents are special people. Any other guest, O.K., but not your mother and dad. What's more, I admire them for keeping it on the line instead of remaining silent and going away hurt.



Write a letter of apology and invite them to come next year. It takes a big person to say: "I was wrong."

Dear Ann Landers: The longer I read your column the more convinced I become that Puck spoke true words when he said: "What fools these mortals be!" When we buy an expensive piece of equipment there is usually a full set of instructions for use and maintenance—along with a few...warnings. Often there is a warranty.

Unfortunately, the human body has no warranty, but a reasonable care it should last quite a while. Yet we see people all around us who poison their bodies with tobacco, pickle their brains with alcohol, eat themselves into grotesque shapes, wear themselves to a frazzle with too little rest. Then they complain because the machinery breaks down.

Why are humans so stupid, Ann Landers?—Alhambra, Cal.

Dear Al: The problem is not stupidity, it's lack of discipline. A great many people find fun in things that are illegal, intoxicating, fattening—and irresistible.

Love Works Miracles in Many Cases

By DORIS CLARK

Dr. J. D. M. Griffin, psychiatrist and general director of the Canadian Mental Health Association, looks back over the 35 years that he has been associated with CMHA.

Terminology has changed from lunacy, to insanity, to the "insanities" (recognizing various types of mental illness), to mental sickness, and now to mental disorders.

There is still stigma to mental illness, but this is lessening. It does not disturb Dr. Griffin that many people who are discharged from mental hospitals must at times return to them.

"I remember," he said, "how important it is to have hospitals to treat the acutely ill, to get them out as soon as possible, and be ready to readmit them if necessary. A hospital is the best place for handling something like a heart attack."

This goes for many mental illnesses as well.

People can get sick mentally or physically, and they can get better. And doctors, social workers, nurses pull together to make them whole again.

* * *

Dear Doris: Mrs. F.. now 72, who was with us as a day worker for many years, was forced to retire due to ill health. When we were in need of an older Homemaker, working on an hourly basis was suggested to Mrs. F. She literally "jumped" at the opportunity to be one of this group again.

We asked her to go to Mr. A, 68, who is under the doctor's care, and will be until his return to hospital is necessary. Mrs. F. has only a block and a half to walk. Mr. A. is in "Seventh, Heaven", as he was very lonely and in need of a properly cooked meal.

Mrs. F.'s latest remark was "I feel as if I am living again as a Visiting Homemaker."

The Visiting Homemakers services which are now operating in most of our larger centres are performing a heaven-sent service; and very often one or more workers on a staff are assigned to elderly persons who can most ably manage their own care, with the lift given by understanding and capable woman.

Often the Homemakers are in the same age range as the person they serve. Often, too, they don't look it.

Dear Doris: A bunch of us took nursing training together, and now one is getting married. We would like to give her a shower, but I know of two other showers which are being given for her, and some of us will be invited to both of them.

I hate to impose on people, who will have given shower gifts already, but I just can't leave anybody out. What do you suggest? — Nursing Pal

Dear Nursing: My Low-Cost No-Cost Shower Ideas are what you need. The idea is not to embarrass your friend with expensive gifts, but to give her an evening with her old pals that she will remember. (This leaflet is available to other readers for 25 cents and a seven-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Clark of Strathroy, Ontario, and the late Mr. E. Clark. The wedding will take place on Saturday, January 15, 1972 at 4.30 a.m. in Eastminster United Church, Belleville.

Teenage Sisters Sell Wood for Fireplaces

EDMONTON (CP) — Three teen-age Edmonton sisters sell wood for fireplaces—and they have formed an official company for the business.

The sisters entered the business, usually reserved for husky males, to overcome summer idleness and to earn money.

Charmaine, 18, Cheryl, 15, and Charlene, 12, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rombough of Edmonton, have formed a limited company and deliver the wood on Saturdays and Sundays.

Charmaine is using her share to help finance university studies in veterinary medicine. Cheryl is a member of the continent-famous Alberta Drum and Bugle Band, is attending high school.

It all began early last summer with the young Rombroughs not—too—happily facing weeks of vacation idleness. In previous summers, they had occupied themselves with odd jobs in their father's heavy-equipment business.

"We wanted to do something on our own during the holidays," Charmaine recalled. "Preferably something we could do as a unit and which would earn us some money."

"Our parents have always been prepared to send us through university but it's expensive and we wanted to help ourselves as much as possible."

The "something" turned up when they learned a man was selling his pulpwood and could ply business.

The father of people who found it difficult to get wood to burn in their fireplaces so we got the notion of taking over the business and serving local "fireplace families," Charmaine said.

The plan was discussed by the family and Mr. Rombough found the idea interesting enough to back it.

"But basically we were on our own," Charmaine added. "Dad agreed to let us use one of his pickup trucks—on weekends only—and a forklift for stacking the logs as shipments came in from the country.

"He advised us, for our own protection, to form a limited company—which we did.

"But Darrell (a 16-year-old brother) and Cheryl and I had to pool our own savings to cover the legal expenses and the initial overhead, such as classified ads . . . and of course, getting the wood in the first place."

Like all businesses, the fuel-supply field is competitive. The Rombroughs charge the going rate, $50 a cord and $35 a half cord, but they strive to give special service.

"We won't just dump the load in the middle of people's lawns," Cheryl said. "We stack it where and how the customer wants it—and when we promise delivery at a certain time, we stick to it."

UCW View Slides Of India

TWEED — The Christmas meeting of the evening unit of St. John's United Church Women was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Ed. Way with a good attendance. The worship service was conducted by Betty McMurrey, Ivy Hanna and Isobel Bush, with Jean Belch as pianist. Miss Frances Zacharias, of Tweed, very capably rendered two Christmas solos.

Slides were shown to the group by Mrs. Way of India, and the Holy Land and various places she and her late husband, Mr. E. E. Way had visited. These were greatly enjoyed by those in attendance.

A social hour followed with light refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Bertram John Richmond are pictured following their recent marriage in Bulleau Park United Church, Ottawa. The bride is the former Sandra Elaine Trites, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Trites, 13 Walden Circle, Belleville, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram H. Mcinerly of Ottawa.

Annual Party Held by Tweed WI

TWEED — The annual Christmas party of Chapman-Tweed Women's Institute was held in the basement of the Presbyterian Church recently.

The stage was decorated with a lighted Christmas tree and sparkling streamers. The tables were centred with Santa Claus figures and colorful Christmas arrangements.

The members and their families enjoyed a delicious turkey dinner, followed by the singing of Christmas carols, led by Mrs. Doris Lawrence. Miss Elizabeth Gordon was the pianist.

The conveners were Mrs. D. Lawseson, Mrs. G. Johnston and Mrs. J. Wilson. Mrs. William J. Woods, president, thanked the members of the committee for a very enjoyable party.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 17—

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL

Should scratches be built into new cars?

NO; even if they were, that would not cure "new-car neurosis"—the stress-laden anticipation that precedes that first scratch put on the car by the owner himself. Anyone who wants to prolong the tension of awaiting that first scratch, however, is very careful where he parks. He will only leave his car between two other brand-new bar bugles, knowing full well their owners don't want any marks on their cars either.

Can a wife nag, yet still love her husband?

SHE COULD. Nagging has nothing to do with whether a wife loves her husband or not. Most likely, such a wife indeed loves her husband, but she may be unsure of her husband's love for her. Her constant nagging, then, becomes a "testing pattern" without her being fully conscious of it. She will continually prod and jab verbally at her husband, seeking to determine if he loves her enough to understand why she must nag him.

Does trouble 'just happen' to some kids?

NO, although it seems that some children are no sooner out of one difficulty than they are caught up in another. Perhaps their parents are luckier than they realize. They will keep after their youngsters to see what is wrong. When a child gets into trouble once or twice, though, parents may pay little attention to him after that. Yet the child may be troubled by something the parents have overlooked because "he isn't any bother."

60 Children Entertained at WI Party

On Saturday evening December 11 Wellmans WI sponsored their fourth annual Christmas party for children at their hall. Mrs. John Carlisle, president and a large crowd of people were in attendance.

Rev. W. C. Cox was master of ceremonies and over 60 children delighted the audience with recitations and musical numbers.

Mrs. Jim Rainie and Mrs. Gerald Russell had coached the junior children and had arranged the numbers.

Mrs. Gerald Clancy provided piano accompaniment while Mrs. Jim Pollock was in charge of the dancing group. They presented a "backward drill" in costume and a Belgique dance at Christmas cake.

As there are no public schools and no children in the Wellmans area, many parents expressed their appreciation of the WI's efforts to continue with these parties.

Nixon Sees Tax Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Nixon predicted early today that the Ontario government will raise taxes in its spring budget.

He was speaking in the legislature during debate in principle on a bill to introduce a three-per-cent income tax cut.

"I believe within the next three months the three per cent will be tacked back on with a few more percentage points yet.

The Liberals supported the tax cut, but Mr. Nixon said that in the next session they will vote against "tax increases already forming in . . . your tiny little minds."

Tiring Process

Spadina's Cause Is Pleaded

TORONTO (CP) — Two prominent Liberal members Thursday pleaded with the Ontario government to reverse its decision to halt construction of the partially completed Spadina expressway through Toronto.

The appeals, by deputy leader Vernon Singer and Phillip Givens, former mayor of Toronto, came during committee debate in the legislature for supplementary estimates of the department of transportation and communications.

The proposed route runs through the riding of both members.

Charles MacNaughton, the department minister, said the cabinet had made its decision on Spadina and the people of Ontario had shown their approval Oct. 21 on election day by voting for an increase in Conservative MPPs.

He said construction will be accelerated on the following projects:

—Widening of Highway 400, $2.4 million.

E. C. Rowe Expressway at Windsor, $8,000.

—Highway 7 near Toronto, $130,000.

—Highway 50 near Toronto, $145,000.

—Highway 31 near Ottawa, $100,000.

—Highway 101 near New Liskeard, $70,000.

—Highway 68 at Sudbury district, $50,000.

—Six other projects, $366,000.

Chasing Animals By Snowmobiles May Be Banned

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner was asked in the Commons Thursday whether he would introduce an amendment to the Criminal Code of Canada making it illegal to chase animals by snowmobile.

Mr. Turner, responding to a question from John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview), said he would have to check the code as it now stands to see whether it would support charges in such cases without requiring an amendment.

On Wednesday, a bill was introduced into the Ontario legislature by Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park) that would amend the province's Motorized Snow Vehicles Act to make such chases illegal.

TORONTO (CP) — Five winter works projects costing $2 million were announced Thursday by Ontario Labor Minister Gordon Carton. He said they will retrain 3,000 unemployed persons.

Lewis Claims House Misled By Statement on Land Bank

TORONTO (CP) — NDP Leader Stephen Lewis Thursday demanded an apology and retraction of a statement made to the Ontario legislature by Treasurer Darcy McKeough, saying the minister had violated the public trust.

Mr. Lewis, rising on a point of privilege at the opening of the afternoon session, said the treasurer had misled the house by saying the government had never indicated that a $20-million land-bank program would be used to buy land on the Niagara Escarpment.

Mr. Lewis read from a Sept. 28 press statement by Premier William Davis. It committed the government to using the land-bank program for escarpment purchases.

Mr. Davis defended his treasurer, who was not in the house when the NDP leader made his request during committee debate on supplementary estimates.

Deputy Speaker Russell Rowe said Mr. Lewis's protest would be referred to the Speaker for a ruling later.

Mr. McKeough's statement was made during a morning clash in the house with Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Davis said his treasurer was correct in saying that the commitment for land-bank funds on the escarpment was never made in the legislature. It was made in the premier's press statement, which also committed the government to accelerating spending for recreation land to $5 million from $2.3 million.

"This is a commitment that will be met, whether from the land bank . . . I can't say because I don't think it matters," Mr. Davis said.

In the morning debate, Mr. Lewis claimed that the funds promised in last spring's budget had been dropped from the mini-budget presented to the house Monday by Mr. McKeough.

"My question is how brazen a sort of election stunt are you prepared to pull in a budget when, in fact, most of the house believed that the money would be used for recreational acquisition?" Mr. Lewis said.

"Where is the money now?"

Mr. McKeough angrily retorted that "at no time in this house was it stated, at no time, that the $20 million necessarily related to any part of the Niagara Escarpment."

"The premier and I did not indicate that the $20 million would be used for the escarpment."

Mr. McKeough said the funds were dropped from the budget to await a government study on land acquisition. The money will not be available for this fiscal year, he said.

Pollution Control Only Part Of Reason Plant Will Move

TORONTO (CP) — A decision by Union Carbide to move its ferrous alloy operation to Quebec was dictated only partially by pollution-control problems, the Ontario legislature was told Thursday by George Kerr, minister of the environment.

Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, asked the minister whether the government plans to take steps to prevent a company from leaving the province rather than abide by its pollution-control regulations.

Mr. Lewis said 250 employes will lose their jobs at Union Carbide's Welland plant as a result of the transfer.

Mr. Kerr said it is not yet certain how much of the operation will be shifted to Quebec.

The seven furnaces used in the Welland operation are old, the minister said, but some are in better shape than others and could possibly be brought up to the province's pollution-control standards.

He told Mr. Lewis he saw no possibility of legislating against a company wishing to leave the province.

In any event, Union Carbide had been planning its move before being ordered by his department to clean up its pollution problem. The order had merely hastened the company's decision.

Fear Voiced Job Program May Develop Too Late

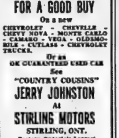
TORONTO (CP) — Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) Thursday expressed a fear that the province's 30,000-job winter works program was planned too late to ease unemployment during the crunch months of January through March.

Mr. Cassidy told the Ontario legislature during debate of $28.5 million in supplementary estimates for the municipal affairs department that it appears only about a third of these jobs will be available before March.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales accused the member of taking a pessimistic view of the program, which was announced Oct. 8 at the height of the recent provincial election campaign.

Mr. Cassidy said with sarcasm that he doubted some of the projects suggested to the municipalities in a department memo—for instance, the exterior painting of buildings and sodding—were proper winter projects.

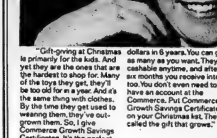
Mr. Bales said he has been informed by many municipalities that their projects will begin producing jobs early in the new year.



2,000 Seek 500 Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — About 2,000 persons have applied for 500 jobs created by the government in social agencies, Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, said Thursday night.

He said the jobs, announced as a winter employment program aimed at young persons, will last four months and pay about $100 a week.



Mr. Wells told the legislature he hopes the jobs will encourage young people to take on full-time careers.

The 500 will start work Jan. 15 in day-care centres, homes for the aged, children and youth institutions and social planning agencies.

"Gift-giving at Christmas is primarily for the kids. And yet they are the ones that are the hardest to shop for. Many of the toys they get, they'll be too old for in a year. And it's the same thing with clothes. By this time they get used to wearing them, they've outgrown them. So, I give Commerce Growth Savings Certificates. It's the perfect gift. Six dollars and eighty-one cents can grow to ten dollars in 6 years. You can give as many as you want. They're cashable anytime, and after six months you receive interest too. You don't even need to have an account at the Commerce. Put Commerce Growth Savings Certificates on your Christmas list. They're called the gift that grows."

Alberta Board Gives Approval For Second Oil Sands Plant

EDMONTON (CP) — A second oil extraction plant worth $500 million and employing 9,000 could be operating in the Athabasca oil sands as the result of a decision Thursday by the Alberta Energy Resources Conservation Board.

The board Thursday approved an application by Syncrude Canada Ltd. to produce 125,000 barrels of oil daily from an oil sands development 250 miles northeast of Edmonton. Marketing of a further 5,500 barrels daily of residual fuel oil also was approved.

F. K. Spragins, president of Syncrude, said that if the approval is ratified by the Alberta government the company could "proceed immediately with final planning and engineering."

An extraction plant now is being operated in the same area, near Fort McMurray, by Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., owned by Sun Oil Co. Ltd.

Complete operating and associated facilities including a basic synthetic crude oil production plant, power plant, pipelines and general area improvement would cost the company more than $500 million, Mr. Spragins said.

Between 2,000 and 4,000 workers would be employed during the construction phase, expected to begin in 1973, and 9,000 jobs would be created when the plant became fully operational in 1976.

"The Syncrude plant and administrative and research operations would account for 3,100 direct employees with the remaining employment generated in ancillary services resulting in an overall annual payroll of about $100 million," Mr. Spragins said.

He said the board's approval of the production level and removal of the marketing restrictions on Athabasca oil sands production imposed in 1969 had been necessary if the plant was to be constructed.

A smaller extraction plant was planned by the company in 1969, he said, but the 80,000-barrel limit set by the government and a limited sales market made construction economically unfeasible.

Closer Check Said Essential On Admittance to Hospital

OTTAWA (CP) — Tough decisions must be faced in order to cut costs through new kinds of hospital and medical care services, says a report to the conference of federal and provincial health ministers.

Closer check must be made of who is admitted to hospital, how long they stay and when they must be discharged.

Determined efforts must be made to shift patients who do not really need expensive acute hospital beds to less costly institutional, ambulatory and home care services.

Corrective action in medical care must recognize that use of doctors' services is being stimulated by some of the present methods of paying practitioners under medical care insurance.

These were major points in an interim report by the community health centres project, a study group set up by the health ministers under Dr. John E. F. Hastings of the University of Toronto school of hygiene.

The report says any proposals to encourage community health centres as a cost-limiting device "will have to be made at the expense of some other part of the health services system if the rate of increase in costs is to be reduced."

Politicians must be willing to make hard decisions about priorities in spending and in manpower allocation such as reducing the number of general hospital beds and the supporting staff and facilities. This also included closing hospitals no longer required in the medical care system of a region.

At the same time, it must be recognized that community care means the development of a whole range of new local ambulatory care services such as nursing or convalescent homes and home care.

This kind of care would require doctors and medical and social service professionals to work much closer together. Several imaginary and real barriers existed to medical groups and other integrated forms of practice.

In addition, fee-for-service payment of doctors, based on provincial medical association fee schedules, were producing more and more evidence that "payment mechanisms may stimulate utilization."

Apartment Antennas Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto broadcaster John Bassett ripped into Southam Press Ltd. Thursday for taking part in a "bootlegging business" — a closed circuit television operation.

Mr. Bassett, former publisher of The Telegram which ceased publication Oct. 30, expressed surprise that a "reputable company such as Southam should have a substantial interest" in Tel-Apart Corp. Ltd., which supplies closed-circuit television programs to some Toronto apartment buildings.

Mr. Bassett, owner of CFTO-TV Toronto and other broadcast holdings, was speaking to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission about the problem of master-antenna TV systems which now are outside CRTC jurisdiction. Some apartment owners place master antennae on their buildings to receive distant TV signals.

Some cable TV operators have said this week that owners of master antennae do not have to abide by CRTC regulations because the commission has not assumed authority over them.

Michael Harrison, Southam vice-president, said later that "the reference to bootleg broadcasting is totally unworthy of John." Tel-Apart was carrying on an entirely legal operation.

Mr. Bassett said CFTO has to live by CRTC requirements and help finance the CTV network.

But Tel-Apart had a captive audience in apartment buildings and no obligation to abide by CRTC rules.

He called on the commission to press the Ontario government to legislation to place master-antenna and closed - circuit television systems under their jurisdiction.

His Future Uncertain

Greene Back in Ottawa for Christmas

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene is returning to Ottawa for Christmas after three months out of action, but his future in the Trudeau government is unsettled.

Mr. Greene, 51, has been recuperating in a London, Ont., hospital from a stroke suffered Sept. 29 on a visit to Tokyo. He had been sidelined previously with three heart attacks in late 1968 and early 1969.

His return to Ottawa next week is primarily to spend Christmas with his family. An aide said he was expected to be fit for work early in the new year.

The doubt about his future in the federal government is based as much on speculation that Prime Minister Trudeau may shuffle his cabinet as on doubts about Mr. Greene's fitness.

Officials say that while Mr. Greene has been recuperating in London under doctor's orders, the tall, dynamic politician-lawyer has been active on the long-distance telephone for several weeks gathering information and issuing orders to his department of energy, mines and resources.

"He's shaken everybody up," one official said, "and let it be known that he'll be back in January to make sure that his assignments are being carried out."

But the political fate of Mr. Greene remains a matter between him and Mr. Trudeau, the aide added.

Mr. Trudeau visited his minister in hospital during a visit to London Nov. 11, but what passed between them is private.

It is known around Ottawa that Mr. Green refused sinecure jobs in algebraship or the Senate following his earlier heart attacks.

It is also said that Mr. Greene would rather press on in cabinet harness than take a lesser job.

Furthermore, with a federal election expected during the coming year, political scuttlebutt has it that the government would like to have the persuasive Joe Greene pleading the Liberal cause on Liberal platforms, although his doctors might have other ideas about his undertaking the strenuous pressure of an election campaign.

With the coming parliamentary recess, expected to last a month, unconfirmed speculation has it that the cabinet may undergo a shuffle, particularly since most of the key ministers have been in their present jobs since 1968 and a new-faces approach may be considered appropriate for the looming federal election.

Mr. Greene, partly in deference to his own health, might therefore find that he is being asked to take another portfolio in the cabinet, if not a job outside government altogether.

Policeman Says Caller Told of Blackmail Bid

EDMONTON (CP) — A police officer testified Thursday that 12 hours after travel agent Bob Neville was found murdered, he was told that someone had been trying to blackmail the dead man.

Det. Norman Koch of the Edmonton police told Alberta Supreme Court, where Keith Latta of Kingston is on trial for the non-capital murder of Neville, that he received a call June 14 from a someone "identifying himself as Fred, Keith Latta."

The accused is a law professor at Queen's University. He was arrested at his home one week after the June 13 shooting of his former partner, a 36-year-old travel agent and separate school board trustee.

Det. Koch said the man told him of a recent trip to the city Travel Service Ltd. on the evening of June 10.

The meeting did not take place because the blackmailers had "seen strangers entering or leaving" and thought Neville had talked to police, Det. Koch said the caller told him.

A second meeting was apparently set up on June 14 and Latta told Det. Koch he had waited in his hotel room until noon for a telephone call from Mr. Neville to tell him where to go.

When nothing was heard from Mr. Neville, he checked out, Det. Koch said.

Testimony earlier this week by an Edmonton inn employee revealed Latta had checked out of the hotel at 12:04 p.m. that day.

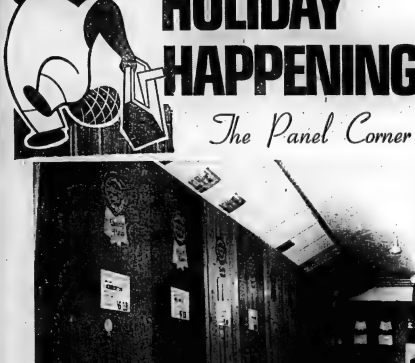
Crown counsel W. J. Stainton told court today that Latta had told friends on his arrival in Edmonton in June that he was here to help Neville who, he said, was being blackmailed for his philanderings.

Insp. A. W. Lefeuvre of the city police testified Thursday that when a man identifying himself as Prof. Keith Latta telephoned him on June 14, he was told the woman involved in the blackmail had had a child.

He testified that the two names mentioned by his caller were Valerie Bedard and another woman, identified only by the name Maria.

Valerie Lane, formerly Valerie Bedard, and Maria Ban testified Wednesday that neither of them had been made pregnant by Mr. Neville.

Mrs. Lane previously testified she had had a social and sexual relationship with Mr. Neville.



Insp. Lefeuvre also testified that Latta had mentioned Neville, saying the blackmailers could "bring someone into the city for $500 and get rid" of Neville.

Court was told earlier this week that a fingerprint and two partial palm prints found on Latta were found on a newspaper and on a map seized by police from a bus depot locker after the locker key was found in the travel agency where Mr. Neville's body was discovered.

Their Age in School Bags

In Japan you can tell at a glance the age and grade of a student by the type of schoolbag he or she carries. Top left, children ages 3-5 attend kindergarten school, carrying small pouch type bag hanging from the shoulder, usually of a bright color. Junior high students, top right, ages 13-16, use a white canvas bag with bread band hoisted over or across the shoulder. Bottom left, senior high school or early college students, from 16 up, mostly carry a leather briefcase or portfolio for their books and lunch; and bottom right, primary school pupils, ages 7-12, use a rucksack-type heavy leather bag worn on their backs. Ulster Planning Force Of Unarmed Vigilantes

BELFAST (AP) — The Northern Ireland government has promised to help organize a force of unarmed civilian vigilantes to help protect people and homes from guerrilla bombers.

Announcing this in Parliament late Thursday night, Prime Minister Brian Faulkner said the body of volunteers could be the answer to many of the troubles which have plagued Ulster in 28 months of violence and left 197 dead.

But he stressed the vigilantes must operate under a strict code of practice which he would draw up with the British Army, which has 18,000 troops in Northern Ireland, and police chiefs.

Faulkner's action gives official recognition to a host of small vigilante outfits which have been formed in bomb-scarred streets of Belfast, the capital in recent months.

Citizens have banded together to provide 24-hour surveillance on their streets and raise the alarm at the approach of suspicious-looking strangers.

The groups have been mainly Protestant since the insurgent warfare is being waged by the Roman Catholic-based Irish Republican Army.

Faulkner listed three conditions under which the vigilantes would be allowed to operate with official blessing: They would have no legal rights above those of ordinary citizens and must "under no circumstances" be armed, they would have to accept without reservation instructions from the army and police, and each group must allow free movement within its protectorate of officials and security forces and give them maximum support and co-operation.

There was no immediate reaction from the Catholic-oriented republican community to the proposals.

But independent observers were convinced the minority Catholics would regard the move as a concession to the Protestant right wing.

Many Catholics already regard the police and army as biased against them. They could regard the unarmed vigilantes as the thin edge of a third hostile force.

Terrorists late Thursday night tried to burn down a government development commission building in Lurgan, County Armagh.

Three armed men forced the caretaker, his wife and six children to leave an adjoining house and then set the building alight. But firemen quickly controlled the blaze.

British troops were fired on by gunmen in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second city early today. There were no casualties.

Real Estate Men's Conspiracy Is Charged

TORONTO (CP) — The first criminal charges laid by the Ontario government's consumer protection division have been sworn against six Toronto men, police said Thursday.

Two real estate brokers and four real estate salesmen are charged with conspiring to obtain provincial registrations falsely by having someone pose for the applicant and write the required examination, police said.

A spokesman for Ontario's registration and examination branch said the charges, sworn Dec. 9, are the first laid in 30 years of government supervision of real estate brokers.

The six men are to appear in court Jan 5.

In the four-month period ending Nov. 30, the spokesman said, the branch received more than 3,350 complaints concerning real estate salesmen, compared with 2,661 in all of 1970.

About 5,000 brokers and 15,000 salesmen now are registered with the consumer protection division. The figure does not include salesmen for large land developers who work for salaries.

Name Refused

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — A young man who accepted incarceration as the price for anonymity changed his mind and gave his name when he appeared in court Thursday.

He identified himself as David Wicks, 24, of Kitchener.

Police Chief Harold Basse said the man would have been granted bail Wednesday night after he was charged with impaired driving, but refused to identification and refused to give his name.

Wicks was remanded on the charge to a later date.

Nova Scotia to Raise Provincial Income Tax

HALIFAX (CP) — The personal income tax rate in Nova Scotia will be increased by 10.5 percentage points effective in 1972 to meet rising costs of provincial services, Finance Minister Peter Nicholson said Thursday.

Mr. Nicholson said in a statement issued by his office late in the afternoon that the rate would increase to 32.5 per cent from 28 per cent of the basic federal income tax.

HAIR BULING

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Convinced that long hair is not cricket on the cricket field, officials ordered candidates for the Transvaal team to wear their locks in a "reasonable length."

Parole Chief Asks Support Of Senators

OTTAWA (CP) — Support of a Senate committee for the national parole board was sought Thursday by board chairman George Street as the committee moved into the second day of its inquiry into the parole system.

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer told the committee Wednesday that major changes are needed in the system. He said an "obvious gap" has developed between the parole board and the Canadian penitentiary service.

Mr. Street, 56 and board chairman since the board's creation in 1959, did not refer directly to Mr. Goyer's comments.

Asked about them later, he replied:

"I really can't comment and I don't know what he meant. There isn't any gap I know of."

In a statement to the senators, Mr. Street said that only 5,250 of the 38,444 prisoners released on parole since 1959 have been returned to cells.

"Despite our success so far," he said, there will always be criticism of the board. He said he hopes the Senate inquiry will "provide us with some more support which we surely need."

Questioning that followed included the parole of the six kidnappers of Mary Nelles, daughter of a Toronto millionaire, in 1969.

The senators said the early release of six young middle-class bachelors who kidnapped Mrs. Nelles had caused bitterness among other prisoners, some of whom had families on welfare.

Senator Carl Goldenberg (I-Quebec) said he could "well understand" criticism of the decision. He asked Mr. Street whether six unemployed men would have been treated the same.

Mr. Street said everyone is treated equally but the fact that the kidnappers were middle-class, had jobs and friends and relatives to help them were factors in the release.

Apollo Insignia

The Apollo 16 crew patch is dominated by an eagle perched atop a red, white, and blue shield superimposed on a lunar scene, surrounded by a blue circle of 16 stars with the crew's surnames completing the bottom arc of the circle. Across the face of the shield is a gold symbol of fleurs outlined in blue. The design was created from ideas from Apollo 16 commander, John W. Young, command module pilot, Thomas K. That White Stuff at Niagara Is Suds, Not Foam from Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (CP) — That white stuff in the pool below Niagara Falls isn't really foam—it's the suds from detergents washed into the river.

The International Joint Commission, which held a public hearing in the council chambers of city hall Thursday, didn't find that funny.

The witness who mentioned the suds was Norman Mitchie, head of Committee of a Thousand, an anti-pollution organization based in Niagara Falls, Ont. He commented on the foam, which mostly gathers at the foot of the American falls, because it was evident at the hearing that Ontario's side of the famous Niagara River was clean and New York's side was not.

The commission called the public hearing to find out what progress had been made in cleansing the 37-mile river with its beautiful gorge, whirlpool and honey-moon capital of the world.

Canada got a pat on its back for promoting better handling of sewage and phosphates in detergents. The Americans blamed each other for lack of effort.

The fact of the matter, according to several witnesses, was that America had done nothing while the Canadian federal government had made a $187 million grant to get pollution abatement underway immediately.

Mayor Dent Lackey of Niagara Falls, N.Y., said that although his city had plans for construction of a $42 million sewage treatment centre, it could not proceed because the federal government would not grant its 55-per-cent share of the cost and could not agree on standards of water quality.

He said the stumbling block was Congress where a new bill submitted by Democratic Senator Edmund Muskie was in the midst of long debate.

"We planned our $42 million system on current standards," the mayor said in an interview. "Now Washington is holding back everything until they deal with Muskie's ideas."

He said America's "life security" was at stake and at the same time, Canadians were suffering because the U.S. was not fulfilling its half of the bargain to clean up the lakes.

Dwight F. Metzler, deputy commissioner of the New York State department of environmental conservation, said it was prepared to finance its part of the Niagara Falls project but the federal government was not.

A federal representative said the state should go ahead because it had the money in reserve to do so.

At the end of the day-long meeting, co-chairman Christian A. Herter Jr., visibly annoyed, said the new bill before Congress has created "a great deal of uncertainty" and has crippled all phases of anti-pollution programs in New York.

He said that at his request the state and federal governments have agreed to meet "early in the new year" to try to solve their differences.

The other co-chairman of the commission, Louis Rabichaud, former premier of New Brunswick, was unable to attend because of illness in his family.

Giacomin Second Top Goalie To Crash-land This Week

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Riding a crest as the National Hockey League's No. 1 goaltender has its pitfalls. The decent, when it comes, can be sudden and embarrassing.

Gump Worsley held the dubious leadership last weekend. Then Chicago Black Hawks raked him for four goals in just over 12 minutes en route to a 5-3 win over Worsley's Minnesota North Stars.

Eddie Giacomin, who replaced Worsley as the league's premier goalie, took his lumps Thursday night, allowing four goals in the first period as New York Rangers, East Division leaders, fell 8-1 before the aroused Boston Bruins.

The win gave Boston 42 points, three behind New York, and a second-place tie with Montreal Canadiens.

In the only other game, Philadelphia Flyers climbed four points behind the pace in the West with California Golden Seals while blanking Buffalo Sabres 5-0. The Sabres trail the seventeam East.

Canadiens can move up tonight against the Canucks in Vancouver while the Seals entertain Detroit Red Wings.

The Gumper exited after the fourth goal Sunday. The New York goalie didn't depart until the end of the first period after Bruins' centre Phil Esposito had picked up his fourth point of the game, assisting on Ken Hodge's score at 19:15.

Esposito, who last year set a points record of 152 and is the current points-leader with 53, earlier had scored his 34th goal and assisted scores by Bobby Orr and Dallas Smith.

Gilles Villemure, who came on in Giacomin's relief, allowed the other four Boston goals, facing only 17 shots in two periods.

Rangers' Ted Irvine and Boston winger John McKenzie were ticketed with fighting majors in the first period, but their battle turned into a preliminary of the feature donnybrook at 18:37 of the middle period.

The ill feelings spread to other players and New York defenceman Brad Park started to take the measure of Ted Green in another altercation.

All four players received fighting majors and misconduct penalties while Ranger Vic Hadfield and Hodge were given game misconducts each for being the third man in the separate altercations.

"This just has to be our best game of the season," said Boston coach Tom Johnson. "There was nothing holding our guys back tonight," he added in reference to the aggressive play of his Bruins in front of the hometown Garden fans.

"It didn't make any difference who I put out there."

The Boston line, including Hodge and Wayne Cashman, set an NHL record of 236 points last season. The New York trio leads this season with 143 points in 29 games.

The defeat was so convincing, about the only thing Ranger coach Emile Francis could argue about was which goal was the turning point.

"I think our third goal was the key," said Johnson. "It took off on a New York player's (Dale Rolfe) glove and we were fortunate.

"Going three up in a game like this was a big lift."

"The first goal," was Fran choice. "Coming so early the second minute of play really hurt us."

Serge Bernier's two go lifted Philadelphia's fans as Flyers capitalized on two cessive Buffalo penalties in second period to lock up win.

Leading 1-0 at the Sabres Steve Atkinson and Ch Evans went off 54 seconds ap early in the middle period Philadelphia quickly turned game around with Dick Sa tin and Bernier clicking bet the teams were even up again

Schmalz Defends School Standards

ORONTO (CP) — Ontario ey Association Junior A ues pay a staggering amount ard and tuition fees for their ayers, C l a r e n c e (Tubby) malz of Walkerton, Ont., d Thursday.

chmalz, the OHA president, d defending the educational ndards of Junior A players e concerned on a report a federal-provincial confer- on sport had decided, with h Minister John Munro's ncement, to investigate one of the abuses prevalent amateur hockey.

We have statistics to prove the scholastic averages of Junior A players are above averages of students in al- st every city in the league, y boy who isn't doing well is vided with a tutor."

chmalz said when a player is sidered from one city to an- er to play hockey, his team ys his tuition in the new city. parents continue to pay edu- on taxes in his home city. In some cases the amount a an pays is staggering—as ch as $1,000. This way the ernment gets in both ways.

"Ottawa says there isn't enough liaison between the gov- ernment and hockey and the youth and recreation depart- ment," Schmalz said. "This may be true in other provinces, but it certainly isn't true in On- tario."

He said the OHA was hiring a technical director to tour towns and conduct coaching and ref- eree clinics.

Schmalz said neither the fed- eral government nor the public was aware of the problems that exist in amateur hockey.

"In defence of the junior A people I think the public should be told that the Ontario govern- ment threatened to put a 15- per-cent amusement tax on every ticket sold if a $25 maxi- mum weekly salary for players was not imposed. The ceiling was one of the items mentioned by Munro in Ottawa Tuesday.

"This $50 maximum rule was put in to protect the arenas and the teams from this levy. The government could add this levy if even one player was making more than $50."

Schmalz agreed there was some criticism over the move- ment of players, but said the OHA tries to discourage it.

Dolphins' Bob Griese Premier NFL Passer

NEW YORK (AP) — The leading passer in the National Football League's American Conference is Bob Griese of Miami Dolphins. The leading scorer is Gary Yepremian of the same Miami Dolphins. So is any wonder that Miami is one of the teams in the NFL's post-season playoffs.

Statistics released by the league Thursday show Griese with a 54.5 per cent average on 132 completions of 242 attempts, including 18 touchdowns this season. Yepremian has scored 105 points including 26 of 37 at- tempted field goals.

Griese's passing game is com- plemented by the rushing of Larry Csonka, whose 923 yards gained are second only to Denver Bron- cos' Floyd Little, who has gained 1,054. Csonka's running mate, Jim Kiick, has gained 646 yards, eighth best in the confer- ence.

In the National Conference, the leading rusher is Green John Brockington of Green Bay who soared over the 1,000- yard mark last week and now has 1,032 compared with 977 for Willie Ellison of Los Angeles.

Roger Staubach of Dallas, av- eraging 8.9 yards gained with every completed pass in the league among the conference quarterbacks while Bob Tucker of New York, with 51 catches, is the top receiver. His leads San Francisco's Ted Kwalick by two receptions.

Pete Liske, former Calgary Stampeder star in the Cana- dian Football League, now with Philadelphia Eagles, has moved up from the bottom of the NFC list of quarterbacks. He's now ranked ninth after competing 131 of 231 pass at- tempts for 1,736 yards and eight touchdowns, plus 11 intercep- tions.

At one point early in the sea- son, Liske led the NFC in in- terceptions but that honor now is held by Sam Francis of Green Bay. John Brodie of San Fran- cisco has had 23 passes picked off.

Former Ottawa Rough Rider Vic Washington now has a total of 1,063 yards in offence for San Francisco and seven touch- downs.

The former CFL star has 772 yards in 177 carries, good for sixth spot among the NFC rush- ers. His pass receiver he has caught 35 for 519 yards and four of his seven touchdowns.

Rozelle Earns Grinch Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro- tests against the playing of the National Football League's post-season playoffs on Christmas Day appear to be mounting and one legisla- tor says he will introduce a bill to prohibit any repetition in the future.

In Minneapolis - St. Paul, where the Vikings will play the Dallas Cowboys in Bloo- mington on Christmas Day, the club said it had received nu- merous complaints, both by phone and letter, pro- testing the scheduling.

In Kansas City, where the Chiefs will play either Balti- more or Miami the same day, a columnist for the City Star said NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle was being equated in many households with the "grinch who stole Christ- mas."

A state legislator said he would introduce a bill to ban any such games in the future.

Pistons Sparked by Blast

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It took a public blast from the general manager and a team meeting, but Detroit Pistons fi- nally found the spark.

Detroit, led by guard Jimmy Walker's 34 points, rallied in the fourth period Thursday night to defeat Cincinnati Royals 107-101.

Earlier in the day, Detroit general manager Edwin Coe blasted his players for not hav- ing their minds on the games of late. The Pistons had been lan- guishing in last place in the Midwest Division of the NBA's Western Conference with an 11- 18 record.

Keep Those Labels Coming!

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada will send 51 athletes to the 1972 Winter Olympics at Sapporo, Japan, next February, and 189 to the Olympics in Munich, West Germany, next August.

The Sapporo Games will be held Feb. 3-13, and those in Mu- nich from Aug. 26 to Sept. 10.

The Canadian Olympic Asso- ciation's 1971-72 campaign to raise $2.5 million has gained support from Kraft Foods Ltd. officials told a news conference Thursday.

The food company will donate $1 to the Olympic Trust, the fi- nancial and fund-raising arm of the COA, for every 50 labels from its products collected and deposited in food stores across the country, between Jan. 1 and Feb. 28, 1972.

The campaign for $2.5 million is to cover the cost of the COA's operation in 1971 and 1972, and to help finance national team programs for the various sports federations.

It also includes the cost of sending Canadians to the recent Pan-American Games at Cali, Colombia, and next year's two Olympic trips.

Nice Guys Not All Last

George Godson is one nice guy who might not finish first, but he's a long way from last in the current list of Ontario Hockey Association Senior A scorers.

The versatile Belleville Quintes' centre has yet to incur a penalty this season, and his 34 points give Godson undisputed possession of sixth-

GEORGE GODSON

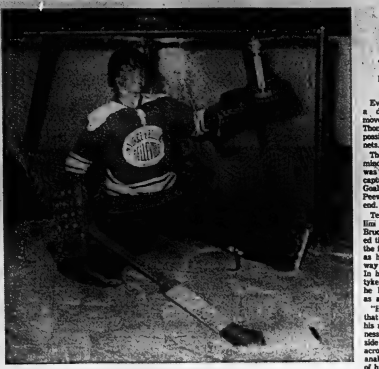
Godson is well ahead of his pace last season when, after winning two successive club scoring titles, he lost the honor to newcomer Doug Senior.

Godson's ten-goal output in the 21 of 24 Quinte games he has played represents one more than he scored in 37 outings last season, and his 34 points are only six fewer than he produced in the 1970-71 regular schedule.

A tireless skater who also logs penalty-killing and power-play duty with the Quintes, the familiar number '9' is the only skater on the current Belleville roster who has not been penalized this season. He drew three minor penalties last year.



After a slow start, Godson's torrid scoring pace in recent weeks has given him an eight-point edge over club runner-up Al Ferguson, who leads the Quintes in goal-scoring with 18. Only two players in the eight-team senior league—Orillia's Mike Draper and Galt's Chester Teal with 19 apiece—have scored as many as the Quinte right winger.

Belleville's big guns will be out to help the Quintes avenge two losses in as many starts against Barrie this season when the Flyers hit town for an 8 p.m. Saturday game

Minute Man

Terry Thompson was the man of the minute for the Belleville Rollins power all - stars last weekend. The second - year netminder was awarded the Most Valuable Goalie Award in the Oshawa Tournament for his work in holding the favored Sudbury entry to a 2-2 draw in the quarter finals.

Rollins' Goalie Winner After Two Years in Net

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Every hockey coach wants a defenceman with good moves, so last season Terry Thompson made the best move possible. He moved into the nets.

The Rollins peewee netminder proved that the switch was indeed a wise one by capturing the Most Valuable Goalie award at the Oshawa Peewee Tournament last weekend.

Terry, who shares the Rollins netminding duties with Bruce Hamilton, was awarded the trophy for his work in the final two Belleville games as his team made it all the way to the semi-final round. In his previous five years of tyke and novice minor hockey he had performed regularly as a defenceman.

"He's a stand-up goalie and that helps, but I think that his real strong point is quickness. He can be at the far side of the net and still get across to make the save," analyzed coach Ken Brooks of his second year netminder.

"He's strong point? Digging the puck out of the net," quipped Gordie Bell, who also helps coach the peewee all-stars. "No, really I think it's that he isn't afraid to stand in there and he has very good reflexes," added the former Belleville McFarland's star.

Thompson's best effort, and what undoubtedly won him the tournament goalie award, came against Sudbury. Against the favored tourney entry he turned aside 46 of the 48 shots directed at him as the teams battled to a 2-2 tie. The Rollins team was awarded the game for having scored first in regulation time after the teams played through a scoreless overtime period.

Belleville was ousted 5-3 by Burlington in the semi-final but Terry showed well enough despite the loss to clinch the top netminder award.

Fairways Riding Four-game Crest

The Fairways, riding the crest of a four-game unbeaten streak, are hoping to record their fifth when they take to the ice for the 8 p.m. Memorial Arena game with the 'C' entry in the Eastern Ontario Junior B League.

The only change from Sunday's 7-2 win over Oshawa, will be in goal where Bill Cormier will draw the starting assignment over Bob Harrison.

Harrison, who was expected to carry most of the netminding burden with Cormier tied up by job commitments, now will be sharing goaltending duties with the former Trenton juvenile netminder.

Two former Trenton Golden Hawk faces in the lineup will be centre Mark Woodward and left winger Jeff Howard, who combined with 1970 scoring leader Terry Meagher to form the Fairway's most potent scoring combination in Sunday's convincing win over second place Oshawa.

The team will be minus the services of defenceman Jim Cain, whose move to Toronto only makes him available for some weekend games. However team captain John Mulvihill, along with regulars Doug Perry, Pete Ackerman and Kevin Dockrill are available for blue line duty. Game time is 8 p.m. at the Memorial Arena.

Kinsmen Share Shutout

Two goalies proved as effective as one during Ontario Minor Hockey Association play last night.

Rick Hutchinson and Jeff Merrill combined for a shutout performance as the Belleville Kinsmen bantams stopped Stirling 3-0.

The winners drew six of 11 penalties.

OUR COUNTRY, CANADA.
Christmas.
Watch a child's face on Christmas morning and feelings you had almost forgotten come flooding back.
The sheer wonder of being alive. The simple pleasure of sharing our love and affection with one another.
For when Canadian snows lie deep and the winds blow chill it's sometimes easy to forget.
Yet in the midst of winter comes Christmas—a shining, brilliant jewel that brightens the winter dark and brings us together once again. A reminder that in this hardy, northern land our greatest strength lies in our unity, our togetherness.
So, as we share our Christmas with one another, let us also remember the joy of being a part of this vast adventure called Canada.
Canada, our country. A community of people, cultures and ideals holding to a common pride.
Together it is ours to keep and to build.

Seagram's V.O. Made in Canada...and proud of it.

Alberta Teachers and Trustees Have Had Most Difficult Year

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's 22,000 teachers, and the school trustees who employ them, are licking their wounds and remembering 1971 as one of the toughest years for contract negotiations.

Since April, there have been four teacher walkouts which have left about 150,000 students without instructors for periods ranging from 50 minutes to three weeks.

One of the walkouts has been under way since Nov. 29, keeping 12,000 out of classes in seven rural districts in the Calgary area.

Premier Peter Lougheed called an emergency cabinet meeting for today to deal with the strike of 613 teachers.

Teachers across the province, represented by the powerful Alberta Teachers' Association, blame a new school act and regional bargaining for many of their problems.

The new Alberta School Act, approved by the legislature in 1970, made working conditions negotiable, items and allowed the boards to band together and negotiate as units for the first time.

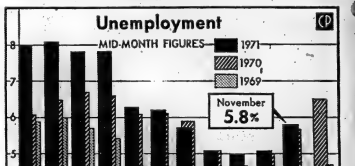
The teachers say the school boards interpreted the legislation as meaning trustees could dictate working conditions. Also, they say, the boards did not prepare themselves properly for the innovation of regional bargaining.

About 10,000 teachers were affected by regional bargaining when 66 school boards formed eight units.

Three of the eight, Battle River, North Central West and Bow Valley, the unit now striken bound, had walkouts. The fourth strike was against the Calgary public school board which negotiates by itself.

C. E. Connors, a teachers' association spokesman, says teachers were prepared for regional negotiations but the trustees weren't.

This is obvious, he says, because only one of the strikes—Bow Valley—had wages as a main issue. The others were over a variety of working conditions.



"The abused freedoms that trustees took made teachers wary," says Donna Halstead, ATA information officer. "As a result, they went for consultation clauses."

The consultation clause, requiring boards to consult teachers on changes in working conditions, was a stumbling block in many negotiations. The boards, claimed the teachers were trying to take a large slice of autonomy from trustees.

Mrs. Halstead says that with all but one group of the 1971 contracts now signed, about 14,000 of the province's teachers have consultation clauses.

Mr. Connors says the interesting aspect of regional bargaining is that all eight trustee units rejected conciliation board recommendations.

This he says, would be more understandable if wages had been the overriding issue. But, averaging the settlements, Alberta teachers received a six-per-cent wage increase for 1971.

Unemployment Rises

Unemployment in Canada rose to 563,000 at mid-November — 5.8 per cent of the 9.11 million labor force — from 447,000 at mid-October. Statistics Canada reported Tuesday, Dec. 7. The unemployment rate in October was 5.1 per cent of the labor force. It was 5.7 per cent in November last year. (CP Newsmap)

Man Studying Ways To Use Sun's Energy

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — To solve a growing power crisis on earth, man is studying how to use orbiting satellites to convert the sun's rays into pollution-free electrical energy.

The air force, the space agency and some industrial concerns have looked into the possibility of placing a network of satellites in stationary orbits.

The idea would be to have their banks of solar cells capture solar heat and transform it to electricity. Generators then would convert the electricity to microwaves, which would be beamed to earth stations for reconversion to electricity.

The studies show such a system could be developed in the United States. It initially would be costly, but proponents say the eventual saving to the environment might make it worthwhile.

Peter E. Glaser of Arthur D. Little Inc., a leading research organization, said "energy is being considered as the limiting resource in an industrial society" and that the world's supply of fossil fuel will be exhausted within a few centuries.

"This rapid exhaustion of our basic fuel can be readily understood when one considers that the world demand for electrical power is doubling about once every decade," he said.

Injured Man Returns Home

TORONTO (CP) — James Peter Flynn, 27-year-old Kitchener, Ont., man, has gone back to Scotland to live with his parents after an assault two years ago nearly cost him his life.

He will get at least $200 a month for life, paid to a trustee in Edinburgh, the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board announced Thursday.

It announced an interim award of $3,217.37 to cover costs that have been incurred since he was thrown unconscious out of the back door of the Grand Union Hotel in Kitchener.

Court Ruling Could Add 40,000 to Indian Rolls

OTTAWA (CP) — About 40,000 persons could be added to the Indian rolls next year if the Supreme Court of Canada upholds a recent federal appeal court decision that bars Indian women who marry whites retain their Indian status.

The newcomers would acquire an interest in reserve lands and be qualified to a share in money held by the federal government in trust for the Indians.

The Indian affairs department now responsible for roughly 250,000 registered Indians, presumably would have to seek a huge increase in its $257-million annual budget to provide services for those added to the rolls.

Since 1951, when the Indian Act was passed by Parliament, and up to March 31 this year, 7,967 Indian women married outside their bands.

Indian affairs officials say that if these women, their husbands and their children were accorded Indian status, the total would be about 40,000.

What remains to be seen is whether the Supreme Court decision, if it finds the Indian Act contrary to the Bill of Rights, will be retroactive and restore Indian status to those who lost it beginning in 1951.

Normally, a high court judgment would not have such a retroactive effect. But because a vested right is involved, such an effect is possible in this case, say legal sources.

The facts of the high court case are simple.

She claimed discrimination and lists of equal rights and took her case to court. Although the federal court found against her, the federal court of appeal reversed the finding and restored her Indian status.

Since then, the Indian affairs department has stopped striking from its rolls Indian women who marry whites.

Haircut Allowance Is $50

LONDON (AP) — Haircuts at $50 a head—that's the latest thing for Peg-haired British actors.

The actors' trade union, Equity, has decided that a long-haired performer who has to get shorn short for a part may have trouble getting another role that demands a modern-style long hairdo.

So, any producer who orders an actor to get a close trim must pay the performer £20 ($50), Equity ruled.

Twenty young actors who got short haircuts to play Prussian officers in the television series were the first to collect the haircut bonuses.

"A short-haired actor can actually suffer financially and the £20 will help while he's growing his hair back in," said an Equity spokesman.

NEW YORK (AP) — Two elderly opera lovers have been compensated for an inconvenience they suffered several weeks ago when they were handed police summonses for allegedly selling standing room tickets to each other at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Lydia MacKnight, 82, and Henry Meltzner, 80, watched Samson and Delila Wednesday night from tenor Richard Tucker's box in the Golden Horseshoe of the opera house.

The opera buffs were acquitted of the charge after Meltzner explained to the judge he had traded his orchestra ticket for Mrs. MacKnight's balcony ticket to save her a climb upstairs.

Tucker, who stars in the opera, read about their plight and extended the offer.

Alias Smith and Jones Has Tough Competition

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's hard-riding pair who call themselves Smith and Jones each took on their struggle to stay within the law, but they continue to be losers in television.

Alias Smith and Jones has never really had a chance. Ever since the series made its mid-season debut a year ago, its competition has been The Flip Wilson Show, one of the most popular programs on the air.

It would be interesting to see how the light-hearted western would do in some other time period. While the hour does bear a strong family resemblance to Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, it is not annoyingly imitative. Pete Duel and Ben Murphy are attractive and engaging leads. And the stronger element in the series is the scripts. Most often they start with a situation that is a cliche of the TV western, but then the story goes romping off in a direction all its own.

Thursday night's show was typical. Somebody robbed the Touchstone bank and the two former outlaws Smith and Jones, were blamed. Into this familiar stew were mixed An Southern playing a dealer in the local saloon, Jessica Walters playing the beautiful actress in the local diner who was mixed up with the banker's no good son-in-law. It worked out amusingly—without a shot being fired or a fist being clenched.

Longstreet, which follows, was perking along nicely with its blind investigator solving a case a week until NBC wheeled in its paraplegic detective. Ironside, into the same time spot. The result, so far, is that Longstreet is taking a bit of a pasting in its ratings.

This new competition seems unfortunate from the viewpoint of the audience. Longstreet is a rather well done action show, extremely well acted by James Franciscus in the tricky title role of a sightless man. The stories are well conceived, the climaxes logical.

Kierans Says Tax Bill Will Concentrate Economic Power

OTTAWA (CP) — The government tax bill, after 26 days of Commons debate, meets its final House vote today and moves on to a Senate bitterly divided over what to do with the legislation.

On the eve of third and final reading in the House, Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons in a rare intervention in debate that the Conservatives have displayed indecision and confusion on the issue. He said the majority of the public likes the bill and wants it passed.

But Eric Kierans, who left the cabinet last April in disagreement with government economic policy, predicted the bill would maintain an unfair tax burden on individuals, encourage foreign ownership of industry and cause greater concentration of economic power in a few corporate hands.

The Commons vote today was forced by government use of a debate-limiting rule—used twice during the debate—which cuts off discussion by MPs at 3:45 p.m. EST.

Meanwhile, Senators fought an unusually heated debate Thursday and stayed two votes on whether to speed the 707-page bill through by Christmas, a feat sure to hold off debate until after the Christmas-New Year recess.

The government has sought parliamentary passage by the Jan. 1 implementation date.

The Senate's Liberal majority succeeded in passing a resolution suspending rules so they could accept the bill today when it is passed by the Commons and go immediately into debate —without the usual one-day notice.

And it defeated a motion by Jacques Flynn, Opposition leader in the Senate, to have the Senate adjourn until Jan. 10 so the bill could be carefully studied without the pressure of a deadline.

But in the 44-14 vote, three Liberals supported the opposition.

Standing in the Senate: Liberal 66, Conservative 19, Independents 2, Independent Liberal 1, Social Credit 1, vacant 13.

Senator Paul Martin, government leader in the chamber, denied that the government was applying pressure on the Senate to forego scrutiny of the bill in order to pass it.

But Senator Grattan O'Leary (PC—Ontario) said a vote against the motion to delay debate was a vote for the death of the Senate, which would be exposed as a mere rubber stamp for legislation if it met the deadline.

He disputed Mr. Trudeau's statement of the popularity of the bill.

There had never been such public opposition to government attempts to force the bill through Parliament.

Senator Carl Goldenberg (Liberal—Quebec) and other Liberals argued that the bill should be debated immediately, with senators themselves deciding whether debate was necessary beyond Jan. 1.

While the Senators were arguing about their responsibilities, Mr. Trudeau used his first Commons speech since last May to attack the Conservative opposition for the government's tax program.

He said the Conservatives had attacked the tax policy white paper when it was issued in 1969. They had then refused to take a stand on the report of the Commons finance committee issued last year proposing changes.

Now, after weeks of debate, they complained the government had acted too short their consideration of the bill in the House.

But the Conservatives had not made their position clear on key issues.

Mr. Kierans, former communications minister, attacked a provision in the bill that would permit companies to deduct from taxable income the interest they pay on loans used to buy other companies.

That would encourage the growth of huge conglomerates, losing the social and economic benefits of competition, he said.

And because foreign-controlled companies in Canada could take advantage of the tax break, they could expand their take-overs.

Canadian firms, however, could not hope to acquire control of subsidiaries whose controlling interest was held outside Canada.

Earlier, the Commons defeated a New Democrat motion to increase by reducing the tax rate on the first $500 of personal taxable income to two per cent from 17 per cent. This would have been a tax saving of $85.

Even after completing work on the tax bill today, the House has been given a full legislative plate, by the government—bills it wants passed by Christmas.

The government would like passage of five bills—including a giant measures introduced last June and October, a new Canada Pension, and a long-disputed bill to set up farm products marketing agencies.

If they are passed by next Thursday, the MPs will get a month-long Christmas holiday.

If not, they will be summoned back soon after Christmas to finish the work.

Trudeau Flays Conservatives on Tax Policies

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau lumped on the Conservatives Thursday with accusations that they have been obstructing the tax bill debate without ever taking a real stand on the bill itself.

In his first speech during Commons debate since last May, Mr. Trudeau called the ingredients of the Conservative tax policy:

The text of paid advertisements by airlines and business groups, seasoned with the latest statistics from some mail-in pressure campaign, that circulated for two hours in the heat of the weekly Conservative caucus meeting."

Mr. Trudeau said that at least the New Democratic Party had taken a stand on the bill.

The NDP stand has been that the government paid too much attention to affluent interest groups on the tax bill.

The prime minister said the main Conservative complaint about the bill is that they had not had enough time to study it.

In a strongly partisan speech, Mr. Trudeau said the Conservative complaint that they could not study the bill during the summer was an admission of their own inefficiency.

Copies of the bill had been distributed to all MPs and the opposition research staffs July 15.

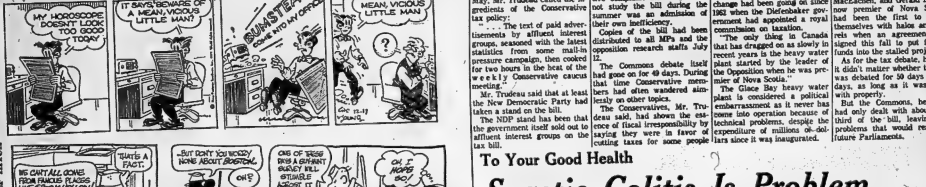
The Conservatives, Mr. Trudeau said, had shown the existence of fiscal irresponsibility by saying they were in favor of cutting taxes for some people but they were opposed to increasing them for others.

Despite all the criticism, he said, the bill was filled with "relevance, fairness, growth in freedom."

The national debate on tax change had been guided on since 1963 when the Diefenbaker government had appointed a royal commission on taxation.

"The only thing in Canada that has changed since then is that in recent years is the heavy water plant started by the leader of the Opposition when he was premier of Nova Scotia."



The Glace Bay heavy water plant is considered a political embarrassment as it never has come into operation because of technical problems, despite the expenditure of millions of dollars since it was inaugurated.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax East Hants) said it was unfair to blame the heavy water situation on Mr. Stanfield.

Liberals such as Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, Privy Council President Allen MacEachen, and Gerald Regan, now premier of Nova Scotia, had been the first to adorn themselves with halos and laurels when an agreement was signed this fall to put federal funds into the stalled project.

As for the tax debate, he said it didn't matter whether the bill was debated for 50 days or 500 days, as long as it was done with properly.

But the Commons, he said, had only dealt with about one-third of the bill, leaving the problems that would result to future Parliaments.

Spastic Colitis Is Problem For Person Seeking to Diet

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I had my intestinal problems diagnosed as spastic colitis, so I have to be careful of my choice of foods.

My problem now is that I am also a little overweight and would like to diet, but find it difficult as I am unable to eat the usual "diet nibblers" like celery, raw carrots, cucumbers, etc.

Could you suggest a few low-calorie foods which my system could tolerate?—Mrs. R. N.

In such cases, many vegetables (and fruits) are tolerated if they are cooked, to soften the fibers, or are pureed. The celery-carrots-cucumber combination (and several other similar vegetables) is useful to help satisfy an habitual eater's craving to eat something. So try substituting some of these raw foods in cooked form. They may not be as much fun as crunchy celery, but give it a try.

Keep in mind that, when cooking or preparing them, you mustn't add anything that builds up the calories, such as putting margarine or butter on the carrots, or adding sugar if you use cooked fruit.

Another tolerable item is cottage cheese, and this will be better for your purposes, of course, if you make sure you have some made not with whole milk but skim milk (lower in calories). Or a little skim milk added to taste for a "nibble." Or a clear broth, or a soup with the fat skimmed off.

For the sake of reducing, pay attention also to the little things that often trap dieters. Spread the butter or margarine very thin; eat your eggs boiled or poached rather than fried, scrambled or as omelets. Avoid candy or frosting, of course, or sugar in coffee or tea. Say "no, thanks" when anybody passes the gravy. Use two per cent or skim milk instead of cream. Use low-calorie salad dressings.

You have a problem. I agree, in finding a way to fit both colitis and your weight problem, but it can be done.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is meant by radium congestion in the brain after taking cozalt treatments, and how long does it take to be helpful?

Cobalt, in this case, refers to metallic cobalt which has been made radioactive. It gives off radium rays, which are the same type of rays given off by either radium or conventional x-ray. In fact, there are other radioactive materials that give off gamma rays and some of them, such as iodine and cesium, have medical uses.

Cobalt is one of the powerful ones. The gamma rays (x-rays) can destroy dangerous tissue, such as cancer tissue. But they can irritate or "burn" healthy tissues, too.

The fact that abnormal tissues are more sensitive to rays than normal tissue is what makes the use of such rays valuable for such purposes.

The time required for healing is not predictable, because it depends on the strength of the rays, the length of time of exposure, and to some extent what part of the body that is exposed. Although shields are used to protect normal tissue, it is always possible to protect tissues near the site treated.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

You are the dealer and open the bidding with One Spade on the following hand:

♠ 10 6 5 3 2
♦ 4 3
♣ 10 9

What would you bid next if the opponents responded with:

1. One notrump?
2. Two clubs.
3. Two diamonds.
4. Two hearts.
5. Three diamonds.
6. Three spades.

1. Two hearts. This is obviously not a notrump type of hand and, accordingly, you should not pass. The only question is whether to bid two spades or two hearts. It is far better to mention the hearts and offer partner a choice of suits, even though you yourself prefer spades. Partner may well have a doubleton or doubleton spade and four hearts, in which case hearts will be a much more viable trump suit. If partner has equally long spades and hearts, he will almost automatically return to hearts in first suit.

2. Two hearts. Here also you bid the hearts in an effort to find a 4-4 trump fit. It would be dead wrong to bid two no-trump at this juncture, for you do not have sufficient distribution. You may of course wind up playing the hand in notrump, but you shouldn't aim for that right away.

3. Two hearts. Again you don't bypass the opportunity to locate a heart fit. You intend to show the diamond support later on and in that way paint a picture of your distribution. Thus, if partner were to bid two notrump over two hearts, you would bid three diamonds, pinpointing the singleton club.

4. Four hearts. You have all the values necessary for a game or slam bid. Alternatively you could bid three spades over two hearts, planning to show the heart support next and in that way represent the shortage of clubs. The choice is largely a matter of one's style.

5. Four diamonds. Partner is asking for a slam by his jumpshift in diamonds and you should happily go along with his plans. You have extra values that are not represented by bidding four diamonds, but the best you can do at this moment is tell partner of your trump support.

6. Four diamonds. There is no possibility of a slam and you can best suggest it by making a cuebid in diamonds. If partner simply bids four spades, you pass.

Tomorrow: Temptation.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Friday, December 17

Aries (March 21-April 19). The closing days of Mars are here to bring a philosophical element into your thinking. For now you won't be adding up the year in dollars and cents. It's what's learned that counts.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). This is going to be one Christmas you won't forget—you'll have the bills coming in regularly every month and you'll be reminded on Dec. 1 to be extravagant.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Marriages, alliances are due to gradually improve. A much greater importance in your life is the next month. You won't be fearing that you'll be lonely.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Expect to make some changes in daily routine, especially to find better ways to get things done. You're out of training now and professional results will be expected.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Know that you've been able to make those you love happy in every possible way and that is only gift you are looking for. Give freely.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). All the general speculation over what sort of world we're living in where you live are due to boil down to a definite plan within the next month. Conditions improve greatly.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). News, messages, casual meetings in your neighborhood play a significant role. Everything else in what direction you'll strike out next. Even small is big, worthwhile.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Despite the success of your present security program, you've got an eye toward getting even bigger returns. Just be sure you check out any hot tips.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You're pretty well left to your own devices for the next four weeks. Without interference to complain about, you're under pressure to start producing. Don't stall.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Confidential matters, possibly dealing with people who are strangers to your usual circle, are your first interest now. Be sure you're not being used merely in forming new partnerships.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). What has previously been nothing more than a dream can take on the dimensions of reality in the coming weeks. It's important to get out and meet the right people first.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). With the end of this cycle's portion of opportunities, now it's up to you to capitalize on them. You'll have to be willing to meet backers halfway.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—Too subjective an attitude, especially one that convinces you those who know you best. Don't be a know-it-all.

Saturday, December 18

Aries (March 21-April 19). Only that please you may not be as well received by the important. Something that practically can't hold a candle to a frivolous, sentimental bauble that appeals to the romantic.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Partners aren't going to hold you to your promises if it means you practically have to deprive yourself keeping them. What really counts is that you're willing to try.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). It may be far beyond your present means to celebrate the holidays in the ideal manner. Still, family gatherings can be just as warm on a small budget if there's love to serve.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). This may be a final Christmas to be cheerful for by this time next year, kin youngsters could be off celebrating with families of their own. Teach traditions.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). If you've waited 'til the last minute to shop or contact friends, you'll just have to accept what's available. Keep from getting confused by all the pressure.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You can rightly balk at paying premium prices simply because it's that time of the year. Knowhow, too what you buy for what on sale next month further irks you.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). If those folks are all set for a traditional presentation of gifts and bright ideas for some modern innovation aren't likely to do it, even. Elders are stubbornly old fashioned.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). As if you didn't have enough to do, you've got a surprise party. bosses are contemplating a work marathon next week. Rest up—you'll need your strength.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Double checking will let you have more time to see if anyone has been left out. The threat of lonesomeness or boredom as an overnight is strong.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Holiday obligations this year are more annoying than ever before. Be those who've cut the apron strings. It's a problem going back home.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Any lack of enthusiasm from partners will be keenly felt today. Fight to hold on to your own. Maybe your bright ideas can reinforce your mate.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Your new prominence can make you a target of, politically inclined gift givers who are trying to win you over. Very grand gestures with suspicion.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—From now 'til February, nothing stands in the way of ambitions. Once you've done what you have to, attend partners' parties. They'll be unco-operative in August.

Ottawa Makes Bid to Get Quebec Teachers on Job Insurance

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is counting on a carefully-worded definition of a public servant to finesse Quebec school teachers and hospital workers into its unemployment insurance plan.

The definition, provided in the Commons Thursday by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, clearly challenges an effort by the Quebec government to establish that the teachers and hospital workers are provincial employees.

Quebec already has indicated —the only province yet to do so —that it will not include its employees in the federal plan.

Civil Service Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier has said that under provincial Bill 62, passed in the summer, hospital, school and junior college workers are included among provincial employees.

By exercising an option to stay out of the unemployment insurance plan, Quebec would save the $20 million a year it would have had to pay in contributions as an employer, he said.

After his statement Thursday, however, Mr. Mackasey seemed confident Quebec will have to change its legal position before on hooking the 140,000 workers out of the plan.

Questioned about the effect of the definition of a public servant, he replied that "it's up to Mr. L'Allier to determine what happens."

A government source said later that to win its point, Quebec would have to pass new legislation making the teachers and hospital workers its direct employees.

"Bill 62 was an abortive attempt fo do that and now it's a question of whether they want to continue the effort."

Only in New Brunswick, still negotiating the entry of its employees into the plan Jan. 1, are school teachers the direct employees of the province.

Mr. Mackasey's definition of a public servant would include only those workers appointed and paid under civil service legislation of employed by provincial corporations and commissions.

The definition is broad enough to include provincial hydro, highway and construction workers, many of them high unemployment risks.

Under previous unemployment insurance legislation, the provinces could buy coverage for some of their employees, in practice those most likely to be laid off from time to time.

After Jan. 1, when the new insurance plan takes fuller effect, the provinces will have to include all their employees or none at all—a requirement intended to ease the high-risk burden on the insurance fund.

All other salaried employees and wage-earners in the country will be included in the plan in the new year.

Mail Truckers Fight Ruling

WINNIPEG (CP) — Private mail haulers in Western Canada have formed an alliance to oppose the post office department's methods of taking over from private contractors the transportation of mail within cities.

The group, with members in all four Western provinces, has requested a meeting with Postmaster-General Jean-Pierre Coke. A spokesman for the group said unless the post office shows "good faith" and prepares to reverse its position on compensation, the companies are prepared to discontinue their services almost immediately.

Counsel for the group, Ian L. Sentman, said the truckers, to be known as the Independent Mail Contractors of Western Canada, have indications of support from Eastern Canada and hope to form a national body.

He said the post office is prepared to buy the trucks and equipment used in mail transport from the private companies, but has refused to pay terminal compensation.

He said representatives of the group are prepared to fly to Ottawa to meet with the federal minister.

The service provided by the firms is the pick-up and transfer of mail from the mail boxes to the post office and the delivery of mail to the terminal boxes.

Surgeons Assailed By Doctor

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ralph Nader associate charged Thursday that at least 10,000 Americans die annually as a result of two million unnecessary surgical operations.

The victims "are not exclusively the old and the sick who would die anyway," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe.

"Tragically, they often include the young and the healthy."

Wolfe, a representative of Nader's health-research group, told the United States commission on medical malpractice that the 10,000 include at least 250 victims of "unnecessary tonsilectomies and adenoidectomies, the 500 that die of unnecessarily performed appendectomies and another 220 that die from unnecessary hysterectomies. . ."

Wolfe said he got the figures, which he said he feels are too conservative, from a little-noticed book, How to Avoid Unnecessary Surgery, recently published by a "well-trained and highly-respected surgeon" who used the pseudonym Dr. Lawrence Williams.

Babies Killed By Rectal Thermometers

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of Montreal radiologists and surgeons says the use of rectal thermometers on newborn babies should be banned to prevent perforation of the rectal passage and the membrane lining the abdominal and pelvic cavities.

The doctors say they reached that conclusion after reviewing the cases of nine babies, five of whom died from complications resulting from rectal perforation.

A number of appropriate musical numbers were given with contributions from the choir accompanied by Linda Johnston as organist by Linda Douglas Spearman with the guitar. A duet was rendered by Douglas Spearman and Ronald Spearman; a solo by Pearl Johnson and by a girls' trio Jackie Emerson, Melanie May and Cathy Bunner.

The Bible study group met at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Wilson on Wednesday with a good attendance of members. There was a potluck dinner at noon.

The Fellowship Club met recently with Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Picton as guest speakers. Both had served as tutors in India to help the people there to help themselves in better working conditions, more modern methods. Mr. Brown worked with the adults in the factories, while Mrs. Brown taught pre-school children. A number of interesting slides were shown with Mrs. Brown giving a running commentary.

Quinte-Algonquin Trail Is Approved

Ottawa to Provide $125,900 for Project

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

An early commencement of work on the proposed recreational trail through Prince Edward and Hastings counties to Algonquin Park was expected today by local Canada Manpower officials, following announcement Friday that the project had received federal government approval.

Approval of the Belleville and District Employment Committee trail project was announced last night by Hastings M.P. Lee Grills.

Planned as a winter works project under the federal government's local initiative program, the recreational trail project is expected to provide employment for up to 60 or more people until April or May of next year.

Plans for the trail were announced early in November but before the project could get underway federal approval was necessary, together with allotment of the necessary funds.

This morning, Mr. Grant Harvey, administrator for the trail project said that everything was ready to go once the official contract forms were signed early next week.

First thing to be done, according to Mr. Harvey, will be to set up branch offices in Picton, Madoc and Bancroft, with hiring of office supervisors and clerical staff. Project headquarters will be in Belleville.

Then research personnel will be hired to go out into the field to record facilities and consult with tourist councils, river authorities, lands and forests and municipal authorities. The information obtained will be processed and collated at headquarters in Belleville.

From the information gained it will be determined where the trail should go.

Hastings MP Lee Grills in announcing government approval of the scheme, said $125,900 had been alloted for the project.

Italy Fears Cheap Dollar

"I forgot your present!"

WASHINGTON (CP) — After a delay reported to be caused by Italian protests at the size of the planned devaluation of the U.S. dollar, the Group of Ten industrial powers resumed their search for a solution to the world's monetary muddle.

"The negotiations are proceeding at a snail's pace," Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said Thursday night. The weary finance ministers recessed for a belated dinner, then decided—at 10:20 p.m. EST—not to resume the session until this morning.

However, French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing said that "We've progressed . . . we've isolated the difficulties."

The minister indicated the remaining problems were mostly between trading partners of the U.S. rather than between the U.S. and other countries.

Earlier, Connally, who is presiding over the talks in the many-turreted Old Red Castle of the Smithsonian Institution, had voiced hope for an agreement this weekend. The goal is realignment of the exchange values of the major non-Communist currencies.

Sources close to the dragging deliberations said late Thursday that Italy, whose lira is considered to be about five per cent undervalued in relation to the dollar, has complained that a seven-per-cent dollar devaluation would be excessive.

It would leave the lira overvalued, the Italian delegation believes, and this would unfairly undercut the competitiveness of Italian goods in the U.S. and world markets.

Last of My Lai Accused Acquitted

FORT MEADE, Md. (AP) — The My Lai trials are over.

Col. Oran K. Henderson, the last and highest ranking U.S. soldier to be tried, was found not guilty Friday of all charges that he concealed the killings of more than 100 civilians by his troops.

Of 25 men once accused and six who stood trial, only 29-year-old Lieut. William Calley was convicted of any criminal responsibility for the slayings of Vietnamese through the South Vietnamese hamlet Nov. 16, 1968.

His life sentence for murdering 22 civilians has been reduced to 20 years in an appeals process still under way. Calley awaits the outcome in his apartment at Fort Benning, Ga.

Yahya Faces Irate People

From AP-REUTER

Radio Pakistan announced today that President Agha Mohammed Yaha Khan soon will turn power over to a "representative government," but country-wide demonstrations against his handling of the war with India threatened to topple his military regime.

Protests against Yahya by members of the Pakistan People's party, whose leader is Prime Minister Zulfikar 'Ali Bhutto, erupted in Lahore and Peshawar Friday night. A procession in Peshawar, 100 miles from Rawalpindi, marched to the cantonment house built by Yahya and threatened to burn it down.

The bar association in Lahore, Pakistan's second largest city, passed a resolution demanding Yahya's resignation. Other demonstrators shouted anti-Yahya and anti-Indian slogans at a rally in Lahore, 25 miles west of the Indian border.

The Rawalpindi broadcast said Yahya had summoned Bhutto home from New York, and that immediately upon his return power would be transferred to the new government under a new constitution.

Bhutto was named last week as Pakistan's foreign minister as well as deputy prime minister in a new government that Yahya promised to form early next year. He was sent to the United Nations last week for the debate on the India-Pakistan war.

In New Delhi, Defence Minister Jagjivan Ram called for talks between India and Pakistan to settle all their disputes, but made no mention of any ceasefire violations reported earlier by a military spokesman.

Britain Will Take Time Recognizing Bangla Desh

Canada to Be Cautious Too

OTTAWA (CP) — Britain intends to take its time in according official recognition to the new state of Bangla Desh, British Prime Minister Edward Heath said Friday.

Canada, informed sources said, intends to move just as cautiously.

Mr. Heath told a news conference at the end of a quick stop-over in Ottawa en route to Bermuda it is "too early" to decide whether to recognize the country born of India's conquest of East Pakistan.

"We have certain criteria, but we are going to wait and see how things develop."

He and Prime Minister Trudeau, in 3½ hours of talks sandwiched into a seven-hour visit by the British leader, had discussed the whole question of the Indian subcontinent." Hit gave no details.

Canadian sources said the two prime ministers did not get into the specifics of recognition. But they emphasized that Canada is as determined as Britain to proceed carefully.

"We'll want to look at the question from every side," said one informant. He indicated it would be several months, at least, before Canada extends recognition.

Rhodesia, the international monetary crisis, and Britain's prospective entry into the European Economic Community were other topics covered by the two leaders.

Mr. Trudeau was reported by Canadian officials to have questioned the British prime minister closely on the proposed terms for ending Rhodesia's rebellion against Britain and granting that African state formal independence.

The officials said Mr. Heath did not try to enlist Canadian support for the settlement it worked out last month between his government and the racist regime of Premier Ian Smith.

And they added that he wouldn't have got it if he had tried. The Canadian government was said to have serious reservations about the deal, which officials say contains too many loopholes and makes black Africa can majority rule in Rhodesia an altogether too-distant prospect.

Police Desk Unaware Dead Youth in Custody

KITCHENER (CP) — An inquest into the jail-cell hanging of a 16-year-old youth was told Friday that the front desk at the Kitchener police station was unaware the youth was in custody.

A string of police witnesses testified that Raymond Cebula of Kitchener spent the last six hours of his life in jail overlooked by the police who picked him up and unknown to the desk staff on duty one floor above him.

Police raided 7 locations in the Kitchener-Waterloo area and uncovered a large cache of goods later found to have been taken in a series of break-ins.

But in the period Cebula spent in a holding cell he was never charged with any crime nor was he interrogated.

Ironically, when the youth was discovered hanging by his belt from a cell crossbar, officers involved in the case had just realized he was in the basement cell block and were on their way down the steps.

Testimony established that no one in the raiding party had filled out an arrest sheet to say Cebula was still in the cells. Officers testified no form was made out because it was intended to question Cebula and make out the sheet only if he was charged.

As the day wore on, the front desk shift changed twice and no one passed verbal or written word that Cebula was still locked up. The last words anyone heard from him were a plea for an audience with a justice of the peace to find out why he was being held.

U.S. Alerts Navy and Planes For Cuban Attacks on Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has placed naval and air units on the alert to back up a warning that it will not tolerate further Cuban shipping attacks that threaten American citizens.

The state department added Friday that the U.S. also would aid any ship under attack by Cuba if requested by the country registering its vessel.

After two days of considering what action to take in the wake of the Cuban attack and seizure of two Miami-based Panamanian freighters—an attack that involved the wounding of a U.S. citizen—state department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said in a statement:

"The United States government considers these armed attacks upon commercial vessels and statements that Cuba intends to continue such attacks to constitute a clear and present threat to freedom of navigation and commerce in the Caribbean and a threat to America's citizens.

The Pentagon said later it would take "certain preliminary measures" to support the state department's announcement.

It was learned at the same time that U.S. naval and air units have been put on the alert in connection with the incidents.

The situation that developed on Friday's actions began Dec. 7 when Cuba seized the Panamanian freighter the Lyda Express, charging the ship had hauled arms and agents for Cuban forces.

A sister ship, the Johony Express, was attacked and seized Dec. 15 with its captain, Jose Villa, and two crew members reported wounded. Villa was described as a former Cuban who now is a naturalized American citizen.

Havana made the same charges of aiding and Cuban counter-revolutionaries against the Johony Express, and, as quoted by the state department, said there would be further attacks and seizures "at any distance from our coasts."

Potter Criticized

Authority Members Upset by Letter

Ontario cabinet minister intervention in what is considered a strictly local problem drew sharp criticism Thursday from members of the Metro River Conservation Authority.

The issue at stake is occupancy of an island in Lingham Lake in Gilmourborough township where Peterborough tourist operator Kenneth Wyatt runs a seasonal fishing lodge on property leased by the authority from the crown.

The authority wants Mr. Wyatt to vacate the island on which he has no lease, but the tourist operator has approached highranking government officials in an effort to have his Lingham Lake operation continued.

But it was a letter from Quinte riding member Hon. Richard T. Potter, minister without portfolio, which roused the ire of several of the authority members.

The letter from Dr. Potter asked why Mr. Wyatt was being asked to vacate the Lingham Lake operation as there strong efforts were being made to promote tourism in Ontario.

The authority's Crown lease for the Lingham Lake area dates back to about 1962, its agreement ruling out any permanent structures on the property.

For a number of years, however, Mr. Wyatt has been flying in American fishermen to the lake, the operation originating with the use of tents for overnight accommodation.

According to authority officials, Mr. Wyatt now has two permanent type structures on the island with facilities and accommodation for 15 or 12 fishermen.

A year ago when repairs were being carried out on the Lingham Lake dam and it was necessary to draw down the lake level to a minimum level, Mr. Wyatt complained that the fish were being killed.

Last spring the authority asked Mr. Wyatt to vacate the island but when he already had reservations made, he was given an extension to the middle of October.

The stand taken by the authority is that if Mr .Wyatt is allowed to maintain permanent structures on the island other people could expect the same rights.

Yesterday Guy Hughes, authority water control advisory board chairman reviewed the background of Mr. Wyatt's resort operation on Lingham Lake and read a long list of correspondence from various government officials ending with Dr. Potter's letter.

Government authority representatives Carl Thompson and Delbert Harvey took strong exception to the letter declaring that they wanted no part of authority actions if it was to become a political football.

"It's time the government kept its nose out of our business," said Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson said as far as he was concerned Mr. Wyatt was trespassing on authority property and either he would move out or "I will not be a member of the authority."

Mr. Harvey took the same stand.

"If the authority is to become a political football, I want no part of it," he said. "If interference from politicians continues, my resignation will go in."

Belleville alderman Robin Jeffrey, chairman of the authority education and information committee, felt Dr. Potter had written the letter without knowledge of all the facts.

"Once Dr. Potter has the facts, he will do the right thing and will no longer support Mr. Wyatt," she asserted.

Conservation field officer John While said the authority's quarrel with Mr. Wyatt was that he had permanent type buildings on the island — not that he was taking fish out of the lake.

Authority members voted to turn the matter over to their solicitor to take the necessary action to have Mr. Wyatt vacate the island.

Council House Fund Growing

TYENDINAGA RESERVE (Staff) — The fund for rebuilding the council house of the Bay of Quinte Mohawks on this reserve has now passed the half-way mark with the reception of a $12,000 federal grant.

The Mohawks now have $26,500 toward their goal of $50,000 — estimated cost of replacing the centre which burned last summer.

The federal grant, promised in November to a delegation from the reserve who spoke with Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development in Toronto, arrived recently, a Mohawk spokesman confirmed last night.

The building was the centre of Mohawk community life on the reserve, and was used for a wide range of events from council meetings to dances.

Since the fire the Mohawks themselves have been busy raising money for its reconstruction through bingos, raffles, and a walkathon.

Santa A Hit at Kente

As usual Santa Claus (Michael Marcenko, 13) played the traditional role of a jolly good guy and his presence stimulated an affectionate gesture from gangster mall Geraldine, portrayed by Ron Orr, 13, in a skit written and produced by grade 8 students for the Kente school's annual Christmas concert in Ameliasburg last night. Parents filled the auditorium to overflowing to watch the variety show.

Ottawa Approves Trail

"The trail project will provide needed winter employment and will serve a very useful purpose for the future," Mr. Grills said.

Among the uses envisaged for the 200-mile recreational trail are hiking, snowmobiling, horseback riding, trail-biking, skiing, snowshoeing and camping.

James Staveley, local Manpower counsellor, who with other members of the employment committee, has spent many hours in formulating plans for the project, said committee members were very pleased at the project's acceptance.

"It's one of the first local initiative works program approved for this area and we are tickled pink" he said.

"The trail will mean much for future generations."

Mr. Staveley said the local initiative program was an ambitious one which called for co-operation from all groups and municipal bodies.

"We've had good response in this area, but we invite more involvement," he said.

The programs already approved and those pending would provide "a good boost for winter employment in this area."

Government approval was for the full $125,000 asked for by the local committee, but because of the lateness in getting the project underway, Mr. Harvey felt that more than the originally planned 62 people could be put to work.

City Police Force Has Three-man Diving Team

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Unlike the crystal clear waters of the Bahamas, surfaces of area lakes, streams and rivers present a murky shadow of what lies beneath.

Divers crawl over sunken logs, rocks and debris which has accumulated throughout the years, beneath a layer of silt which rises to meet the aqua-lung breather.

Finding something on the bottom is like looking for the proverbial needle in a haystack. Whoever is called upon to take part in such a hunt must undergo a long and detailed learning period.

With winter fast approaching . . . even with the absence of the white 'n flakes . . . nature's water courses would present a chilling response to anyone bold enough to dive to the depths.

Frogmen have moved indoors.

At Albert College's swimming pools, professional divers for both the Belleville City Police and OPP forces, are taking advantage of the winter months to both train and exercise.

Robert Thomas, a four-year veteran of the city force, learned his underwater skills as a hobby, while working in Ottawa on the police force, he began operational diving with the highly skilled teams in the capital city.

In May of 1969, four months after moving to Belleville, he became the first officer to qualify for police diving with the Ottawa school, outside of that force.

Belleville, which at that time, had no underwater diving equipment on hand, had acquired its first SCUBA man.

With provincial police diving squads fully throughout the district, Belleville decided it needed its own aquatic rescue and search unit.

Another constable, John Walker, who joined the force in July of 1968 began his training. This year, a third man has been added, Constable 'Buck' Foster.

This year, Constable Foster performed his first and the most daring part of the four to five-month training program.

On the bottom of the school pool, he sat quietly, heavy lead weights across his knees and bubbles of air from backstrapped tanks, surfacing with each regular breath.

Slowly, he removed fingers, facemask and last of all, his tanks.

Without the air tanks, he is alone on the bottom of the swimming pool. His trainer is floating overhead, waiting to dive to case of panic or emergency. In the open water, however, this is not possible. The diver must prove himself in controlled situations before he can be allowed to undertake no-diving searches.

The diver removed his weights and floated to the surface. A quick gulp of air and a short swim and he returned to the bottom.

This is the danger point.

The mask is set. He cannot breathe, and he must find his equipment in water which because of the chlorine, makes visibility distorted and difficult.

All went well. The diver found his tank, regained his underwater breathing, and donned equipment.

"Without your mask, you can't see a thing; you have to feel your way around down there," the student diver commented, after emerging from his test.

His instructor says he is an "exceptional" student. The confidence drill has been passed.

Constable Thomas said in the case of all divers, hobbyists and professionals, a person's original swimming ability plays only a small role towards SCUBA diving.

"A man or woman can be the best swimmer around, but still not cut it with this. You soon tell. They've got to overcome a natural fear of underwater loss of perspective," the instructor said during a short break from snorkelling above his partners.

With the three-team, the city police force has an annual budget of $250 for up-to-date equipment.

Police diving work takes many forms, from looking for stolen goods which can be attached beneath docks or launch, bodies for victims of drowned victims, and checking out underwater evidence also requested by the police.

Sometimes calling upon actions can bring humor to their job.

A young man had been reported drowned. He and Constable Walker were called in to search the muddy water of the Trent River.

Visibility was less than a foot.

"Unlike the Lloyd Bridges program (Sea Hunt), one doesn't flail long arms rapidly. The manoeuvre is a lot of easy-go, like, slowly stroke are the order", the instructor explained.

Employing the divers creed of "never swim alone and sometimes in a trio," the diving pair were pulling their way over the river bottom.

Suddenly, Constable Thomas' hand came in contact with something that shifted.

"It gave me one hell of a start, when this thing moved under my hand." The "thing" was a baby grand piano.

Later, the missing man's body was located.

Visibility in area waters is lucky to be two feet, but the divers occasionally have a chance to dive in clearer waters other than the indoor pools.

In Georgian Bay, the government operates an underwater habitat, testing conditions on beneath the watery surface and observing various fish life. It was to this aquatic land that the Belleville police constable recently visited.

"It makes quite a break" he said.

Another break will come, if the ice ever does, when diving teams turn polar and go through the ice holes.

Dinner Meeting Winds Up Year

The city parks board wrapped up its business for, one last Wednesday with the December session taking the form of a dinner meeting at Hotel Quinte.

The board approved a recommendation granting the Pinton Pushers Motorcycle Club permission to use the Exhibition Park racetrack on Friday June 30, 1972 for the Ontario half-mile championship.

Rental fee will be 15 per cent of the gross revenue with costs of track reconditioning in the amount of $140 to be assumed by the board.

Parks superintendent Lloyd Sayer was directed to determine the development work program which could be carried out this winter on the west riverbank park.

A federal provincial municipal development loan for $51,-250 has been approved for the project to include road development, provision of a swimming beach, construction of a changer room and a canteen, along with parking area and roadway, but weather is expected to rule out much of the work being done this winter.

However, terms of the loan call for the development to be carried out as a winter works program and it is expected that extension beyond the March 31 date will be sought to complete the project.

The only other item of business left for the parks board this year is the opening of tenders for the new parks office and garden centre to be erected on North Park Stret.

Tenders will be opened interim month, at which time a recommendation will be made for forwarding to city council.

Sharing Program Receives Support

Belleville's Yardmen Benefit Fund has made a "sizeable donation" to the Christmas Sharing Program of the Central Volunteer Bureau.

The yardmens' contribution is in addition to the support they give the program as one of the referral agencies.

The management of Stephens - Adamson Company and the Four Seasons Hotel staff are among the local businesses making a contribution to the plan to provide a Christmas dinner for all Belleville's needy families.

The owner of a city construction firm has promised $250 to help buy hampers for families who wish to remain anonymous and therefore have hampers packed for them by project volunteers.

Trenton to Install Industrial Sewer

TRENTON (Staff) — Public Utilities Commissioners received news Thursday to have town crews extend water mains into the industrial park at the top of Sidney Street. Although some lots are already serviced, provision must be made for each new industries as Robin Hood Multifoods.

Cost of expanding water service along Douglas Road and through the park is estimated to cost $63,000 and work will commence when council and the Ontario Municipal Board have approved the project.

New sewers in the area and a sewage pumping station will be built subsequently by the town at an appropriate cost of $200,000.

Doug Manlow, PUC manager said yesterday a contractor would be hired to do excavations for the Douglas Road job but municipal sewers will do rest of the work. Trenton saved $40,000 by having town employees install new sewers on Front St. this summer.

The commission is expected shortly to approve another expansion to municipal water services — new mains feeding out of the Victoria Street pumping station to connect with new services on Dundas West. Tenders have been called for this construction to be handled by private contractors at a cost of at least $125,000.

Education Week

Budget Is Set

Education Week, 1972, will be observed March 6 through 10, and plans are already under way to make it the largest yet.

A budget of $1,200 was approved this week by both the public and separate school boards. Hastings county board will pay $1,200, the separate school board $255. Loyalist College $250 and Ontario School for the Deaf $22.

The amount assessed each board is determined on a per capita basis. Last year's budget was about $800.

The education week committee, headed by C. J. Mowat, principal of V. R. Carswell School in Trenton, includes members from all educational institutions in the county.

Biggest expense for the week will be production of an 8-page tabloid newsletter to cost $800. It will go out to all parts of the county to acquaint ratepayers with programs and progress in the schools.

Two bear-pit sessions with guest speakers will be held, one in Bancroft. Line charges to carry the Bancroft broadcasts will be $100.

Education Week breakfasts will be held as usual in Bancroft and Belleville March 6 to kick off this week's events. Cost of subsidizing the breakfasts will be $300. About 200 school children are invited to attend the breakfasts.

Accountants Hear Univac Speaker

Programs as used in Computers was the subject of a talk given by John R. Sandiford, Director of Education for Univac Ltd., to the Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants recently.

He detailed the various programs that can be used and the different types of language used for scheduling programs. Mr. Sandiford stressed the fact that all programs must be set up in a machine language which can be used on any computer.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Margaret Jones and thanked by member Arthur Jacobs.

Guest speaker at the next, Jan. 24 meeting, will be Noel Stockton, of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. His talk will be entitled New Unemployment Insurance Legislation.

Last Minute Checks

Winter is a time for learning. For city police Constables Robert Thomas, left, and M. (Buck) Foster, the right, classes are held under the waters at Albert College. Constable Foster is the third and newest member of the forces SCUBA team, and for him, testing time comes up in the spring. Every Tuesday morning, the divers don between 25 and 60 pounds of equipment and test various situations at the bottom of the pool.

Separate Board Election Jan. 11

Hastings - Prince Edward Separate School Board will begin 1972 with an inaugural meeting including election of a chairman and vice-chairman and consideration of the policy committee's recommendations on board organization.

The Jan. 11 meeting will be public, with a special push being made to get out separate school supporters.

The inaugural meeting was decided upon after the board turned down a recommendation from administration that the officers be elected at the regular meeting Dec. 14. Instead, it passed a motion extending the life of the present board structure until the Jan. 11 meeting.

Administration had also proposed a committee setup for the new year that met with objections from policy committee chairman Paul Fleming.

He said his committee was preparing recommendations on board organization and committees and the administration should have forwarded its suggestions to his committee.

Mr. Fleming asked that his committee's recommendations be considered at the Jan. 11 meeting.

But Msgr. J. P. Sullivan said the policy report should have been ready for the Dec. 14 board meeting.

"It's highly irregular to bring in a report at an inaugural meeting," he said.

However, the board decided to have the policy committee's report at the inaugural meeting and defer setting up new committees for 1972 until the report has been adopted.

The first regular board meeting will be held Jan. 18.

Indian Problem

An Indian spokesman out west recently served warning that the time was coming when his people may resort to arms — outright militancy — to further their claims to a better deal for his people.

It is difficult to know sometimes exactly what the Indians want, such is their own disunity, and much is the clamor from first one spokesman or band, then another and another. The Department of Indian Affairs, moreover, and its minister, Jean Chretien, in Indian eyes can do no right.

However, in one sphere at least the mood of the Indians may be understood more readily. And that is in their opposition to further encroachment on their white man reserves through marriage. They see in this an inevitable dilution of Indian blood in succeeding generations and ultimately the destruction of the country's native culture and heritage.

Nowhere are the implications of this more apparent than in a recent court case in which an Objibway woman, Jeanette Cordiere Lavell, 28, successfully challenged a provision of the Indian Act stipulating that any Indian woman marrying a non-Indian automatically forfeits her Indian status. A federal court agreed that it contravened the Bill of Rights by discriminating against women. This could lead to a mass migration onto reserves by whites and acquisition of rights by gradually whiter-generations of children. In short, an end to the Indian fact in Canada, Ironic. Chretien is on record as saying he would like to see the decision appealed.

Meanwhile that determined champion of Indian rights, Kahn-Tineta Horn, is circulating a document, nearly half a million entitled "Caughnawaga Drama." Miss Horn, it will be recalled, has been busy trying to discourage white infiltration of her reserve at Caughnawaga, near Montreal. Among those she wants evicted are her sister and her white husband.

"Bonjour Bebe . . . Can I visit you," says the cowboy to an approaching squaw, a pipe of "peace" in her hand. Says she: "Just get lost!" The cowboy persists, asking the woman to speak to him in French, whereupon she clobbers him over the head with her pipe. As she stalks off the stunned cowpoke exclaims: "Une vrale squatiste! (a true separatist).

Underneath the cartoon, which reveals clever artistry as well as keen wit, Miss Horn (now studying law at McGill) has written: "Cowboy events cast their shadows before."

There is talk of an appeal then, against the federal court decision, and in view of its implications for the survival of the Indian race this is a course that is to be fervently hoped for. The gentleman out west who talks of Indians resorting to violence we must speak out against such a prospect. In resolving whatever issues exist and in trying to create a better deal for the Indians the government and the native people must set an example of peaceful evolution. We cannot tolerate in Canada the mindless anarchy that now ravages Ireland for instance.

Hope Eternal

"I never gave up hope," Richard G. Fecteau, 43, a Navy civilian employee of Lynn, Mass., told newsmen the other day on his arrival home after 19 years in a Communist Chinese prison camp, nine of them in solitary confinement.

What a superlative quality is hope. How true it is that it "springs eternal." It helped of course that Fecteau (how he came to be in Chinese hands is not stated) was generally well treated by his captors. Now his greatest test — adaptation to the realities of American society in 1971 — may be ahead.

For Mary Ann Harbert, 25, who spent three years in Chinese prisons, the ordeal of confinement was much less severe. She even played table-tennis with Chinese girls she was permitted to see.

How many others still languish in camps in China and elsewhere in the Communist world? The fate of U.S. airmen in North Vietnamese hands, for example, as well as political prisoners in Russia, Eastern Europe and its satellited is one of continuing concern. For innumerable persons unknown to us this Christmas, but belonging none the less to the family of man, home is a prison camp or maybe a solitary cell.

Plant Closes

The continuing decline of the small cheese plant is manifested once again with the news that the United Empire Loyalist Factory at Dorland near Adolphustown has closed for the winter and is not expected to reopen. If this should be the case it will be the fourth closure in Lennox and Addington in the last three years — victims of such factors as milk quota restrictions, increased operating costs and mergers.

P.M. in His Constituency

No Dictation by Militant Minorities, Blacks Told

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Ever watched Pierre Elliott Trudeau at work? Not as Prime Minister, but as member of Parliament.

In his Montreal constituency of Mount Royal, an upper class riding, he is Pierre Trudeau, MP first and PM second.

And like any other MP, the PM goes back to the riding for a public rally, a hop-skip-and-jump series of smaller meetings and a continuous round of handshaking.

Like all the others, he must go back to make sure the faithful are keeping the home fires burning for him while he is busy in Ottawa, doing some weekend political barnstorming in the Maritimes, Ontario or the West, jetting off to Fareway Places for fun - and - games, or fact-to-facing with other VIPs in world capitals.

Not that he has much to worry about in Mount royal.

First time they sent him to Ottawa, they gave him a comfortably secure 13,115 votes. Then they sent him back, but with potential enough that two months later the 1965 election, he was particularly secretary to then Prime Minister Lester Pearson.

The second time he ran, in the '68 race, it was as Prime Minister and Liberal pack leader, and Mount Royal went overboard for him.

It was just about as close to a unanimous vote of confidence as any constituency ever gave its MP, with 37,602 against the Conservative runner-up's 1,985.

With an edge like that, what MP really HAS to go back to the constituency between elections?

Pierre Trudeau.

At least he seems to think he must.

And he does it in style.

Uses the "local" occasion on the riding platform to outline "national" points for the whole country.

Because he IS the PM as well as MP, he runs into activists who like to parade their social militancy by "socking it to Number One," as a black student frankly phrased it when he let fly with a "loaded" question this last time the Prime Minister made his constituency rounds in Mount Royal.

The young black, named Kenny Jackson, wanted the Prime Minister to do something about quelling the writings of Eldridge Cleaver, Angela Davis and other negro revolutionaries into Canadian school textbooks, "our brothers and sisters are made aware of our Afro heritage."

The question was not answered — then.

Another black, Leroy Hutchinson, asked bluntly against discrimination in not being "invited" to one of the Prime Minister's meetings.

Both blacks read him a lecture on how things SHOULD be done.

He reserved his reply for his main constituency meeting attended by some 1,500 people.

It was, that reserved in fact, "participatory democracy could become "extreme" with activist groups "assaulting" their will even against that of the majority — be done by the government.

He said that a small group of extremists giving orders to an MP was more than the sanity of disinterested citizens who say "you are the members so for the job and we will see you next election".

When a minority tries dictating to the government, he said, democracy is endangered.

That took care of the problem of the militant minority. God it, it was the majority's vote, stupid.

His advice to the subdued or even the intimidated minority was the direct opposite. On guard, was Trudeau's theme, dan-rempants, keep vigilant.

This was the small English-speaking minority in Quebec which worries that the provincial government's hard-driving campaign to make French the "working language" imperils its traditional mother tongue rights.

As a citizen of Quebec, he added, he "regretted any move in the direction of unilingualism".

Further, he did not believe his language could be imposed through government edict or even legislation.

Best advice he gave was that they should support and elect representatives who will not let it happen.

TORONTO — In reorganizing his government, once he has set his inner-inner cabinet, Premier Davis has to decide on the number of departments he will have in future.

While he accepts the report in principle, it is unlikely the premier will follow through on the recommendations word for word.

The report particularly tends to overlook political considerations.

For example, it not only proposes that the present departments of mines and lands and forests be done away with and most of their present functions be combined in a new department of natural resources, but it makes no mention at all of a special recognition for Northern Ontario (such as it now has in the department of mines and northern affairs).

You can see a thrust for certain that in the final reorganization Northern Ontario will be there somewhere.

Then the report proposes that the department of municipal affairs be done away with and its functions incorporated into the new ministry of finance and intergovernmental affairs.

Mr. Davis already has let it be known he is hesitant about this.

He also has said he is considering a separate department of housing (the report recommended this be tied in with social services).

Finally there is the straight question of jobs. The recommendations of the report would mean a full-time complement of only 20 ministers, though it suggests that some parliamentary assistants could be added to these (these would be new jobs, Ontario, though used at Ottawa).

In his present cabinet Davis already has 20 full time ministers plus two ministers-without-portfolio. Also he has committed himself to bring a woman into his government and there is no doubt he will want to introduce.

One or two of the senior ministers probably will be retired, but even so the premier will want more elbow room than this will give him.

He has not seemed to be too enthusiastic about the "assistant" suggestions, possibly because such appointees could easily do not have cabinet rank.

A possibility is that he will establish a new category of minister, possibly "associate" ministers, who would have cabinet rank but not have the responsibility for a department or a policy field.

Thus Lou Bernier, the present minister of mines and northern affairs, could be named associate minister of northern affairs, in the ministry of the provincial secretary for resources and resources.

There would be a quite logical function in seeing that the interests of the north were taken care of and looked after in the various areas, including highways and natural resources, etc., coming into this policy field.

The first woman in the government could be named an associate minister in the social services field.

Almost definitely Mr. Davis will not reduce the size of the cabinet and will come up with something such as this.

Hastings county not only led every other county in the province in 1941 in the number of fires but was the only county in Ontario to show an increase of one million pounds during that period. Total production for this county in the 11 months ending Nov. 30 was 8,853,899 pounds as compared with 7,907 pounds last year.

Four passengers in a motor car narrowly escaped a plunge into the icy waters of the Moira River at O'Brien's Bridge, seven miles north of Belleville on Highway 37, when the car overturned while in which they were riding collided with the supporting steel girder of the bridge and became suspended in mid-air.

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is back at his 1920s slang.

He first learned English on the street in those years and the expressions of that time seem to have stuck with him.

In the last couple of years, he has used "crummy" and "lousy" and in the last week or so has employed "Buster" several times, such as in "look after yourself, Buster."

The opposition took it up this week in the Commons and Gerald Baldwin, Conservative House leader, said at one point to Mr. Trudeau: "Did you get that, Buster?"

The prime minister does not often stay for Commons debates. But he did so Tuesday for the two-hour argument on the government's second application of the guillotine rule to end discussion of the tax change bill.

Neither does he sit patiently for some of the opposition's criticisms—especially when they come from Elden Woolliams. He pokes fun at the big-voiced Conservative from Calgary North.

Mr. Trudeau interrupted him with: "Come on, Buster, you can do better than that."

When Mr. Woolliams completed his peroration about the guillotine rule being a mockery of parliamentary freedom and of freedom of speech, in that case, the prime minister called out:

"Take him away. Take him out."

"The government stands behind this bill and its party and will meet the leader of the Opposition on the hustings when that time comes," he proclaimed with a grin.

Mr. Laing didn't mention that he had already announced that he will not be a candidate himself in the next election.

The government continues to be ultra-cautious on the subject of abortion.

Kenneth Robinson, Liberal MP for Toronto Lakeshore, has put three recent questions on the subject.

Here are the questions and the answers he got on Nov. 29, Dec. 8 and Dec. 13:

"Is the government considering an amendment to section 237 of the Criminal Code so that all references to therapeutic abortion committees will be omitted?"

Justice Minister John Turner: "Consideration of proposals of this nature is being left in abeyance until after the special (Commons) debate on abortion is held."

"Will the government consider the feasibility and necessity of conducting a study on the effects of abortion upon society?"

Health Minister John Munro: "The forthcoming proposed debate on abortion in Parliament should allow the government the opportunity to consider a study on the effects of abortion upon society."

"Will the government consider the advisability of defining abortion as the termination of a pregnancy before 20 weeks' gestation?"

Mr. Munro: "In the expected debate relating to the matter of abortion it may develop that a definition of abortion becomes advisable."

Mr. Trudeau has promised a one-day debate on the subject. He hasn't said when, apart from maybe some time next year.

Press Hits 'Secret Source' Nixon

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — When the Washington Post blew Henry Kissinger's cover Wednesday as the secret source of Nixon administration views on current U.S.-Soviet relations it fractured a long-held tradition of White House-press working arrangements.

And it brought to a head the growing concern among the Washington press corps over the increasing number of "background" and "deep background" press briefings in which the identity of the government spokesman is withheld.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler let it be known Nixon was irked and that Ziegler found the action "unacceptable." One correspondent who was party to the Kissinger interview joked at the criticism of The Post and Ziegler called a meeting with White House reporters to draft a new voluntary code of regulations.

But The Post remained unrepentant, said executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee saying the news was of such importance The Post was justified in its action. Subsequently the New York Times also fingered Kissinger as the source.

The practice of background briefings had been abused, with the government using the press as a vehicle for "its version of the news, its interpretation of the news and its policy, without accountability," Bradlee said. The Post had engaged "in this deception . . . long enough."

Bradley asserted The Post had not conducted independently that Kissinger, Nixon's right-hand man on international affairs, was the source. It wasn't much of a secret among the press—and from now on would make every effort to attribute information to its sources.

The Kissinger incident occurred when five pool reporters were invited aboard the presidential plane on the trip home from Nixon's meeting in the Azores with French President Pompidou. Kissinger spoke on a "background" basis, meaning his remarks could be attributed to an administration spokesman without identifying Kissinger.

When the reporters pressed him on the Soviet question, he went on "deep background," meaning it couldn't be attributed to anyone even indirectly and must be written as if from the reporter's own knowledge.

The Post and Kissinger's headline-grabbing remarks was that unless the Russians produced the kind of mutual restraint in the war with Pakistan "a new look might have to be taken at the president's summitry plans." When the pool reporters fed their information to colleagues, many stories stressed Nixon's trip to Moscow might be cancelled.

Ziegler said the remarks had been interpreted in a "highly speculative way" and the possibility of cancelling the trip was not "a live issue."

Cornwall's New Mayor

From the Cornwall Standard-Freeholder

Today, at a tender political age of 32, he is the youngest champion in the annals of Cornwall mayoralty battles.

In fact, as Clerk-administrator Maurice Boyer noted . . . Mr. Lumley's 7,050 vote edge over incumbent Nick Kaneb is probably the biggest majority absorbed by a Cornwall mayoralty candidate.

Mr. Lumley's total was 5,731 votes more than Mr. Kaneb and Ward 2 Ald. Roy Brunet combined.

Final official results offered at city hall were: Lumley, 12 117; Kaneb, 4853 and, Brunet, 1,067.

Mr. Kaneb, 54 has been Cornwall's mayor for 10 of the last 12 years, first elected to the office in 1959. His only defeat in a mayoralty fight, until last night, was in 1963, losing to Dr. Elmer Emard.

Religion and The Schools

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some sage once commented that you should never argue about religion or politics.

So it isn't surprising that, during the October Ontario election campaign, when Premier William Davis announced he wouldn't be extending aid beyond Grade 13 for the province's separate school system, provincial party leaders expressed the hope that it wouldn't be a major campaign issue.

It wasn't, as far as the leaders were concerned.

And a Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that added government financial support for schools set up by religious groups is not a burning issue in most provinces.

Each province has its own way of handling the situation. Following are the provisions by-province results of the survey:

NEWFOUNDLAND

The provincial government pays the salaries of Newfoundland's 6,300 teachers and also pays 80 per cent of the school costs, but the schools are owned under law by the churches. The province is also controlled by the churches which work with the government through their various governing bodies. The 16 per cent the churches must find as their share of the cost is raised in some areas by school taxes—in St. John's for instance the boards charge a monthly assessment of $18 to every family with one or more children in school.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

NOVA SCOTIA

Nova Scotia has a single school system. When different areas along denominational lines are requested by particular communities, there is a local understanding that Roman Catholics attend one school and non-Catholics attend another.

NEW BRUNSWICK

All schools are administered by the department of education although the Roman Catholic Church built some of its own school buildings—the main concentration being in Saint John where there are 11.

QUEBEC

Quebec schools are broken down into Roman Catholic and Protestant systems but both are public and 15 per cent of their budgets come from government grants.

In practice, Jewish children and those of other faiths neither Catholic nor Protestant attend Protestant schools and their language is usually taught in the Protestant boards.

But Education Minister Guy Cadrin-Pierre has introduced a bill to reform the public school system on Montreal Island. The bill would reduce the island's existing 62 school boards to 11 and each board would provide . English or French-language and Roman Catholic, Protestant or non-confessional schools in its area.

ONTARIO

Ontario supports the Roman Catholic school system up to and including Grade 10 but Catholics bear the costs of education beyond that. Premier William Davis said further support would be "antithetical to the abandonment of the secondary and post-secondary education system as it exists today."

Costs are high but many Ontario children attend private schools. In Toronto, for instance, about 60 per cent of the city's Jewish school-age children attend Jewish schools. At one day school, annual fees are $175 a pupil.

MANITOBA

Dr. W. C. Lorimer of the Manitoba department of education says all public schools are non-denominational, but private schools can be either denominational or non-denominational.

In either case private schools while ineligible for direct government aid, are eligible for other benefits. Grants are made to cover the cost of textbooks but not for operational costs or teachers' salaries.

SASKATCHEWAN

Aid structure for the Roman Catholic separate school system in Saskatchewan is the same as it is for public schools—a form of equalization payment whereby the province distributes a budget and the difference between the tax base and cost is handled through grants from the province.

ALBERTA

Section 59 of the School Act in Alberta provides that the minority of electors in any one district, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic, may establish a separate school district.

And once that district has been established, it qualifies for the same support as any public school district. For instance, in three districts of Alberta, Protestants are in the minority so there are three Protestant separate school districts.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

There is no government aid to any of the religious schools in British Columbia and all separate schools are classed as private schools. They are completely independent of the provincial education system.

WHA Party For Kids In Hospital

The playroom in the Pediatric ward of the Belleville General Hospital rang with the sounds of music, song and the laughter of young patients on Friday afternoon as the Santa Claus party sponsored by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary was in full swing.

A group of nursing students Susan Asselman, Margaret Carnegie, Debbie Sutherland, Ellen McEwen, Anne Mulvanin and Mrs. Sylvia O'Neill delighted the children with a hilarious entertainment program. A comic version of the popular fairy tale Cinderella was recited by one member of the group while the others acted it out in a particularly humorous manner. This was followed by a comic rendering of a popular poem about Santa Claus with actions to match. The entire audience joined in the singing of Christmas carols led by the nursing students.

The most eagerly awaited event of the afternoon was the arrival of Santa Claus who was accompanied by three 'assistants' dressed as clowns. Gifts, selected and wrapped by Mrs. J. B. Durrant, chairman of the volunteer services were given to each child and received with cries of delight.

A number of other volunteers assisted with the party including Mrs. F. Siekmann, convener of the paediatric playroom. Also helping were some members of the nursing staff and play therapist Linda Fraser.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Does being in a crowd cause irritation?

NOT UNLESS those in the crowd are physically uncomfortable; It's too hot, there is not enough air to breathe easily, etc. Even then, however, people jammed together in a confined area are surprisingly easy to get along with. Not only that, but people in a crowd are "soft-hearted." Let someone grow faint in a stalled, crowded subway train, say, and the rest of the passengers will make a clearing for him and try to stir up a breeze.

Are twins happy to look alike?

YES. If they happen to be identical twins or even fraternal twins who may be taken for identical twins. Some fraternal twins who have entirely different appearances are happy that they are twins, too. Usually the only trouble with "dissimilar" twins is that they find themselves going through life catching the reaction of people who are surprised to find twins who are twins though no one would tell it by their looks."

Must a husband flatter his wife?

NO; and there are two very good reasons why a husband should not flatter his wife. One is quite obvious: it is impossible to make flattery sound as if he meant it. Two, there is really no necessity. If he loves her, a husband will find enough good points to give his wife the sincere praise she deserves. In this way, he is able to say what he believes without having his wife wondering what kind of a fool she married.

Daughter Hosts Party On 25th Anniversary

FRANKFORD — On Saturday, at the new Legion Hall, Mrs. Barry (Sandra) Campbell of Thomasburg, and her friend, Miss Wanda Clabe of Foxboro, were hostesses for the silver wedding anniversary buffet and dance in honor of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Boyarchuk of Frankford. They were assisted by Sandra's brother, John Boyarchuk of Waterloo University.

Many friends and neighbors attended and relatives from afar; Mrs. Boyarchuk's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Trisha, of Melfort, Sask., are visiting them at this time.

Rhea Clare of Foxboro was MC for the occasion, and William Murray proposed a toast to the happy couple, to which Mr. Boyarchuk responded. Mrs. Agnes Kormis of Johnstown gave an appropriate reading during the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyarchuk were married November 6, 1946, in Gronlid, Sask., and came to the Batawa-Frankford area a number of years ago. They received many beautiful gifts.

Guests from a distance were a nephew, Frank Sradiak and Peter Pidskalny, both from Ottawa, where they are attending a seminary; Mr. and Mrs. Tony Schuliga of Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Babey, formerly of Batawa and now from Foothill and Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Hubble of Ameliasview.

Cruelty to Animals Should Be Reported

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the couple who travelled from Maine to California and vacated a dozen dead dogs along the highway 'hurt my heart. May I offer a few suggestions to people who really care about animals?

First, if you witness any kind of cruelty to an animal, report it at once to the humane society. And don't be afraid to give your name. Second, whenever you go into a pet shop, check the cages and see if the animals have enough water. If the supply is low (or non-existent), go to the manager and ask him about it. Third, have your pet sterilized. You will then not be burdened with unwanted litters. This costs very little compared with the effort and the energy, not to mention feeding 14 German shepherd pups.

If you have an animal you don't want, don't dump him. Take him to an animal shelter, or if they are unable to find a home they will put him to sleep — which is kinder than letting him starve to death or get hit by a car.

I hope you can make room for this in your column. I can think of no better way to get a message to millions of people. Thank you.—A Plain, Ordinary Citizen Who Cares

Dear Citizen: I care, too. Here's your letter, and my thanks.

Dear Ann Landers: You must be a mind reader. Your letter and advice concerning the relfish, money-hungry children who resented their father's second wife appeared the day after I let loose on a stepson and daughter-in-law. They had complained that there would be nothing left for them when we announced we were taking a two-month trip. These are the same two who believed they should be permitted to go through their father's home after their mother was buried and help themselves to the paintings, silver, linens, and furnishings. They were wanted. It never occurred to them that perhaps their father might still enjoy having these things around.

When I married Jason, his children resented me immediately, and I knew why. It meant nothing to them that he would have a companion, someone to love him, to take care of his needs and give his life new meaning. They viewed his second marriage strictly in terms of less money for them. Thank you, Ann, for speaking out in behalf of second wives, such as myself. We need all the help we can get and you have been very supportive.—Second Time Around In Brookline, Massachusetts

Dear Brook: Happy to be of help. A good second marriage can add years to a widower's life. And sometimes, that second marriage is a lot better the first.

Dear Ann Landers: After 22 years and six children, my husband has found another love. He doesn't want to leave me, says he'll be O.K. in time, and has requested me to be patient. He refuses to see a doctor or a clergyman. I'm ashamed to say I still love him. Am I sick or is he? I would do anything to keep this marriage together. The children don't have a clue. Neither does anyone else. I'm one day, sure I can make it and down the next. If anyone ever needed Ann Landers I do. What do you say?—Wife

Dear Wife: Hang on. Get some counselling yourself. It will give you strength. The bad guess on is this: Would you and the children be better or worse off without him? You are the only person who can answer this question and I urge you to be honest about it.

New Folder Describes Tasks of Social Worker

By DORIS CLARK

Want to know what a social worker is? That is, if you still haven't got the picture after reading me for several years.

According to an excellent folder turned out by one of our newest schools of social work, a social worker is "a person who is professionally trained to provide progress and services designed to help solve individual group and community problems."

How's that for a full order?

Moreover, listed among those served by social workers are:

1. Children needing protection, placement or guidance.

2. Families experiencing trouble.

3. Persons in difficulty because of social, medical, mental, health or economic problems.

4. Groups needing socializing, therapeutic services, informal education and social action.

5. Communities suffering as a result of change requiring welfare planning, new social policy and community action.

Believe it or not, social workers are tackling down-to-lens like these every day. And because it seems as if you have to use words to earth people—shaking problems—to encompass a big idea, I thought I would tackle it from the other end — which accounts for this column.

I've got a batch of these folders about social work from the Department of Social Work at Memorial University, of Newfoundland. If you'd like one, just write in enclosing a large, seven - cent - stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Doris: A very sincere thank - you for printing the letter from the lady who thoughtfully sent in the address of Father Ferretti in India.

It's people like "Wendy" who provide the impetus that gets a ball really rolling. When my grade four pupils read her letter, their enthusiastic response was wonderful to behold.

Now, a whole school of over 600 children has been affected by this contagious enthusiasm, and the boxes of clothing are beginning to pour in. It will be a real project to raise money for the postage alone!

No doubt Wendy's letter will be a wonderful stimulus to many others as well. — Rose Marie.

Dear Rose Marie: I am thrilled at the wonderful response your whole school has made to our letter from Wendy.

This is a dramatic illustration of what one concerned person can do. And I have no doubt but that many other generous parcels of clothing and other needed materials have gone forward to Father Ferretti as a result of Wendy's plea for those refugees from Pakistan. I have asked Wendy to let us know when she eventually hears from him.

To Family Planning Federation of Canada: I am glad that both males and females, married or unmarried, may have access to your birth control information. In facing the situation realistically, we do not help but agree that the school-age kids are the ones who have to be reached — with not only factual information but with some discussion of personal commitments and their effect on each individual future.

I will pass on to any who enquire, the address of your nearest branch.

Doris Clark, Master of Social Work, is a graduate of McGill, Toronto and McMaster Universities, and has broad experience in social work. If you would like help with your problems, write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

GIRL GUIDE, BROWNIE NEWS

CHRISTMAS DEEDS

Once again at Christmas time, Brownies, Guides and Rangers of Belleville Division are going about doing "good deeds" for others less fortunate. Packs and companies have helped the Christmas sharing program, other companies are packing food clothing and toys to be distributed through the churches who provide their meeting places. Several nursing homes have been and will be visited by girls singing carols, presenting hand-made gifts and tray favors for patients.

Companies are also working hard as helpers for the Firemen by dressing dolls.

Hastings Manor residents have already been visited by Brownies and Guides who organized an evening of games which were enjoyed and small gifts were presented. Children at the Retarded Children's Hospital at Plainfield received toys from one pack and members of one company earned three dollars each to provide a record player for the Osario Hospital at Smiths Falls. Knitting needles have been clicking as other Guides do their "good deed" by supplying booties for the Samaritan cupboard at Belleville General Hospital.

The float entered in the local Santa Claus parade by a company from Belleville west, district, expressed the "Greetings of the Season to All," on behalf of the Brownies, Guides Rangers and Leaders of Belleville Division.

Club Activities

PRINCE EDWARD — BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

The Victoria willing workers group pleased all when they catered the Prince Edward - Belleville Ladies' Club. A sumptuous turkey supper was served to club members and their friends at the Recreation Centre on December 8.

President Mrs. F. Hender son welcomed the gathering saying that it was the biggest attendance to date. She thought older people have a share in the Christmas festivities just as much as young people have.

She introduced the head table guests and the draw was made for the table centre. Mrs. Charles Turner being the lucky winner.

Mrs. F. Bedell had arranged the program. Christmas carols were sung with Miss K. McCulloch providing the accompaniment. A reading was given by Mrs. A. Mitchell. Miss H. Sulman sang a song. Don Ward of Wellington delighted all with piano music and many favorite songs. Readings were given by Mrs. P. Baird and Mrs. E. Wells while Mrs. A. Hardwick rendered some Christmas numbers on the piano.

Thanks were extended by Mrs. F. Bedell to the Victoria Willing Workers for the excellent meal and to Don Ward for his music and singing and to all who had helped in any way to make the Christmas party a success.

Mrs. F. Henderson expressed sincere regret that Mrs. C. Cunningham and Mrs. F. Way, former group leaders were unable to be present due to illness.

Turner, Goyer Annoy Indians, By 'Arrogance'

OTTAWA (CP) — Indians representing about 500,000 Metis and non-registered Indians expressed disappointment Friday at what they described as a lack of commitments, from two cabinet ministers after presentation of a brief calling for an end to discrimination against natives in legal matters.

The reception from Justice Minister John Turner and Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer was just another example of "an inhumane, insensitive and arrogant government," Tony Belcourt, president of the Native Council of Canada, told a news conference.

It was just such receptions that could force Indians into acts of violence "as the only way they could get the attention they deserve," said Mr. Belcourt.

The brief, stating that discrimination started at the moment of arrest and continued on to the parole system, sought financial aid to hire court workers to advise Indians of their rights.

Money also was needed for halfway houses to assist Indians living off reserves and to help pa rees. Alcohol treatment centres also should be supported by Ottawa.

As a first step, said the brief, Judge George Collins of Sudbury, who referred to "stupid Indians" in sentencing an Indian, should be removed from the bench.

"We think you should treat this judge the way you would have treated a judge from Tokyo who might, in the advertising of a resident of Quebec have said: This is another stupid frog of which we already have too many in this country," said the brief.

Mr. Turner was asked to review appointments of all federal judges and magistrates "in terms of their ability to deal with native people without the ingrained prejudice and discrimination that typifies the white establishment of this country."

Solicitor-General Goyer was asked to place native people on the national parole board "if for no other reason than native people constitute a majority of 'the inmates who are in your institutions."

The brief noted that although Indians and Metis represent only three per cent of the Canadian population, they account for 60 per cent of the nation's prisoners.

The Indians got one concession from Mr. Goyer—an immediate investigation into the death by beating of 54-year-old Frederick Quilt of Williams Lake, B.C.

The Indians allege Mr. Quilt was beaten to death by a Mountie. An inquest into his death is scheduled in late January but the Mounted remains on duty in the meantime.

The RCMP may be a friend of the white man but not so of the Indian, said the brief.

Defence in the Seventies

A 50-page booklet entitled "Defence in the 70s" was issued last summer by government to frame the conduct of defence policy in the new decade. One item of equipment left over from the great nuclear arms debate which helped topple John Diefenbaker's government in 1963 is the Voodoo interceptor. Canadian airmen will still be flying the Voodoo with its nuclear-tipped air-to-air missiles for home defence during the next decade. (CP Photo)

Phone Rate Raise Blocked

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has taken action which effectively prevents Bell Canada from introducing an interim increase in telephone rates by Jan. 1.

The commission announced Friday it will hear argument Jan. 10 on a Bell Canada motion concerning the proposed interim increase which would yield $24.6 million in revenue in 1972.

Bell Canada filed a motion Tuesday asking for an early hearing on its request for the interim increase. The Jan. 10 hearing in Ottawa will only consider the Bell motion and will not be a full inquiry into the interim rate-increase request. The inquiry may come later.

The company asked for the increase in early November when it requested an across-the-board boost in rates, which would bring in $78.1 million annually.

Bell asked for the interim increase to provide the company with additional revenue while the lengthy proceedings on the full increase are underway.

The application for the full increase affects all aspects of the telephone business but the main item is a 9½-per-cent rise in the costs of basic monthly service.

The transport commission said Friday that eight briefs commenting on the Bell application have been filed. Those commenting include the Ontario government, the Ontario Municipal Association, the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves, the Hotel Association of Canada, the Telephone Answering Association of Canada and Dr. G. Lloyd Brown-John of the University of Windsor.

Indian Senator Queries Treatment

OTTAWA (CP) — The National parole board considers reports from penitentiary classification officers as "very important" in making parole decisions, board chairman George Street told a Senate committee Friday.

A few minutes later, D. K. Stevenson, board member, added that classification officers have caseloads of up to 150 prisoners and sometimes barely know the man coming up for parole.

"So that man is really alone," said Senator Earl Hastings (L—Alberta).

"Very much so," Mr. Stevenson replied.

A prisoner, he said, appears before two members of the nine-member parole board. The classification officer and a parole officer also are present.

The classification officer's report was based on an interview with the prisoner aimed mainly at getting his social background, his record, family ties, job history and so on.

The parole officer's report concentrated on the prisoner's future prospects.

Senator Guy Williams (L—British Columbia), only native Indian in the Senate, asked whether Indians and Metis find themselves at a disadvantage in parole hearings.

"It's difficult for any member of a minority group who comes before us to speak freely," Mr. Stevenson said, adding that board members try to put the prisoner at ease and usually do any observers to leave.

The senators were told that "reserve decisions" must be made—prisoners call it "hanging on the gate"—on many parole applications for various reasons.

Senator Hastings said one prisoner in Manitoba had been left up in air for 18 months while a "community assessment" was awaited.

Mr. Street said the board must hand 50 per cent of its cases to voluntary agencies, whose workers drew up the assessments.

"Most of these delays are caused by people over which we have no control," he said.

The parole board, which handles 15,000 cases a year, paroles two out of three applicants.

Six Nations Council Plans to Appeal Case

BRANTFORD (CP) — The band council of the Six Nations Indian reserve near here has decided to appeal a Supreme Court of Ontario ruling involving a reserve woman, a district supervisor for the federal department of Indian affairs said Friday.

Donald Cassie said in an interview that the decision to appeal the ruling involving Yvonne Bedard was made at a meeting of council Thursday night.

Chief Councillor Richard Isaac denied Friday that such a decision had been reached. But Victor Porter, an Indian who attended the meeting, agreed with Mr. Cassie.

Mr. Justice John Osler ruled this week that a section of the Indian Act, disqualifying a woman from Indian band membership if she married a white man, is in conflict with the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Mrs. Bedard, 33, was born on the reserve but left it to live in Hamilton when she married a white man in 1964. When, she separated from her husband a year ago, she returned to the reserve with her two children to live in a house she had inherited from her mother.

Council had ordered her to leave the reserve, and to dispose of the house.

Mrs. Bedard's counsel, Malcolm Montgomery, had said that the Indian Act discriminates against women because Indian women lose their Indian status by marrying a non-Indian while Indian men do not.

Both Mr. Cassie and Mr. Porter said the band council planned to appeal Mr. Osler's decision to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Jury Suggests Rochdale College Should Be Closed

TORONTO (CP) — A grand jury recommended Friday that Rochdale College be closed because it "is a distribution centre for drugs".

The college, a residence for students and other young people, frequently has been the scene of drug raids by police.

A 22-year-old Toronto woman was found stabbed to death in a room at Rochdale earlier this month. Police believe that death was drug-related.

The grand jury made its report after inspecting Rochdale.

"It is very clear . . . that Rochdale College on Bloor St. is a distribution centre for drugs and is apparently inhabited and run by persons of a criminal nature," the report said.

"We unanimously recommend . . . an energetic and serious attempt be made . . . to expel the present tenants and the building be used for the public good."

Arbitration Is Ordered

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government ordered compulsory arbitration Friday to end the strike by teachers in the Bow Valley area near Calgary.

An emergency session of the cabinet called for the arbitration to end the strike by the 613 teachers.

Labor Minister Bert Hohol said it is expected the effect 12,000 students, out of class for 14 days, will be back in class by Monday.

Lafleur Answers Scoring Question With Second NHL Hat Trick

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Any questions about whether Guy Lafleur would survive in the rugged National Hockey League are being answered by the tall, likeable French Canadian, the most sought-after junior in last June's amateur draft.

Lafleur, after a slow start, has been finding the target in recent weeks and Friday night scored three goals in a game for the second time this season, pacing Montreal Canadiens to a 6-3 win over Vancouver Canucks.

In the only other game, Detroit Red Wings came from behind twice to tie California Golden Seals 3-3 before a barely noticeable crowd of about 4,000 at Oakland.

The victory moved Montreal to within one point of New York Rangers, East Division leaders. The Canadiens have played one less game.

Boston Bruins, who have played one less game than Montreal, get an opportunity to move into eastern contention tonight against the Penguins in Pittsburgh while the Rangers can pad their lead during a visit to St. Louis Blues.

Elsewhere tonight, Buffalo Sabres are at Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit at Los Angeles Kings and Minnesota North Stars entertain Chicago Black Hawks.

Sunday's schedule has Montreal at California, Toronto visiting Philadelphia Flyers, Minnesota in New York, Pittsburgh at Boston, Vancouver in Buffalo and St. Louis at Chicago.

Lafleur had a hat trick against Vancouver in Montreal made him the NHL's No. 1 junior selected in the June 2 draft. The six-foot, 175-pounder from Thurso, Que., scored 130 goals last year with Quebec Remparts, Canadian junior champions.

In three years with the Remparts, Bill of the Ontario Junior Hockey League he tallied a phenomenal 281 goals and 486 points. But because the rangy centre didn't play in the rough-and-tumble rules of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, many hockey experts questioned his durability.

"He has everything going for him," said Bowman early in the season.

"He can shoot. He can skate. And I've never seen a young player who feathers a pass so well," he added, in reference to the youngster's ability to gather in an airborne pass from just about any angle.

After a great training camp, in which he was flanked by Frank Mahovlich and Yvan Cournoyer, Lafleur's scoring tailspinned early in the season.

Since then, Cournoyer has been replaced by Jacques Lemaire on right wing and the trio has been Montreal's most explosive unit in the club's bid to overtake New York and shake loose from Boston in the torrid East Division race.

Friday night's production, when Lafleur scored once in each period, brought his season's total to 12 goals. Marc Tardif connected for two against the Canucks, giving him 18, equalling his record productive year—19 in 78 games last season.

California moved alone into third place in the West standings after blowing 2-0 and 3-2 leads. Nick Libett's 18th of the season lifted Detroit, fifth in the East, into the tie at 15:35 of the third period.

Live Harness Broadcasts Made

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York's Off-Track Betting Corp. was authorized Friday to broadcast live the last horse race each day from tracks with which it has contracts and to give the results and prices paid for all races on which OTB accepts parimutuel bets.

The Federal Communications Commission said the corporation could broadcast or cablecast daily 30-minute evening programs to include replays of some races run that day in addition to the live final race.

But the FCC ruled against live broadcasts of a full program from any track. And it said OTB could not provide scratches, jockeys, odds and track conditions on future races.

Quebec Games Will Be Held

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec winter games, in limbo when the city of Shawinigan, Que., backed out earlier this month, will take place here Feb. 26-28, it was announced Friday.

The games will be co-sponsored by the city of Montreal and 17 other Montreal Island communities and will see some 3,200 athletes, mostly between the ages of 14 and 20, participate in 23 sports. The athletes will represent 15 provincial regions.

Shawinigan pulled out of the games Dec. 3, saying it could not afford such an expenditure.

Hockey Player on Trial

Bloom, who plays for St. Catharines Black Hawks of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, is accused of causing bodily harm to a provincial police officer during a fight which broke out last May 8 during a playoff game between the Hawks and the Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Junior A Hockey League at the Quebec City Coliseum.

Testifying in his own defence Friday, Bloom said he never saw the policeman and that he must have hit him as he swung his stick around his head in an attempt to prevent a spectator from attacking four women and some of his team's fans.

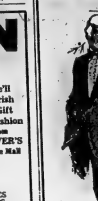
Roger Vallieres, Bloom's lawyer, said that in the fracas which followed the end of the game, Bloom's act was purely accidental because he couldn't see the policeman positioned above him on a gangway.

Remi Bouchard, substituting public prosecutor, said a person is always responsible for his actions and cited, as an example, motorists sentenced to prison for criminal negligence although they had no intention of killing or injuring anyone.

Bouchard connected for two against the Canucks, giving him 18, equalling his record productive year—19 in 78 games last season.

California moved alone into third place in the West standings after blowing 2-0 and 3-2 leads. Nick Libett's 18th of the season lifted Detroit, fifth in the East, into the tie at 15:35 of the third period.

He said that Bloom had admitted his intention to hit someone with his stick and the fact that the policeman was struck accidentally did not change the brutal nature of the attack.



Keech Keeps Scoring

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP) — League-leading Smiths Falls Bears moved eight points ahead of idle Ottawa Rangers Friday night with a 6-3 win over Pembroke Lumber Kings in a Central Junior Hockey League contest before 1,100 fans.

Elsewhere, last place Brockville Braves trounced Hull Volants 8-1 in a penalty filled game which saw four players from each club ejected in a wild third period donnybrook before 1,200 spectators.

Terry Fournier paced Smiths Falls with two goals, with singles added by Rick Kerfoot, Larry McIntosh, John Gravelle and Jerry Corkery. Steve Croucher, Rick Lane and Boris Legris replied for Pembroke.

At Brockville, Larry Salmon and Ted Allan each tallied twice, while singles went to Wayne Clement, Steve Keech, Joe Mulcahy and Jill Rodney. Larry Shields was the lone Hull marksman. The game was marred by 212 minutes in penalties.

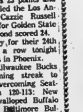
Lakers Keep String Intact

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Golden State Warriors were the last team to beat Los Angeles Lakers—back on Oct. 31.

And 24 periods in Friday night, it appeared that the Warriors had a good chance of ending Los Angeles' incredible winning streak in the National Basketball Association.

But with the score 70-70 midway through the third quarter, the Lakers went on a 24-6 burst and pulled away for a 129-99 romp and their 23rd consecutive victory.



Gail Goodrich's 25 points and Jerry West's 22 led the Los Angeles offence. Cazzie Russell netted 28 points for Golden State and Nate Thurmond scored 24.

Meanwhile, Milwaukee Bucks ran their winning streak to eight games, overcoming Seattle Supersonics 120-113; New York Knicks walloped Buffalo Braves 115-85; Baltimore Bullets beat Atlanta Hawks 114-102; Boston Celtics defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 115-109; Phoenix whipped Detroit Pistons 125-102; Houston Rockets trimmed Chicago Bulls 109-98, and Portland Trailblazers nipped Philadelphia 76ers 127-126.

In the American Basketball Association, it was: Carolina 146, Pittsburgh 143 in overtime; Kentucky 128, Virginia 104; Indiana 94, Memphis 92; New York 90, Dallas 85, and Utah 136, Denver 109.

Milwaukee's Kareem Jabbar, leading in points in all his seasons, is one of his second straight league scoring champions, poured in 44 points as the Bucks rallied from a 97-91 deficit with seven minutes remaining for their 29th victory in 33 games. Oscar Robertson chipped in with 27 points for the Bucks, while Spencer Haywood topped Seattle with 36 points.

Blanda May Retire

OAKLAND (AP) — George Blanda of Oakland Raiders said Friday that he's thinking of retiring after 23 seasons of professional football.

"Yes, I've thought about retiring after this season," the 46-year-old quarterback and place kicker said, but added, "when you're losing, you think more about retiring than when you're winning."

The Raiders have lost three straight games and, for the first time since 1960, don't have a shot at the playoffs and the National Football League's Super Bowl championship.

Before this season, Blanda said he wouldn't consider retiring until the Raiders won the Super Bowl.

Blanda said Friday his decision might depend on how much the Raiders plan to use him as a quarterback in 1972.

"I don't want to be just a field goal kicker," he said.

Blanda has been the team's No. 2 quarterback this season, behind Daryle Lamonica, and ahead of young Ken Stabler. He has completed 22 of 58 passes for 278 yards and four touchdowns.

He's having one of his best seasons as a kicker, making 15 of 22 field goal attempts. He became pro football's all-time scoring leader during the year and now has 1,644 points.

Marlies Make Deal

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros, in second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series with an inexperienced defence, bolstered that position Friday by reacquiring Tom Thomson.

Originally a member of the Marlboros, Thomson went to Peterborough Petes along with Paul Rayner and a first-round draft choice a year ago in exchange for Dave Gardner.

Thomson asked to be traded this season and wound up with Kitchener Rangers. But still not content, Thomson asked to be traded closer to his Toronto home, bringing about the negotiations between Toronto manager Tommy Smythe and Rangers' Punch Scherer.

In the trade, Marlboros sent forward Craig McPherson, now with Markham of the Metro Junior league, to Kitchener.

Smythe said Friday he's also working on a couple of other deals to strengthen Marlboros for the second half of the season.

One deal involves Stu Towers, who asked to be traded by Peterborough before returning to his Clarkson home.

CNE Site To Be Used

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto chairman Ab Campbell told the Canadian National Exhibition's board of directors Friday that the municipal stadium in Exhibition Park likely would be in use for the next seven to 10 years.

He said Toronto's bid for the 1978 Commonwealth Games was based on the assumption that the stadium's facilities were available.

He added that Toronto's application to host the 1973 Pan-Pacific Games and 1973 or 1974 Grey Cup were also based on use of the site.

49ers Still in Contention

Rams Battle for Playoff Berth

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Sports Writer

Everything's all but settled in the National Football League except for California, where San Francisco 49ers and Los Angeles Rams go down to the wire in the playoff berth battle.

With the exception of the National Conference West, which will send only one representative into post-season play, all entries—divisional winners and "wild card" clubs—have been determined.

And going into Sunday's 14th and final weekend of regular season play, 49ers with an 8-5 record, hold a half-game margin over their arch rivals, the Rams.

San Francisco can repeat as NFC West winner with a victory over visiting Detroit Lions—and can back into the title as well, if the Rams tie or lose in their game several hours earlier in the day against the Steelers in Pittsburgh.

Sunday's other games have New England Patriots at Baltimore Colts, Green Bay Packers at Miami Dolphins, Cleveland Browns at Washington Redskins, Minnesota Vikings at Chicago Bears, Buffalo Bills at Kansas City-Omaha, Atlanta Falcons at New Orleans Saints, San Diego Chargers at Houston Oilers, Philadelphia Eagles at New York Giants and Cincinnati Bengals at New York Jets.

In today's game, St. Louis Cardinals visit Dallas Cowboys. A victory would clinch the NFC East crown for the Cowboys, who went into the contest with a half-game lead over Washington.

Baltimore's defending Super Bowl champions, likewise can win their division, the AFC East, by turning back the Patriots, Miami trails the Colts by one-half game.

But regardless of whether the Cowboys, Redskins Colts or Dolphins win their divisions, all four clubs will be in the playoffs, along with Cleveland, Kansas City, Minnesota and either San Francisco or Los Angeles.

If the AFC and NFC East standings remain as is with Baltimore and Dallas winning, Miami and Washington will have the "wild card" slots as the runners-up with the best records in each conference.

And if the Dolphins and Redskins vault into the top spots, the Colts and Cowboys will be the runners-up and the "wild card" squads.

Student Team Chosen

OTTAWA (CP) — Denny Desaurieres, Laval University ski coach, has been appointed coach of the alpine ski team that will compete in this year's world university student winter games.

The Canadian Inter-Collegiate Athletic Union also announced Friday that Chip Drury, ski coach at the University of Montreal, will act as general manager.

Appointment of a coach for the Nordic ski team, which also will compete at the games, would be announced in the very near future, the organization said.

Alpine skiing includes downhill competition while Nordic events involve jumping and cross-country skiing.

Selection camps are to be set up Feb. 20 at Mount Sutton, Que., for the alpine group and at Banff, Alta., Jan. 28 for would-be Nordic competitors.

Howe Levels Big Blast At OHA Junior A Loop

DETROIT (AP) — Gordie Howe, recently-retired star of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, is accusing the Ontario Hockey Association of reneging on an agreement with him that his sons, Mark and Marty, be allowed to play on the same OHA team.

In a departure from his usually easy-going manner, Howe verbally blasted the OHA, saying it is "sticking it to Detroit and they're using the Howe name to do it."

Monday, the OHA announced it had passed a motion forbidding Mark Howe, 16, from playing with Toronto Marlboros in the OHA Junior A loop until the matter is considered further at OHA meetings next month.

Mark had planned to join the Marlies who already have 17-year-old Marty Howe on the defence roster.

Mark now must stay with Detroit Junior Red Wings of the Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series unless the OHA passes some regulation at the January meeting that would allow him to rejoin his brother.

Both the Howe boys played for the Detroit Junior Wings last season.

"I'm more than a little upset by this," their father said.

"Mark's career is being jeopardized by an league which is going back on the word.

He said Marty liked forward but had considered playing with St. Catharines of the OHA because Mark wanted to go there.

"Marty decided to go to Toronto, and Mark said he wanted to play another year in Detroit before joining Marty. He wanted to be with his buddies [illegible]

"Howe said the OHA is becoming more aware of the hockey potential and is "trying to make Detroit a farm club to feed players to the OHA. No way."

Richard Paces Remparts To Quebec Junior Hockey Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jacques Richard, out front in the Quebec Junior A Hockey League scoring race, added two more goals Friday night as Quebec Remparts edged Drummondville Rangers 5-4.

The victory kept the Remparts on the heels of league leading Cornwall Royals. Quebec has 41 points, four back of Cornwall and two ahead of third-place Drummondville.

In other games Friday, Trois-Rivieres Ducs defeated Shawinigan Bruins 6-4 and Sherbrooke Beavers dumped Sorel Black Hawks 7-3.

The two goals by Richard who have 36. boosted his season total to 33. He has 44 assists for 77 points. 12 ahead of team-mate Andre Savard in the individual scoring race.

The Sherbrooke triumph moved them to within one point of the fifth-place Black Hawks, last NFL seasons, go for their first winning one. Atlanta is 6-6-1.

The Chargers, with bombthrowing John Hadl, are tops in AFC offence—but one of its poorest on defence. A victory against the Oilers would give San Diego a break-even season record.

The Eagles, one of the late-season surprises, have won five of eight games and another would assure them of third place in the NFC East and their best record since 1967. The Giants, on the other hand with Fran Tarkey bidding for the conference pass-receiving title, must win to have a chance of escaping the division cellar.

Despite missing half the season, the Bengals have shared ranks as the AFC's third-best passer. He'll go up against Joe Namath as the Jets try to finish on the upbeet.

Belleville Junior's Get Help From Friday Night Snow Storm

It's an ill wind that doesn't blow somebody good. Last night it was the Belleville Fairways who helped profit from Friday's snow storm.

Because of the snow some of the Gananoque G-Men were unable to make it to the bus for yesterday's Eastern Ontario Junior B bout with the Fairways. As a result it was their much easier for the Fairways to skate away with a 9-3 win over the short staffed Gananoque crew.

The victory marked the fifth game in a row that the Fairways have been unbeaten, establishing their hold on third place in the six team league.

Gananoque dressed only 11 players for the game and were no match for the high flying Fairways who lifted their seasonal record to 7-6-1.

The home team left little doubt of the outcome as they built a 4-1 lead after only one period and then went on to back in completing the 9-3 rout.

Jeff Howard continued his torrid scoring pace when he connected for the first goal of the game after two minutes and 14 seconds of play had elapsed. It was unassisted goal in four games for the former Trenton Golden Hawk winger.

After an unassisted marker by Gananoque captain Marty Mangan had deadlocked the game at 1-1 Terry Heather and Bill Bellerive moved to stay with his second goal of the season. He has played in only three games so far this year.

Tallie by Dave Smith and Tim Yohn rounded out the first period effort to give the Fairways their first period lead. Yohn, who was moved from a line with Mark Woodward and Howard when Meagher began playing helped spark the linemates Rod Palmer and Cliff Jacksch. Jacksch tallied twice and added an assist as the game's only duplicate scorer, while Palmer collected three assists.

Bill Cormier was called on to make only 23 saves in the entire contest, being tested nine times in the second period and only five times in the final frame as the pace began to tell on Gananoque.

Outstanding for the winners was Dave Smith who counted Belleville Fairways goalie-Bill Cormier and defencemen Tim Yohn combine to thwart the scoring effort of Gananoque's Marty Mangan. The Fairways ripped the G-Men 9-2 last night for their third Eastern Ontario Junior B League victory in a row. The Belleville team is currently holding down third place in the six team loop.

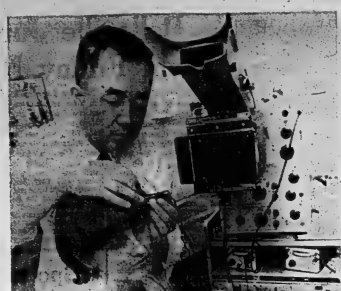
Davis Plans Reorganizing Legislature

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis, currently engaged in reorganizing the Ontario government at the cabinet and departmental level, told the legislature Friday he also plans to make proposals affecting the legislative assembly.

He spoke during debate on one of a series of measures implementing proposals of the committee on government productivity realigning cabinet responsibilities.

The bill, which received second and third reading, provided for the creation of three ministers free of departmental ties who would be concerned with policy development.



Mr. Davis was replying to opposition complaints that the committee's proposals appeared to ignore the role of the legislature in formulating public policy.

He said the committee, composed of prominent businessmen and civil servants, was not the appropriate body to consider the operations of the legislature but that the government will make proposals "not too late in the New Year."

Relating to the committee's reorganization proposals affected the government's accountability to the legislature:

J. E. Stokes (NDP—Thunder Bay) said his constituents were concerned by the committee's proposal to abolish the department of mines and Northern affairs and lands and forests, which they felt were parties fairly attuned to the interests of the North.

The premier said no final decision has been reached on the number of ministries or their specific responsibilities. He, too, was concerned that the government retain its identification with the North.

Ottawa Raises Hospital Offer

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government Friday sweetened its financial offer to the provinces for a new cost-sharing formula covering hospital and medical care insurance.

"I'm very hopeful they'll agree to this," said federal Health Minister John Munro as the scheduled two-day conference of health ministers wound up before luncheon.

Mr. Munro said he had made changes in the federal offer which now would provide "several hundred millions of dollars" more to the provinces under an agreement to run to 1977.

Cost of the package is impossible to estimate since the amount received by each province annually will be geared to growth of the gross national product plus an extra amount that declines annually during the life of the agreement.

In the first two years of the agreement, the provinces would be guaranteed amounts of money equal to what they would receive under the current payments formula.

The federal government pays roughly half the costs of medical care and hospital insurance programs of the provinces. Payments to the provinces now have reached about $1.1 billion a year.

Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence of Ontario said Mr. Munro's amended proposal is more generous than before and he would be taking it back to Toronto for assessment by the province's financial experts.

He and Mr. Munro both said they expect discussions will continue over the next few months.

Current financing arrangements expire March 31, 1972, the date the individual negotiations with the provinces will be aimed at getting all of them signed up for the new formula by that date.

Mr. Lawrence said Mr. Munro provided assurances that; the federal government will not "play schoolteacher to the provinces" in use of a proposed $64-million "trust fund."

The fund is intended to finance programs, such as homecare or nursing-home plans, as a method of taking financial pressure off expensive hospital facilities.

Mr. Lawrence had complained Thursday that the proposed fund was "loaded" with too many strings attached. After Friday's session, however, he said it now is clear that there will be none so long as the money is used to provide greater efficiency in the hospital and medical programs.

Mr. Munro told reporters the $640 million will be allocated to the provinces on a per-capita basis.

In calculating federal payments to the provinces, the annual increase in the first year would equal the percentage rise in the gross national product plus one percentage point.

Speaker Rejects Bid To Probe Vote Results

TORONTO (CP) — Speaker Allan Reuter rejected Friday a bid by Dr. Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) to have a special legislature committee investigate his claims of election irregularities in three provincial ridings.

The ruling sparked a wrangle over procedural rules which ended in confusion, but with the speaker's decision being upheld without a vote.

When Mr. Reuter said he had no authority to refer matters to committee, Dr. Shulman asked for unanimous consent of the house for a motion that would accomplish this step.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said that although he was in sympathy with Dr. Shulman's request, house precedent was that such motions had to be put during private members hour.

The issue became further confused when Mr. Winkler rose to announce that "in the spirit of the Christmas season" he would allow Dr. Shulman's motion to be put.

Treasurer Darcy McKeough replied that under the rules only the government, and not a private member, can introduce such a motion.

Dr. Shulman forsaketh to block any future attempt for unanimous consent on an issue. NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said Dr. Shulman "for the first time in his political career, is speaking for himself."

Mr. Reuter's rule came as the result of the request made Monday at the opening of the house for the committee on privileges and election to hold a hearing on alleged irregularities during the Oct. 21 election in the ridings of Lambton, Humber and Toronto St. Andrew-St. Patrick.

Lewis Says Company Made $450,000 Profit

TORONTO (CP) — Guardian Insurance Co. of Canada cancelled a one-year contract with the Law Society of Upper Canada after making a $450,000 profit, Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, charged Friday in the Ontario legislature.

Mr. Lewis said the law society was "greatly surprised, to put it mildly," by the decision.

Sept. 23, 1971 that Guardian did not intend to renew.

He asked Gordon Carton, minister of financial and commercial affairs, how the company "can get away with this kind of thing."

Mr. Carton said the superintendent of insurance was investigating, and he also understood the law society intended to take action.

Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) said he understood the contract was written for one year only and that Guardian had the option to renew.

"This is correct," Mr. Carton replied.

"Then it has been an ill-advised contract," said Mr. Lewis.

"I would be pleased to act on behalf of the legal profession in any future undertaking."

Policy Ministers Called Secretaries

TORONTO (CP) — Today the Ontario cabinet includes a provincial secretary. It looked last week as if he might disappear. Now it seems there will soon be three of him.

In a major cabinet reorganization proposed by the committee on government productivity, the provincial secretary's duties were reshuffled among other departments and the name disappeared from the cabinet roster.

The committee's report, released last Friday, preformed similar surgery on other departments, reducing over-all cabinet strength to 20 from the present 24, but proposed the creation of three new policy ministers without departmental ties.

But when legislation was passed this week implementing parts of the committee report, the policy ministers had become "provincial secretaries in charge of policy development."

Home Improvement Program Is 'Mythical' Declares Lewis

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's $10-million home improvement program came under attack in the legislature Friday with New Democratic Party members charging it doesn't exist.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said the program, announced by Premier William Davis in the recent provincial election campaign, is mythical.

He said municipalities have not been given details or told of the program, and that there is no provision for an individual to apply for funds for "the trade-in value of home repairs."

"You create a $10-million program and then decide it is not workable," Mr. Lewis told Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales.

Mr. Bales denied the program had been abandoned, but said that the funds would emerge in the later part of the winter period and early spring.

He said the decision as to what form the program would take rests with the municipalities. An individual would have to apply to the municipality for assistance.

The issue arose during committee debate on a bill to give municipalities authority to engage in winter works projects on private property with the consent of the owner.

A total of $25 million has been allocated for this work, Mr. Bales said. The legislation would permit the clearing of brush, dead elms or abandoned buildings on private land.

Mr. Bales said that the government had had to make "refinements" to the winter works program, which excluded aspects of the home-improvement project.

Ontario Will Change Way Judges Are Paid

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Allan Lawrence told the Ontario legislature Friday the government intends to change the present "artificial" method of paying federally-appointed judges asked by the province to perform extra judicial duties.

Piloting legislation to reduce the annual provincial payment to each judge, Mr. Lawrence said the action was prompted by a recent increase in the judges' salaries passed by the federal government.

Mr. Lawrence said the principle of the provincial allowances needs to be re-examined.

"If a provincial allowance is appropriate, it should be related to the responsibilities taken on by a judge outside his judicial duties and not by an artificially-set sum."

Legislature Prorogues

Committees Will Study Nationalism, Education

TORONTO (CP) — The opening session of the 29th Ontario legislature prorogued Friday with a 16-bill legislative package of tax, corporation and health services reforms getting royal assent.

Just as the session was ending, Premier William Davis announced the creation of three select legislative committees on corporation law, economic nationalism and the impact of education on the community. He said two or three more select committees would be set up when the legislature is recalled sometime in the early spring.

The legislature sat for 61 hours in the last five days, with Thursday's session dragging on until 3 a.m. Friday.

During the mini-session the 117-member house—comprised of 78 Conservatives, 30 Liberals and 19 New Democrats—discussed and passed major legislative changes in income tax and succession duties, major revisions of the province's health insurance system and the beginning of a complete reorganization of the government structure.

The changes included a 3.6-per-cent reduction in the province's rate of income tax for the period July 1, 1971 to Dec. 31, 1971 and a three-per-cent cut in the provincial tax rate for the 1972 taxation year.

Major changes in the estate tax field, which the province will move into when it is vacated by the federal government on Jan. 1, included; doubling of the graduated succession duties; an increase to $500,000 from $250,000 in exemptions for widows and widowers, and exemption from duty for estates valued at less than $100,000. These changes will reduce by 30% from 5,000 a year the number of dutiable estates.

Under new legislation, free medical care now will be provided to eligible persons 65 years of age or older, and the provincial share of the federal salary paid to county and Supreme Court judges will be raised.

Other bills passed include:

—Provision of $19 million for construction and renovation of day nurseries and allowing municipalities, Indian bands and associations to apply for 100-per-cent capital grants.

—An act exempting provincial corporations from paying tax on goods sold to the federal assistance program to ease the impact of United States import duties;

—An act merging the province's hospital and medical care programs under a newly-created Ontario Hospital Insurance Commission, and;

—An act establishing a management board of cabinet under a chairman who would have full cabinet minister status.

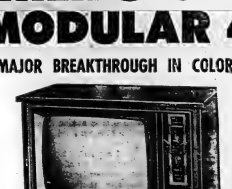
The legislature also approved $173 million in supplementary estimates for 11 government departments.

The approved expenditures, offset by a $26 million increase in revenue, will bring the provincial budgetary deficit to $533 million in the fiscal year 1971-72, an increase of $138 million from the $416-million deficit predicted in the April 25 budget.

The bulk of the new expenditures are for job-creation and welfare programs, with almost $100 million earmarked for winter works and capital improvement programs which are expected to generate some 40,000 jobs within the next six months.

After Friday's closing, Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said with more time, the discussion of supplementary estimates could have been broadened. Had the legislature been called two weeks earlier, the time could have been well spent debating the legislation.

"I think the late call was possibly deliberate since there was pressure from all sides to 'Get on the business,'" he said.



NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said in an interview that the government had imposed the heavy a legislative load for the week-long session, forcing the extra night sitting.

Mr. Lewis said he couldn't understand why it was necessary to debate reform of income tax, corporation tax, and succession duties in the early hours of the morning.

When asked about the opposition assessment that legislation had been rushed through, Mr. Davis disagreed and said: "I think there is no question that the legislation received very detailed debate."

Calgary Police Want Higher Powered Revolvers

By ARNIE HAKALA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A request by Calgary police for a higher-calibre revolver is not unusual.

The revolver they want—a .38-calibre Smith and Wesson special—is carried by most police forces in Canada.

However, the reason for the request, as made by Sgt. Phil Crosby-Jones, has irritated at least one police official.

In requesting the new guns at a Calgary police commission meeting, the sergeant said:

"We're not out to blow holes the size of houses in people but we want someone to stay down when we shoot him."

The Calgary force uses .38-calibre Webley Scotts, guns which take shorter and less powerful cartridges than the special.

When Syd Brown of Toronto, president of the Canadian Police Association, heard about the comment he asked:

"Are we talking about Calgary or Chicago?

"If they want to keep people down they might as well use cannons."

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that Alberta and, Newfoundland are the only provinces whose main police forces do not carry Smith and Wessons.

Newfoundland constabulary do not carry guns.

The Calgary commission was told the request resulted from the shooting of a constable Dec. 11 following the fatal shooting of a 19-year-old variety store clerk.

The constable was in satisfactory condition after being shot in the groin and a suspect was held under police guard in hospital.

"The man was hit in the chest by a bullet from a Webley Scott and it didn't stop him," said Sgt. Crosby-Jones. "He was thrashing around trying to reach his rifle when he was shot in the leg."

The request for new guns was granted by the commission.

Mr. Brown said Webleys are "terrible guns."

"There have been several complaints and accidents with them and many departments have phased them out," he said.

He also said that in many cases, it is not the fault of the gun, but rather the ammunition.

Police Chief Harry M. McKay of Saint John, N.B., who said his 187-man force uses the Smith and Wesson, added that members of the force periodically change ammunition they carry because body heat can weaken the force of the bullet.

In Halifax, Deputy Police Chief John Wrin said his force also uses the Smith and Wesson, adding his men were trained to shoot and wound and accuracy makes the difference.

Chief Sterns Webster of Charlottetown, said his force uses both long and short shells in .38 calibre.

"The .38 is pretty rugged," he said. "If a guy's his in the right place with it, he won't get up."

Some forces use stronger and more varied equipment.

For instance, a spokesman for the Montreal Policemen's Brotherhood said shotguns and machine-guns are used on special assignments although the standard weapon is the .38 Smith and Wesson.

He said the Smith and Wesson is adequate for most purposes as long as it is new and in good condition.

Police in Winnipeg also carry shotguns. The force also uses a mixture of Colts, Smith and Wessons and Webley Scotts.

Winnipeg police Chief Norman Stewart said the "main thing people should remember is it's not the gun, but the people handling them."

"It is most important that people using the guns have proper training."

He added that police forces guns should be standard across Canada.

An RCMP spokesman in Ottawa said that in his opinion, he would rather be armed with a .357 magnum pistol than the .38-calibre Smith and Wesson military and police pistol used by the RCMP.

He said both pistols fire the same calibre ammunition - but the .357 magnum has a heavier bullet and a larger powder charge.

The result is "much greater stopping power," he said. One drawback was that the .357 magnum is twice as expensive as the .38.

Edmonton police also use the Webley.

Inspector Ken Shaw said:

"We are already in the process of changing. It has been difficult to repair and get parts for the Webley."

The ban is made in England.

Major police forces in cities in Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia use the Smith and Wesson and report no complaints.

Denturists Request Provincial Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's denturists have asked for a provincial inquiry into their competence to fit and sell false teeth without the help of dentists, a spokesman for the group said Friday.

Gordon Smith, publicist for the Denturist Society of Ontario, said such an inquiry should be by a committe of the legislature or under the auspices of a judge.

"We want public hearings. We should be prepared to provide complete records of all persons served thus far. They could call in any of our patients to examine our work.

"We have nothing to fear, but the dentists have something to fear, because if the inquiry shows that we are competent to fit dentures, the provincial government will have to turn around and license us," he said in an interview.

Mr. Smith was commenting on an announcement, Thursday by the Ontario Dental Association and the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Ontario that new clinics are to be opened to provide false teeth at lower prices in a bid to compete with the denturists.

Dental association president L. J. Schiller said 10 such clinics would soon open across Ontario to offer a set of high-quality upper and lower dentures for a fee averaging $180, compared with the current association-approved fee of $280.

In a campaign launched last summer, the denturists announced they would sell false teeth directly to the public, and at a price lower than that being charged by dentists.

Denturists make plates, but under provincial regulations only a dentist may do impressions and the final fitting of the plates.

Mr. Smith called the dentists' proposal an attempt to convince the public that there could be cheap false teeth without denturists.

"What will the quality be?" he asked. "Who will operate the clinics? What staff will they get. What will the wages scales be?"

Thursday, the dentists said the clinics would be operated in part by prosthetic therapists, a new category of dental professionals qualified to see patients and fit dentures under supervision of a fully-trained dentist.

Verdict Imminent In Murder Trial

EDMONTON (CP) — The non-capital murder trial of Fred Keith Elge Latta, 43, a Kingston law professor, is nearing it's conclusion.

Latta is charged with the June 18 shooting death of Robert Neville, 36, an Edmonton travel, agent and separate school board trustee.

Mr. Neville, shot twice in the back and once in the chest, was found in his downtown travel office on a Sunday.

During the five-day trial, defence lawyer Cameron Steer of Edmonton called five witnesses, including Latta's mother, before resting his case Friday.

Julia Latta testified her son visited her and her daughter in Edmonton the day before Mr. Neville's death and his conduct was natural. She said her son had never had any experience with violence.

Mr. Steer asked the jury, five women and seven men, to remember that no one saw who killed Mr. Neville.

He said "enmity and hate" were very strong motives for murder, but "in this case there is not a shred of enmity or hate . . . in fact, the evidence points the other way."

Mr. Neville's wife, Karon, had testified that neither was tried against Latta in her home, she said.

Earlier evidence indicated Latta was a partner in Mr. Neville's travel agency. Mr. Neville had a $37,500 insurance policy on Latta's life while the accused had a $37,500 policy on Mr. Neville's life with a double indemnity clause added.

Mr. Steer reviewed Crown evidence which said Latta had used his shares in the travel agency as collateral on a loan from a city bank. Latta sold the shares to Mr. Neville two days later and paid off the loan.

Two months later, Latta wrote the bank and asked that his personal guarantee on the agency's debts be, cancelled, which was done, Mr. Steer said. At the same time, Latta asked that share certificates be returned to him.

"I suggest it is obvious that if he hadn't remembered the guarantee, he also would have forgotten his share certificate," he said. "I can't see how you could believe Latta was trying to get the company back by way of the share certificate."

He read a letter from Latta to Mr. Neville that was seized from the accused's home in Kingston at the time of his arrest, about a week after the murder.

In the letter, Latta made reference to "the personal matter you phoned me about," which Mr. Steer said referred to the first telephone call by Mr. Neville to Latta concerning a blackmail attempt.

An Edmonton police officer earlier testified that a man identifying himself as Latta had told him, in a long-distance telephone conversation shortly after the murder, of a blackmail attempt on Mr. Neville. The blackmail attempt, which involved $10,000, was apparently connected with Mr. Neville's alleged relationships with other women, said the officer.

Latta told Mr. Neville, in the letter, "not to take the threats too seriously . . . whatever you do, don't meet their demands." Latta also told Mr. Neville to take his problem to the authorities.

Mr. Steer questioned whether the second page of a letter and [illegible] found on top of a photocopying machine in Mr. Neville's office shortly after his murder were left by Latta.

"Would he (Latta) have taken that letter and those schedules with him to Edmonton?"

"I would like to put before you another motive for Mr. Neville's murder," he said.

"I submit from Mrs. Neville's evidence that it was common for Mr. Neville to associate with women other than his wife. . . . She apparently was forgiving of his lapses."

Mr. Steele referred back to the alleged blackmail attempt and said that someone connected with one of the girls mentioned in the call to the police may have been involved.

Supposed pregnancy, which was the basis of the alleged attempt, "could raise the enmity and hate" which would furnish a motive for the murder, he said.

Police testimony concerning a .45-calibre revolver found on the banks of the North Saskatchewan River in Edmonton was called "opinion" by Mr. Steele.

He said the jury should not be satisfied that fingerprints on a newspaper and map found by the police were those of Latta.

Police testified earlier that Latta's prints were found on the articles, discovered in a bus depot locker. Ammunition for a .38-calibre revolver, an Italian-English dictionary and two newspaper clippings with pictures of Mr. Neville circled in ink also were found in the locker.

Farmers Oppose Egg Quotas

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Farmers speaking to an Ontario government inquiry into the egg industry added more ammunition Friday to the case against production quotas.

Most of the briefs presented in three days of hearings before Judge James F. W. Ross of Thunder Bay have opposed a quota system for production of eggs in Ontario.

Stephen Connolly, a young farmer from the Mitchell area, 12 miles northwest of Stratford, said would-be farmers are discouraged by quotas already in effect on milk and the possibility of quotas on beef, pork and eggs.

Floyd Johnson of Kingsville, about 20 miles southeast of Windsor, said quotas would freeze out small farmers and leave the industry for the rich.

However, a brief from egg producers in Huron and Perth Counties said:

"A good farmer could produce by obtaining a quota, in purchasing a quota—if they have a price on them—the element of risk and gamble in the market compared to today's industry would be removed."

At present, the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers' Marketing Board operates primarily as a promotional agency with no controls.

Judge Ross continues hearings in Ottawa next week and in Toronto in January.

GET EARLY TREATMENT

BURLINGTON, Ont.-(CP)— "Do not delay in having the hearing problems of a child identified," advises Lydia Bremeister, a teacher of handicapped children. She says: "Early diagnosis and therapy for such children, hopefully before they are two years old, is crucial. Time lost may never be regained."

Congress Compromises On Foreign Aid Total

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress finally settled its foreign aid stalemate Friday and adjourned for the holidays, to return Jan. 18.

"I'm satisfied if you are," President Nixon was quoted as telling Senate leaders when they telephoned him in Key Biscayne, Fla., Friday to tell him Congress was about to quit for the year.

Nixon got most of what he sought in economic legislation from the Democratic Congress, which left a lengthy record of foreign policy controversy.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said the administration is satisfied with the foreign spending level approved by the Senate, then by the House of Representatives, as the final business of the session.

That was a temporary settlement; Congress will have to work out more permanent aid spending terms by Feb. 22.

Controversy over the aid bill sprang from a Senate amendment declaring a national policy of U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam within six months.

House negotiators refused to accept the provision. Senate sponsors then agreed to a compromise on foreign aid, with a bill authorizing $2.75 billion in aid spending. It was approved Friday 33 to 21.

Next came a joint resolution to continue aid spending until Feb. 22, while Congress vacations.

Rogers Reopens Drive For Mideast Settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers has reopened the U.S. drive to work out an interim settlement of the Arab-Israeli crisis, but the direction of the effort remains unclear.

The state department disclosed Friday that Rogers has spoken separately on the telephone to Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban and his Egyptian counterpart, Mu h a m a d Riad about an interim settlement.

The U.S. peace initiative was shelved temporarily early last month when, U.S. officials said, it was obvious the focus on the Middle East had shifted to the UN.

Now that the debate is over in the UN General Assembly "and did not result in any overly hurtful

Bachelor Law Professor Guardian of All Fetuses

NEW YORK (AP) — An editorial in the law school newspaper calls him a sexist.

His law students, jokingly refer to him as a bachelor-father to thousands of unborn babies.

A pregnant mother awaiting an abortion in a New York hospital declares she, and not he, is the real guardian of her unborn baby and she will say so in court.

The man is Robert M Byrn, a teacher of criminal law at Fordham University. He was two weeks ago was appointed legal guardian of all fetuses in the fourth to 24th week of gestation whose mothers are awaiting abortions in the city's 18 municipal hospitals.

Byrn, 40, contends that the 18th-month-old New York state abortion law violates the 14th Amendment of the U.S. constitution because "it deprives a person of life . . . without due process of law."

His goal is to return the law to status before July 1, 1970, when abortions were allowed to save the life of the mother.

A judge is expected to decide whether next week he will order to grant a preliminary injunction to stop abortions at the city's hospitals while litigation continues.

The judge, Francis X. Smith, also has been named to vacate Byrn's guardianship. A guardian ad litem is appointed for a helpless or injured person unable to represent himself in court.

In the meantime, "the friend of the fetus," as his lawyer, Tom Ford, calls Byrn, manages to overcome critical barbs, derogatory remarks and letters with a sense of humor and a smile.

"Being unmarried has some pizzazz, about it, huh," Byrn, a husky six-footer said Friday. Then his smile faded as he added: "My responsibility as the father of the fetus would not be less awesome if I were married."

"That I am a Catholic and a bachelor is irrelevent," Byrn said.

"I am concerned as a lawyer, as an advocate who believes that the law should protect life in society. If we abandon the concept, then the whole community is in danger of breaking down.

". . . Burdensomeness is not a characteristic of unborn children. It is a characteristic, unfortunately, of many in our society. Of the elderly.

"If we say how are we going to get rid of them, then we are on the road to euthanasia to saying only those who contribute to society have the right to live."

Mail Truck Drivers Offer to Use Own Cars

WINNIPEG (CP) — A spokesman for the city's mail truck drivers said Friday the drivers will use their own cars to ensure that Christmas mail gets through if private contractors follow up a threat to discontinue service in a dispute with the post office.

Don Mowat, field representative of the Letter Carriers of Canada, which represents about 30 drivers who work for the city's private mail haulers, told reporters he had given the assurance earlier Friday to George Toal, postal director for Manitoba district.

Five major Western Canadian contractors have threatened to discontinue service unless the federal government agrees to pay "terminal compensation" when it takes over mail delivery service within cities by the end of 1972.

Delay in Decision on U.S. Request To Flood B.C. Valley National Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's announcement that it will defer for at least two years any decision on a U.S. company's request to flood a British Columbia valley for power purposes appears on the surface a local or regional affair.

But authorities here say it is national. Moreover, it may have an important skirmish in the future of Canadian sovereignty it self.

With its decision in the B.C. case, informed say, the federal government is fending off for the time being a United States which wants Canadian resources, particularly hydro power and water, but also petroleum and base minerals.

The fending-off period is said to be designed for Ottawa to formulate energy policy for the decades ahead—a policy which, basically will be to ensure Canadian needs are looked after in perpetuity.

Canada and the U.S. have been talking about energy resources off and on for several years. These talks are schedled to resume next year after a temporary halt for a study of more-immediate economic problems.

One sources said the U.S. would like to see from the position that it has no energy resources left to speak of and is classing Canada's resources as "North American" or "continental."

Some authorities have said Canada's key question by the 1980s will be how much water will be how Canada, a country of 20 million, will use it, compared to a country of 200 million, from taking what Canadian resources it needs.

Sales which will benefit Little Light and Power Co. has been awarded by the Texas Dam in Washington State to obtain more hydro. This will cause flooding in the Skagit Valley of British Columbia.

The Canada-U.S. International Joint Commission, which examines questions of boundary waters, was handed the problem in April by Ottawa and Washington for a quick review.

It reported Friday that more study is needed on the problem of measures to mitigate the effects of flooding of a prime recreational area and that such a study would require at least two years.

The Canadian government grasped this recommendation immediately and thus put off for at least two years any decision about raising the Ross Dam.

Nearly a decade ago, Canada and the U.S. agreed on a Columbia River system of dams to provide more power for the U.S. Pacific Northwest.

The late Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the Canadian chairman of the International Joint Commission, fought the agreement to the end of his life.

His main contention was that once a certain amount of power was supplied to the U.S. under the Columbia scheme, Canada would have to go on providing it forever; that exported power created income and gave the country that Canadians should have.

Gen. McNaughton emphasized the question still existing today of whether Canada can provide the U.S. with huge amounts of raw materials and then years from now, halt the flow on the grounds of Canadian needs.

Of late, the Conservatives and New Democrats have been regularly referring to the Liberals as "continentalists."

The implication is that the Liberals are prepared to sell out Canada's resources—birthright, the Conservatives used to say—to the U.S. for a mess of potage.

The Liberals, of course do not accept the charge. And the problem is tougher for them because they form the government and have to establish resources policy. The imminent report of Revenue Minister Herb Gray on how to handle foreign investment is expected to deal to some extent with this dilemma.

One informed source said the week: "The U.S. pressure on the government to gain easier access' to our resources is simply tremendous, unbelievable."

Footbridge Boutique Specializes in Unusual

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville, like many other cities, has had its share of boutique and novelty shops but many have closed after only a few months in business.

The Door in the Wall, located on the footbridge walkway, is now the newest addition to the business community and the young merchants running the store have the confidence that their store will not become another of the statistics.

"We are entering the whims and fancies of the casual shopper as well as the needs of the serious contemporary art collector," said Shirley Yanover, half owner of the boutique. "If we keep our marketing area broad enough, we may be able to stay in business."

Both Miss Yanover and her business partner, Tom Walters are newcomers to the trade of retailing but with their inexperience comes a friendly atmosphere in which to shop around for the oddities that abound in the little store.

One of the interesting things about the store is you can see both owners working at a table, preparing small pieces to be sold in the shop.

"We aren't trying to be a super professional shop," said Tom Walters. "We want to keep the store casual and personal."

Art objects in the store are designed to be appealing to any collector of contemporary work. Ranging from water colors to oils to pottery to metal sculptors.

"One thing we are trying to do is keep the prices reasonable so that art will not be out of reach financially," said Miss Yanover.

Trinkets and decorative bottles covered in macrame can be bought for as little as a dollar.

A large drawing card for the store is a vast selection of pottery from the collection of Audrey Davies.

"The best part about the pottery is you can buy a piece made by Mrs. Davies for half the price of the similarly line variety in other stores," said Mr. Walters.

"This holds true for the entire store. Once you have a look from the store, no one else is going to turn up with the same thing in their living room," said Miss Yanover.

Most people know of Mrs. Davies' work with pottery, but it is a less known fact that she does a great deal of batik dyeing.

On display in the shop is a wide selection of hand-dyed scarves done by her.

The walls, floors and windows are covered in the Trenton engineer's work.

Mr. Lassing, preoccupied in his expressions, works with oils, water colors and metal sculpture. An interesting piece in the store is a red and yellow bumble-bee made from steel tubing and iron.

"We both feel this is a necessary store in a community the size of Belleville," said Mr. Walters. "Artists in and around the city need a place such as this to show their work."

The store will consider any artist as a contributor to the merchandise, upon approval.

"We are trying to show a high level of art coming from artists in the area, and this will, or should be, the greatest attraction in the store," said Miss Yanover.

The store opened early last week and is open daily including Thursday evenings.

Vanderwater Park Is Popular

Daily admissions to conservation areas in the Moira watershed and the number of campers at the Colonel Van-derwater Conservation Area at Thomasburg showed a marked increase during the past summer as compared with 1970.

At their December meeting held in Canniff Hall Thursday members were told that daily admissions to conservation areas increased by 33 per cent while at Vanderwater last there was a camper increase of better than a third.

To provide for the increased usage it is becoming necessary to expand the picnic and camping facilities, it was stated.

The principal conservation areas operated by the authority are the 623 - acre park at Vanderwater, 36 agres at the O'Hara Mill area north of Madoc and the 22 acre Price park at Actinolite.

In addition to the picnic and camping usage, the Vanderwater Conservation Area is also extensively used for outdoor education purposes with the number of school children visiting the park increasing each year.

School usage of the park has now been extended to three seasons — spring, fall and winter. During the spring more than 2,000 children visited the park for one day excursions, another 1,200 were on the fall, while 210 braved cold weather for winter excursions.

In addition, nearly 2,000 students took in the authority's sugar bush demonstration last spring; 1,120 took part in the authority's litter lit and 1,533 visited the historic O'Hara Mill.

During the past summer a 20 - by - 40 - foot picnic rain shelter was erected at Vanderwater park, 15,000 pine and spruce trees were planted and the access road to the camping area was extended another mile.

And next year when Quinte district motorists get their 1972 auto licence plates they will receive a reminder about pollution.

Belleville 7 Alderman Robin Jeffrey, chairman of the authority education and information committee said 25,000 litter bags had been acquired and these would be handed out with licence plates at licence offices in Belleville, Tweed and Madoc.

Separate School Ratepayers To Be Sent News Letters

Separate school ratepayers in Hastings and Prince Edward counties will get newsletters next year to keep them up to date on their schools.

The separate school board decided this week to allocate $1,500 for preparation of the newsletters, to go out to households three times a year.

The newsletter is designed to be part of a program to improve public relations and establish, communication with ratepayers.

The board's administration will be the final arbiter in decisions on editing and content.

The newsletter will probably be run about four pages long, and about 4,000 copies will be printed.

Distribution will be handled through the schools. There are about 3,945 households in the separate school system.

A name and format for the newsletter will be submitted by the superintendent to the board and the first issue should be ready for distribution by spring.

Fire Leaves Nine Homeless

Destroyed by fire was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leween, who with their seven children, lived on the town's western limits on the Tyendinaga Bay of Quinte Mohawk reserve.

The fire broke out about 12.30 a.m. today and the frame house was blazing beyond control as the town's volunteer fire department rushed to the scene.

Town Police Chief Carl Beattie estimated the children ranged in ages from a year-old infant to about 12 years. He said the family — which escaped in its night-clothes — was taken in by relatives after the blaze.

Clothes hanging out to dry were used to keep the youngsters warm after they fled the house, said a provincial police officer.

Another Deer Killed

An Ameliasburg woman, Marie Huffman, 44, struck and killed a deer on Highway 14, north of Mountain View, shortly after 5 p.m. Thursday.

Damage to the car she was driving was estimated at $150.

On December 5, a car driven by 18 - year - old Carl Mayhee, of 33 Gilbert Street, Belleville, collided with a deer on Scoharie Road.

Boston Braves Open American Hockey Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Braves opened a 15-point spread over Nova Scotia in the American Hockey League's Eastern Division Friday night, but it wasn't through lack of effort on the part of the Voyageurs.

The Braves toppled Springfield Kings 3-1 while the Halifax-based Voyageurs came out on the short end of a 4-3 count to Rochester despite a 30-shot barrage on Americans goaltender Serge Aubry.

Tonight the Voyageurs visit Cleveland Barons, Cincinnati Swords are at Baltimore Clippers, Hershey Bears entertain Rochester, Richmond is in Springfield and Tidewater Red Wings are at home to Providence.

Sunday's schedule has Nova Scotia at Cincinnati, Boston at Providence, Hershey in Richmond, Springfield at Rochester and Baltimore visiting Tidewater.

Goals by Terry O'Reilly and Ron Boehm, just over three minutes apart in the third period, lifted Boston past Springfield and extended the Braves unbeaten string at Boston Garden to 19 games.

Richie Leduc potted the otherwise goal after the Kings had opened a 1-0 lead in the first period on a power-play goal from Wayne Chernicki, then tried to protect it with defensive hockey but allowed 41 Boston shots as goaltender Bruce Landers.

Aubry stopped 40 of 41 shots in the last two periods as the Voyageurs' offensive machine came from 2-0 and 3-2 deficits to overcome the Nova Scotians.

Third-period goals Gary Bardin and John Cunniff snapped the Voyageurs' undefeated string at eight games, four wins and four ties.

Rich Leniewicz and Doug Bridges also scored for Rochester while Ron Busniuk, Germain Gagnon and Randy Rota replied for Nova Scotia.

A first-period fight between Garwasiuk and Robins' Dave Schultz spread to other players, including Reds' Steve Andruschak on the bench. Referee John McCauley assessed 74 minutes in penalties from the skirmish, including four game misconduct penalties.

Dallas Comes Back

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dallas Black Hawks came back from a 3-0 deficit Friday to defeat Omaha Knights 4-3 in a Central Hockey League game.

In the only other Friday game, Tulsa Oilers and Fort Worth Wings skated to a 4-4 tie.

Omaha took a 3-0 lead before the Black Hawks in the first period on goals by Bill Hogaboam, Wendell Bennett and Dennis Vickers. But Dallas held the Knights scoreless in the last two periods and took the win on goals by Bob Siemieniuk and one each by Larry Romanchych and Dan Maloney. Siemieniuk's second tally with only 2:30-left in the game was the winning margin.

Ross Lonsberry and Randy Manery had the other Fort Worth goals while Cal Swenson had two for the Oilers and Rick Kehoe and Murray Heatley one apiece.

Unwilling Senators Face Extra Sittings to Handle Tax Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Squeezed out of the Commons by a debate-cutting guillotine rule Friday, the government's tax bill now is in the hands of the Senate, where opposition members are unwillingly participating in extra sittings to debate it.

The upper chamber—which usually sits later in the week than Thursday—gathered Friday night and agreed to sit Saturday in an effort to give the bill parliamentary passage by Christmas.

But Conservative members and some Liberals as well expressed resentment over government pressure to speed the bill through, as urged by Government Senate Leader Paul Martin.

The Liberal Commons majority pushed the bill through the Commons by a vote of 133 to 83 after a time-limiting rule was imposed by the government on the debate for the second time this year.

Closure-by-clause committee study was cut off by the rule last week.

The vote ended 50 days of Commons talk on the legislation, which would reverse the federal income-tax system for individuals and businesses.

Voting with the three opposition parties against the bill in the Commons were Liberal renegades Eric Cunningham (Essex-Windsor-Tecumseh Riverway), who quit the cabinet in April in a dispute over economic policy, and Paul Hellyer (Ind. L—Toronto Trinity), who left the government in 1969 in disagreement over housing policy.

The 726-page bill, the government says, would remove one million others. It would introduce taxation of one-half such capital gains as stock-market profits and rearrange levies on corporations.

Defeated 123 to 83 was a last-ditch attempt by the Conservatives to send the bill back to committee for reconsideration, splitting the legislation, implementing tax cuts now and leaving other provisions for a later government proclamation.

The New Democrats sided with the Liberals against the Conservatives and Social Credit on that vote.

Standing in the 264-seat House: Liberal 158, Conservative 71, New Democrat 25, Social Credit 11, Independent 2, Independent Liberal 1, vacant 2.

There was only restrained satisfaction among Liberals when counted.

While the elected Commons had made its decision, there was still the Senate hurdle to clear.

In the Senate, where members have been complaining that the government expected them to pass in days what had taken the Commons months, Senator Martin called on colleagues to pass the bill quickly so taxpayers could pursue their January "without confusion and without uncertainty."

Opening the Senate debate within hours of Commons' passage Friday night, he met opposition heckling and harsh words unusual in the chamber, where the appointed senators are normally casual and congenial.

Leader of the 214-hour evening debate for the opposition, Senator Lionel Choquette (PC—Ontario), denounced the bill as complicated and poorly drafted. He said there were "a few loose points" that should be cleared up in committee study.

While there was disagreement over certain provisions, he said, "no tax bill has ever been fully accepted by all sections of the people."

He began his speech with a recommendation for the Senate banking committee, which held hearings for six months on the tax-policy white paper issued in 1969, and which has been studying the draft bill since September.

He said many of the committee's recommendations have been adopted in the bill.

But, in testy exchanges, Senate Opposition Leader Jacques Flynn and Senator Alasdair Graham (PC—Ontario) objected.

Worriers About Body Odor Usually Do Not Have It

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What can you do if deodorants don't work for a person? I am slim (108 pounds) and not overly active, yet at the end of each day I find the underarm area is stale.

At times when I have been out socially or close to people I get the impression that the odor might be a bit stronger than I can sense. They scuff, look at me another, or seem uncomfortable.

I have consulted doctors, but they seem unable to help me. All they said: "All people have some kind of odor when they perspire."

My husband and children don't seem to notice.—I.D.

I've often noted that the folks who complain the most about body odor usually don't have it. The ones with really strong underarm odor are usually unaware of it or don't care.

Frankly, I think it is a favor for everyone concerned if a person who really smells bad—constantly, I mean—would be told so, one way or another.

But in your case, Mrs. D., your husband, your family, and your doctors have told you that you do not have that problem. Why not believe them? The only "evidence" you have to the contrary is "an impression" that people sniff. So what do you do when the odor is strong, it is an indication that bacteria are at work. These bacteria, moist and warm, provide most of the odor.

In most cases, shaving, bathing and the use of one of the various anti-perspirants will do all that is necessary. In really stubborn cases, the use of an anti-bacterial soap occasionally may be needed—but don't use such soaps every day, as every use can be irritating.

Besides that, sweating is to a large extent under nervous control. In some instances, a mild sedative calms the patient down enough to prevent excessive sweating.

In your case, Mrs. D., I suspect that what you need more than anything else is reassurance, dispelling the idea that you smell when the evidence says you don't.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have switched from nibbling on good-

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
West	1♠	Pass	4♥
3 NT	Pass	4♥

Opening lead — king of spades.

Some of the most difficult plays in bridge are really quite simple if you stop to think about them. Consider this deal where West could have stopped declarer from making four hearts had he been slightly more careful.

West led the king of spades, on which East played the three and South the six, deducing from the bidding that declarer had the A-J-6-5 spades and that a spade continuation would be fatal. East shifted to the queen of clubs at trick two.

Declarer won with the ace, drew three rounds of trumps, ended the fate of clubs, and led a diamond from dummy. East played the jack. South took the king and West the ace, but it now did not matter which suit West played next.

A club return would hand declarer a ruff and discard, a spade return would go right into the A-J, while a diamond return to East's jack would establish South's 10-9 and permit him to discard a spade from dummy. So South made the contract as a result of the only two-play position he had achieved.

Tempting though it was for West to win the king of diamonds with the ace, he should have stifled the impulse and played low instead. He should have realized that unless East had the queen of diamonds the contract could not be defeated, and he should have defended on that basis by ducking the king.

Had he done this, the contract would have gone down one trick. Whenever declarer got around to leading dia-monds from the South hand he would win with the queen and speedily run off the spades. South would then wind up taking second money, losing two spades and two diamonds to go down one.

What the Stars Say

Sunday, December 19

Aries (March 21-April 19). The wait for the right person to share your life may have been long, but it won't be in vain in vain. Those who have refused to settle for second best find their dream.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). There are enough long term projects that are slowly being fulfilled to offset any temporary disappointments. The best is yet to come.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). You can do things your way for a change. In fact, you probably are willing to admit that their own ideas haven't turned out the way they're promised.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). The initial indecision can make you stick around to hear more. You can be sure, as well, that you're not being handed a watered down line.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Those under your care are happy to listen to your advice. A brief exposure to the big, wide world proves to them that they're still a little wet behind the ears.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Dear ones are longing to please you in every way they can. What you really should do is let them know what would make you happy. Otherwise you may have to feign pleasure.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Go to work to end your private quarrels in top shape. Seasonal decorations can add immeasurably to the mood you wish to create.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). You really don't have to say what you're thinking—loved ones can read your mind. There's much less of a mystery to them than you would like to believe.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Time is quickly running out, so you'd better step planning and start executing your ideas if you expect next weekend to be a big success. The family is counting on you.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You're apt to be deeply touched by a small but sincere gesture of affection from a friend. The food thought behind this act may mean more than anything money can buy.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You're the one who holds the key to everything working out smoothly on schedule. Best plans are liable to be ones that you're working on in secret.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). A pleasant thank you won't be forthcoming for something you've done out of his way to make your loved one special. Find some concrete way to show your gratitude.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—Business success comes with a guarantee this year, so you can plan on making needed improvements where you live. Kin will be a source-in handy, if domestic pressures are lifted.

Monday, December 20

Your birthday today: Imaginative experiment eventually takes over for you once you get going in a few more months. Reorganization and consolidation efforts. The turning point will be quite definite. Today's natives are inclined to seek political challenge, vigorous occupations.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Begin the week in your own style. It's your initiative. Don't be bound by organized deals for first attention.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Trusted team-mates constitute the entire scene for you today. Bond your share in group ventures. Bring in new associates.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Is buying for sentimental reasons. remember it's a symbol or token only—the sum expended having little meaning beside the sense of your remembrance.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Having reflected on yesterday's gains, you begin a moderate week of peaceful personal progress.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): A forthright approach is the only tactful method now. Ask for what is due you, collect old debts, write off what is definitely gone.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Correct whatever you can reach today—it may be your last chance to make many personal corrections.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good deal of your flexibility concerning things which turn you on best. Expect a record presentation of the 1971-72 season bad sold-out signs out for every performance, including matinees.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Differences of opinion are easy to cause or ease at all. Pay no serious attention until it's in your own ballwick.

Tweed

TWEED — Members of St. John's United Church junior choirs are presenting the "Christmas Story" in reading and song on December 19. The program will be held in St. John's Church at 7:30 p.m. with the public invited to attend. At this joyful time, the choir of 77 voices has chosen many beautiful anthems and carols including "Gloria" of the "First Christmas". The choir is under the direction of Mrs. Gwen Kingston.

Burns McMillan of Tweed and Grant McMillan Jr. of Toronto have last week from Toronto to attend the funeral of their brother-in-law, Gordon McInnes of Calgary.

FRANKFORD — Brian Daniels of Sudbury spent a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Daniels and Denise.

Mr. and Mrs. William Murray spent the weekend in Toronto with relatives, Mrs. George Sewnick, Mrs. Murray's mother, returned with them to spend the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer spent a day last week in Belleville and Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Larry Rodgers of Sudbury are spending a week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Robertson, and mother Mrs. Molly Rodgers.

Market Acquires Firm Base

Prospect of Devalued U.S. Dollar Boosts Stocks

By PETER LESCENITZ
Canadian Press Staff Writer

An announcement by the United State's government that it is willing to devalue its dollar as part of a realignment of world currencies was the major factor responsible for the strong advance on Canadian stock markets this week.

Although the advance was not as spectacular as in recent weeks, stock prices continued to recover from record lows registered midway through the year.

Another factor responsible for the advance was investor speculation that the current 10-per-cent extra duty on U.S. imports will soon be dropped.

Analysts said the market "now has a firm base which will support a steady recovery." Several observers said they expect the market's current rally to extend into early 1972.

The Toronto market's industrial index, a major indicator of market activity, gained 4.59 points during the week closing at 178.70, its best level since Sept. 17.

At New York, prices closed higher, erasing losses suffered during the previous week. Trading was active.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index rose 1.27 points to 183.32.

Combined volume on the two exchanges was 6.09 million shares compared with 5.96 million last week.

At Toronto, trading continued active. During the week a total of 14.36 million shares changed hands, the fourth most-active week of the year and up from 10.44 million last week.

Tuesday, the market recorded its second-largest volume of the year with 2.57 million shares being traded.

At New York, the Dow Jones industrial average of 30 key blue-chip stocks climbed 17.06 points to 872.80.

Volume on Wall street was 20.32 million shares, up from 11.89 million last week.

Western oils issues recorded the sharpest advance on Canadian markets. The Toronto exchange's western oil index closed Friday at 234.87, up 11.39 points.

Analysts said much of the advance was based on speculative buying on the part of investors.

"Many exploration companies now are beginning their winter exploration programs and investors are beginning to take positive positions in this sector of the market," one analyst said.

Gold issues showed little reaction to the news that the U.S. may devalue its dollar, by increasing the price it will pay for gold on the world bullion market.

The Toronto market's gold index fell .57 points to 144.81 during the week.

There was little news to guide investors in the base metal sector of the market this week and generally prices traded within narrow ranges, buoyed by a firm tone of the market.

At Toronto, the base metal index zoned at 74.75, up .71 points on the week.

New Brunswick's North Shore Faces Bleak Prospects

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — The young millworker stood on a downtown street in this northeastern New Brunswick city listening to Christmas carols and watching shoppers dodge cars on the snow-packed street.

"There have been layoffs before and there will be layoffs again," he said. "We'll get by."

The resource-based forest and mining industries along New Brunswick's north shore have always been subject to market fluctuations and the resulting reduction in production and jobs.

And the hardy residents, who work the mills and mines in the towns and villages that dot the Bay of Chaleur coastline, have always managed to survive the bad times.

But there is growing concern by some residents, labor and government this holiday season as layoffs and indefinite shutdowns threaten jobs of more than 1,000 workers in the next few months.

New Brunswick Labor Federation officials estimate 20,000 of the approximately 100,000 north shore residents, including families and workers in related service industries, could be affected.

On the streets of Bathurst and in the tiny mining communities there is a reluctance to talk about the layoffs. Some are afraid they may be blacklisted by employers and others think the economic difficulties are receiving too much publicity and have been over-dramatized.

"All the publicity we've been getting these two weeks tends to create panic and there's no cause for panic," one woman said. "We'll get through it somehow. We always have."

"We've had seasonal layoffs before," downtown merchant and town councillor William Davidson comments.

"... We're not ready to be pushed into the coffin yet.

Some 250 workers at the Fraser Cos. Ltd. pulp mill at Atholville have lost their jobs during the sixth temporary shutdown during 1971 because of high inventory and poor market conditions.

Anaconda American Brass Co. has stopped operations at its mine because of low-grade deposits, throwing 170 men on the unemployment rolls. Consolidated Bathurst Ltd., the economic backbone of the region, will lay off 220 men between January and March as the result of an estimated $3.6-million loss in 1971.

East Coast Smelting and Chemical Co. Ltd. in Belledune is scheduled to lay off between 230-280 men beginning next month during a two-year conversion to improve the efficiency of its shelter.

Adding to the economic chaos, 245 persons have been on strike since Nov. 22 at Nigadoo River Mines Ltd. for higher wages and there have been indications from the financially-shaky company that it may quit the mine indefinitely.

The latest setback came this week when Gordon Pew Ltd. announced plans to sell its Caraquet, Nfld., fish plant, a move that would place jobs of 280 in jeopardy unless a buyer is found. And Belledune Fertilizers Ltd. will layoff 65 workers for two months in mid-January because of poor markets and an insufficient supply of acid.

Anaconda has been on uncertain financial footing since its copper mine holdings in Chile were nationalized. The company may not be able to resume operations in New Brunswick.

The pulp and paper industry has been hit by an increased supply and reduced demand in world markets along with the impegging of the Canadian dollar.

"It is costing us more to make products than the market price can demand," said Consolidated Bathurst mill manager Eric Lowe.

"We can't go on absorbing increases in costs without price increases and we're not in the right market situation."

The labor movement has always played an important role in Bathurst, a city of about 17,000. There are 13 unions in the region and the city is one of a handful of Canadian centres that still has an annual Labor Day parade.

The federation has called for the north shore to be designated a special area eligible for department of regional economic expansion grants to stimulate secondary industries. It has also asked for a moratorium on all layoffs.

A "day of concern" is planned Jan. 16 to dramatize the situation, with invitations extended to provincial and federal authorities to attend.

Smallwood Expropriates Fish Plant at Burgeo

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The provincial government has expropriated a fish plant at Burgeo, Nfld. and has asked the research and productivity council of Newfoundland to take over management, Premier Joseph Smallwood said Friday.

Mr. Smallwood told a news conference the government hopes Burgeo Fish Industries Ltd., closed Nov. 12 after a labor strike that began June 4, would eventually be purchased by a co-operative.

He said the research and productivity council, a New Brunswick government body, would decide whether to take on the management job after a survey.

Spencer Lake, owner of Burgeo Fish Industries, could not be reached for comment.

Mr. Lake and his family moved to Ramea, on Newfoundland's southwest coast, near Burgeo, when he closed the plant after refusing to recognize the Newfoundland Fishermen, Food and Allied Workers Union as the bargaining agent for his employees.

Five Children Die When Fire Destroys Their Home Near Bath

AMHERSTVIEW (Staff) — Fire early this morning claimed the lives of five children and sent their mother to hospital in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Gallo- way and a sixth child escaped the blaze in their two-storey frame dwelling at 3253, Bath. The home was located approximately 15 miles east of Bath and 19 miles west of Kingston.

Lt. Leslie Hallam of Number Two fire hall, Amherstview Fire Department, reported the "fire was out of control when we arrived," shortly after the 2.15 a.m. alarm. "Nothing was saved," he said.

The entire dwelling was reduced to a heap of rubble.

A spokesman at Kingston General Hospital reports Mrs. Galloway was admitted to hospital suffering from fire and smoke inhalation and shock. Mr. Galloway was treated and released.

The dead children were identified as George, 13, Robert, 11, Roy, 9, Alberta, 7, and Rhonda, 4.

Two other children escaped the blaze. James, 14, was spending the night with relatives while Pamela, 2, has been a patient for about a week at Kingston Hospital.

Lt. Hallam reports no other buildings were damaged.

A total of 21 men, two pumpers and two trucks from the Odessa and Amherstview fought the fire.

Money Pact Means More Jobs in Canada

Canada Gets Floating Dollar

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian dollar will continue to float freely for now in a far-reaching revision of world monetary values based on lowering the American dollar by 8.7 per cent.

That plus removal of the 10-per-cent U.S. import surcharge, emerged Saturday from Washington consultations as a victory for tenaciously-held Canadian bargaining goals.

Finance Minister E.J. Benson was expected to report to the Commons today on the accord reached at a Group of Ten meeting the U.S. and other non-Communist nations.

Immediate reaction from business spokesmen was favourable, in some cases enthusiastic.

More protection and employment were envisaged, with some balancing off caused by the higher prices for imports from nations raising the value of their money in relation to the devalued U.S. dollar.

That covers Japan and West Germany, Britain and France are revaluing only to the extent the U.S. dollar drops.

Two main uncertainties remain:

1. Will the Canadian dollar, as Mr. Benson forecasts, settle down at about par with the devalued U.S. dollar? It is now par now and its international rating will be based closely.

Treasury Secretary John Connally of the U.S. has predicted the Canadian dollar will be higher in value, giving U.S. exports a competitive advantage but lowering the cost of Canada's huge volume of imports of American goods.

2. What effect if any will the Washington accord have on continuing Canada-U.S. negotiations on trade irritants, begun about Aug. 15?

The government has insisted from the start that these have no relation to the monetary questions or to Canadian pressure to get rid of the import surcharge that fell on about $2 billion of annual Canadian sales to the U.S. of $11 billion, chiefly labor-heavy manufactured goods.

Mr. Benson said Saturday the talks are continuing and should be no tougher.

Canada is expected to drop some safeguards from the 1965 auto production agreement, working too well in Canada's favor, expand the amount of goods Canadians can buy duty-free in the U.S. and perhaps work to erase a surplus that has accumulated in a defence production sharing agreement.

The whole process concluded Saturday, as well as the continuing bilateral trade talks, had begun shortly after President Nixon took the drastic action Aug. 15 to cure the chronic U.S. dollar drain caused by lagging trade revenue, heavy overseas military spending and other factors.

"We've come out of it accomplishing what we said we would try to accomplish after Aug. 15 and we worked darned hard to get there," a tired Mr. Benson told reporters Saturday. He spent Sunday at his Kingston home.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield said he intends to ask Mr. Benson today about the conflicting forecasts on where the dollar will land.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North), commenting in the absence of NDP Leader David Lewis, said it is good news that the post-Aug. 15 monetary uncertainty has been removed.

"But we'll have to wait and see if the actual package is to our advantage. What's the new exchange rate going to be?"

He said the NDP will favor intervening to stop the dollar from settling for more than the new U.S. value, which will trike effect after the Congress approves it.

Canada is the only one of the 10 major nations with an unpegged or free currency.

In May, 1970, the dollar was freed from a peg of 92.5 cents in American terms, with room to shift one per cent either side of that peg.

Canadian Dollar Up Slightly

NEW YORK (CP) — The Canadian dollar, still left with a "free" float after the weekend money revision of major currencies, was only slightly higher in opening foreign exchange dealings in terms of U.S. funds on the New York market today.

Foreign exchange dealers, noting there was little trading at the start in the Canadian dollar, quoted it at $1.00 29-64, up 1-64th from Friday's closing of $1.00 9-16.

The U.S. devaluation of its dollar by about eight per cent had little effect on the value of the Canadian dollar but it did affect the British pound.

Sterling was quoted at $2.55 23-64, up a little more than two cents from Friday's closing of $2.53 19-64.

"It's for the man who has everything... Why phone number!"

U.S. Aid For Bengal Heath Aim

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath planned to urge President Nixon at their two-day meeting starting today to join in an emergency program of international relief for the war-stricken millions of East Pakistan.

Authoritative sources said the British leader was certain American aid on a multi-million-dollar scale is essential for two reasons:

—With their food dwindling and their communications shattered the Bengalis need help direly.

—The United States must move fast to reverse the consequences of having backed the regime of President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan.

Heath is ready to pledge full British participation, a high-ranking British source reported.

U.S. Will Drop Export Credits

TORONTO (CP) — The agreement on new currency values for industrial nations likely will translate into more employment in Canada and higher prices for overseas imports, business representatives said Sunday.

The agreement, announced late Saturday in Washington, was for new values for nine major currencies, including a reduction in the value of the United States dollar.

A matter still of concern to Canadian business is U.S. legislation creating the Domestic International Sales Corp. (DISC). The legislation is aimed at encouraging U.S. companies to increase manufacturing of export items at U.S. plants instead of at foreign subsidiary plants.

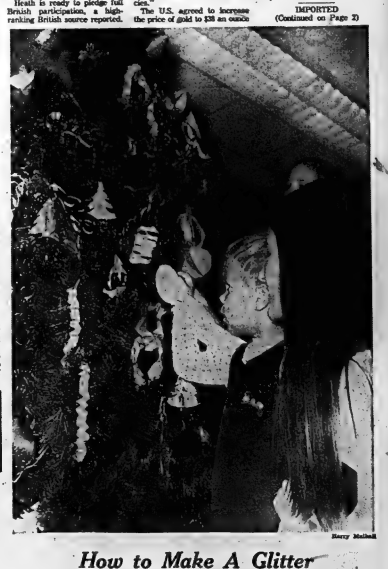
The Americans also agreed to eliminate extra tariffs imposed earlier this year and drop a recently created system of tax credits for U.S. exporters.

J. C. Whitelaw, executive vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, said the U.S. concessions "will have very favorable production and employment effects in Canada."

"The weekend developments represent a major step towards the stabilization of the international economy. In particular, it is encouraging that the realignment of the world monetary system is taking place concurrently with the removal of isolationist American trade policies."

The U.S. agreed to increase the price of gold to $38 an ounce from $35 and the effect will be a reduction in the value of the American dollar by 8.57 per cent.

At the same time, some other countries will increase the value of their currencies.



The Canadian dollar will be the only one of the Group of Ten currencies that will not be pegged immediately at a fixed value.

The Group of Ten includes Canada, the U.S. Japan and the major European nations.

Economists and businessmen here said Sunday they do not expect major fluctuations in the value of the dollar, its value was 6-16th of a cent above par with the U.S. dollar at the close of currency markets Friday, which meant it had been revalued by almost nine per cent since being freed from a peg of 92.5 cents U.S. on June 1, 1970.

Canada to Be Choosy About Investments

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says Canada can afford to be choosy about the foreign investment it accepts, and the government intends to see that it is.

In an interview with Paul Akehurst of Canadian Contemporary News broadcast Sunday, the prime minister spoke generally on a foreign investment policy statement that the government is scheduled to make shortly.

He said Canada does not have to take all foreign investment at all costs, because it was now a wealthy enough country to say:

"This type of foreign investment is good because it will bring a certain kind of jobs and certain benefits in technology . . . and this other kind of foreign investment is not good because it does not bring any additional jobs and it does not help the economy in any significant way."

Mr. Trudeau said there will have to be co-operation with the provinces on foreign investment, but the federal government could do some things on its own and he expected the policy statement would be announced very soon.

Yahya Khan Resigns

Bhutto Becomes Pakistan President

From AP-REUTER

President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan resigned today, and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, West Pakistan's most powerful political leader, succeeded him as president and chief martial law administrator.

Yahya Khan resigned because of his army's defeat in the two-week war with I... His resignation ended 13 years of military rule in Pakistan, but the retention of martial law indicated that the army would continue to play a key role.

Bhutto was sworn in shortly after he returned from the United States, where he had argued Pakistan's case against India at the United Nations and conferred with President Nixon Saturday.

Since the end of the war with India Friday, the 54-year-old Yahya had been blamed for misleading the nation and bungling the handling of the conflict.

The handover of power came just three days after Pakistan's acceptance of a ceasefire with India—days in which feelings against Yahya rose to fever pitch.

The anti-Yahya forces had become so emboldened that Sunday a former air force commander-in-chief declared publicly that Yahya should not only be ousted, but brought to trial.

Gas Station Operators Oppose Shell Outlet

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton gas station operators are forming a united front to oppose construction by Shell Canada of a large car wash-gas bar in the town.

Shell had announced its intention last week to build a $250,000 service centre at the Dundas St. East and Byron St. corner, if the town would revise a bylaw that imposes a ceiling of 24 retail gas outlets for Trenton.

In a presentation to council a week ago, Shell representative George Ellsworth asked council to lift this limit to permit construction of the new facility that he said would transform the busy east side intersection into "the showcase corner of Trenton".

Council tabled the motion to examine the situation further.

Now a petition has been received at the Municipal Office signed by most of the town's 24 gas station operators, asking council to leave the limit on outlets intact. The petition will be considered at tonight's committee - of - the - whole session.

Clothing Thief Was Selective

Police may very well be looking for a short, well-dressed thief with an eye for fine dress vests this morning, as the result of a break-in at Sourrell the Tailor, 49 Bridge Street.

According to Mr. Sourrell, the thief "doesn't make sense". The thief apparently overlooked $15,000 in rolled cloth for $357.50 worth of goods. The proprietor reports this is the first break-in he has experienced since coming to Belleville three years ago.

A fancy vest of Stewart tartan recently finished an overcoat, one suit and eight belts of checkered cloth which could be used to make sports jackets, was the total haul.

"This is very strange," the tailor commented this morning. "I don't know why in the world he would have left an expensive suit and take a cheaper overcoat, unless he was short."

The proprietor explained that an expensive vest hanging next to the missing overcoat, had been overlooked.

The suit was made for a six-foot two-inch man.

Nativity Scene in the Snow

One of the features of mid-town Trenton's seven days of the year is the life-sized nativity scene on the St. Peter's Church property on Dundas Street. Fresh fallen snow and colored spotlights enhanced the beauty of the outdoor decoration for passersby last night.

Imported Goods to Cost More

nadian exporters will be delighted with the news that the U.S. surcharge and the buy-American provision of Job Development Credit will be seen to tain to be removed before the end of the year."

The question now is whether the new economic policies will succeed in restoring economic growth in the U.S. and thus bolster the demand for Canada's major exports to the U.S., such as pulp and paper.

R. M. MacIntosh, an economist with the Toronto Dominion Bank, said Canada's long-term growth potential is exceptional if an exchange rate of roughly par is maintained.

"That means a balanced current account and a rough balance on capital account as well. That's the direction we should head in."

To achieve these balances, he said Canada may have to prevent major capital inflows. Meanwhile, the Canadian dollar would have to float for some time in view of the apparent disagreement between Washington and Ottawa on where the Canadian dollar should stand.

Prof. Seymour Fried, director of capital markets research at York University, said the issue will be whether Ottawa can keep the Canadian dollar from continuing to rise with respect to U.S. currency.

He said if the dollar rises to $1.02, "it is questionable whether the pulp and paper industry could survive."

What it comes down to, Dr. Friedland says, is that the world will need more frequent currency revaluations. Most who Canada has to work out ways of getting its dollar somewhat lower on a permanent basis that level.

But Ian MacDonald, Ontario deputy minister of economics, said withdrawal of the surcharge is unlikely to affect consumer prices.

He said imposition of the surcharge had not increased prices since it had been largely absorbed in corporate profits, although its effects would have been felt if it had continued.

Allan Crossman, Ontario minister of trade and development, said much depends on the ultimate level of the Canadian dollar.

"The surcharge was a millstone around our neck but the other guy's the value of our dollar," he said.

Keith Dixon, general manager of the Canadian Importers Association, said the changes in monetary values likely will mean higher prices for imports from such countries as Japan, Germany, France and Britain. These countries are Canada's major trading partners after the United States, which accounts for about 70 per cent of Canada's foreign trade.

The higher prices for some other currencies will make Canadian-made goods more competitive abroad.

C. H. Scofield, general manager of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said he hopes there will be swift action from the U.S. Congress, which must approve the agreement negotiated by U.S. representatives

With the new currency values, Canadian exports will be "more competitive in all sectors and will be benefitted in 1972."

J. H. Stevens, president of Canada Wire and Cable Co. Ltd., and chairman of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association executive, said removal of the extra U.S. tariffs was "a major psychological factor, if not a practical factor."

Many companies had delayed investment programs because of uncertain monetary conditions and the increased plans now would be implemented.

Narufumi Yane, president of Canadian Motor Industries Ltd., importers of Toyota cars, said the revaluation of the yen would result in price increases but it was too early to say how much the increase would be.

"Common sense says there must be some slow-down in our sales."

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. said the Japanese car manufacturers have had wage rates which "we just couldn't contend with."

"This revaluation will, to some extent, even out the advantage they had in labor rates."

Meanwhile, the $3 an ounce increase in gold was not expected to have any significant impact on the Canadian mining industry, although it means a paper profit of about $75 million for Ottawa.

The paper profit comes from the increased value of Bank of Canada gold reserves.

But for Canadian gold mines there is no immediate benefit since almost all sell on the open market where gold closed Friday at about $42.75 an ounce.

There may be some benefits for the gold mining industry if the new gold price becomes a basis for federal cost-aid programs. Some are set at $35 an ounce, but even this would not likely be enough to bring new mines into production.

Snow Total 8 Inches In North

Saturday night and Sunday morning saw the Quinte district huddled under an inches-thick snow blanket as temperatures dipped close to zero in the Belleville-Trenton area.

Coldest spot in the Quinte district was Bancroft, where the mercury fell to 20 below Sunday morning, the Dept. of Lands and Forests reported. The weather bureau at Trenton eight-inch snowfall to the northern end of the district. A total of four inches of snow fell on Belleville during the weekend with a low of two above early Sunday morning.

The CFB Trenton weather forecaster reported today.

The snow made for sluggish driving in built-up areas.

Any snow or freezing rain falling in the area today was expected to end by mid-afternoon. Clouding conditions and chances of snowflurries were forecast for Tuesday evening.

Temperatures were expected to reach a high of 35 degrees today dropping to a low of 20 tonight with a high Tuesday of 30.

Blind Guests of Rotarians

Belleville Rotary Club again this year was host for the 22nd time for the annual Christmas party of the blind in Hastings county.

Harmony Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church catered for the turkey dinner, enjoyed by 108 people, including the blind and their escorts, members of the Hastings - Prince Edward Advisory Board and staff members of the CNIB Quinte St. Lawrence Hall in Kingston.

Harold H. Clark, retiring chairman for the Hastings - Prince Edward Advisory Board to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind presided at the meeting. He assured Rotary president Wilmer MacPherson that the annual dinner is most important to the blind, but is greatly appreciated because it is the one time of the year when they can all get together.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland gave a Christmas meditation and the program consisted of a game, two songs by Marilee Jones, who accompanied herself on the guitar, and Clyde Dawson playing two accordion selections. A four-piece band of young musicians also performed.

Greetings were read from the National president of the Canadian Council for the Blind and from Jack and Janet Bews.

Canada's Dollar Will Float

At Washington, the conference communique noted, Canada stated its intention "temporarily to maintain a floating exchange rate and intends to permit fundamental market forces to establish the exchange rate without intervention except as required to maintain orderly conditions."

That meant that Canada will try to peg the dollar to a permanent value as soon as it feels it can do so consistent with its economic health.

It also means that Canada reserves the right to intervene in international money markets, through the Bank of Canada, to halt any speculation seeking to make a profit by driving up the value of the dollar.

Mr. Benson noted the new agreement will let pegged currencies fluctuate by 2¼ per cent above or below the peg.

He said this should speed the day when the dollar can be repegged and said as he has before—countering some U.S. assertions—that Canada has not been keeping a lid on the value of the dollar artificially.

But if there was great speculation, Canada would intervene in the market, and "I would remind people that speculate on the Canadian dollar."

Initial reaction from business circles appeared almost as enthusiastic to the Washington agreement as that of senior officials who had been involved in hectic domestic and international consultations ever since the Aug. 15 Nixon bombshell.

They were reported as being "very, very pleased."

"Very favorable production and employment effects" were forecast by J. A. Whitelaw, executive vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association.

Improvement in the stock market was forecast although reservations continued to be expressed about the possible impact of American legislation to restrict the U.S. output of export goods at home rather than utilizing subsidiaries in Canada or elsewhere.

Mr. Benson said the lengthy negotiations had not been easy and there had been a "lot of criticism" from some countries at Canada's adamant bargaining position.

But removal of the U.S. import surcharge shortly "will get rid of a lot of antagonism among countries who don't think it should ever have been imposed on Canada."

That had been the Canadian position from the start.

Real Live 'Fun Fur' Can Be an Ideal Gift

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — For the working girl who keeps her own apartment a "fun fur" can be the perfect Christmas gift, according to Mrs. A. H. Carman, a Bloomfield housewife and one of the few persons in Prince Edward who raises Siamese cats.

Mrs. Carman explains that the Siamese is a better house companion than most other breed of cat and fits readily into apartment living because he does not rebel at being kept indoors.

A cat breeder for the past 15 years, Mrs. Carman now owns 17 Siamese cats, a dozen of them kittens now being offered for sale as ideal stocking stuffers.

These aristocratic youngsters are born with pure white coats which later turn to rich buff tones.

Mrs. Carman notes that there are two varieties of the Siamese cat, the Seal-point and the Bluepoint.

The Seal-point, which she raises, has chocolate brown "points" while the Bluepoint, as his name suggests is distinguished by dark blue-grey markings on the tips of his ears, his paws, and his tail.

Both varieties boast piercing blue eyes which will glow red in the dark instead of the usual amber color observed in other cats.

Strong individualists, Siamese can scorn the traditional saucer of milk.

These sleek felines, who originated in far off Siam reject milk because their ancestors developed no taste for it in a country where it was not in plentiful supply.

The Siamese cat, unlike other breeds, has no inherent fear of water. Once he grows used to it often he will go swimming of his own accord.

He is a born globetrotter and feels equally at home riding in a car or in a motor-boat.

Characterized by what may seem an envy wail to persons unfamiliar with the breed, the Siamese cat frequently "talks" to his owner.

Mrs. Carman observes that this wail is a conversational voice, not a scolding sound.

Each cat has his own meow and the experienced human ear can quickly learn who's who by separating voices.

The Siamese tom is a family man who enjoys babysitting when his mate seeks an hour or two away from her youngsters.

Mrs. Carman says that the male Siamese will jump happily into a basket with his kittens, licking them and caring for them until the female returns.

Toncsals of other breeds sometimes will kill their young if given an opportunity.

Not only is the Siamese a superior parent, but also an exceptionally fine hunter.

The Bloomfield cat breeder remarks that Siamese cats can be allowed to run out-of-doors as long as they are not permitted to stray beyond earshot of their owners' voice.

She says that these cats are very sensitive to sound and will return to their owners when called.

Many Siamese remain indoors most of the time, however, and do not object since they delight in human companionship.

Without affection the Siamese cat grows very unhappy and may refuse to eat.

Mrs. Carman has high praise for the intelligence of the Siamese and claims that he is more readily trained than a puppy.

In fact, a one-time member of the Barnum and Bailey Circus once visited Mrs. Carman to ask how many Siamese cats she could supply him with. He waited to rejoin the big top and realized from experience that he could train a cat act more quickly.

Show business is not part of Mrs. Carman's enjoyment of her cats, although animals owned by her have been sold successfully.

Mrs. Carman notes that she does not feel it is fair to her cats to show them since they are not conditioned to the show business routine. For those who are raised as "stars" she agrees that cat shows are not in the least unsettling.

The Siamese is noted for his longevity and can attain the age of 20 with proper care.

Registered Siamese cats sell for prices varying from $30 to several hundred dollars, depending upon the locality of the market in which they are sold. Show champions sell for very high sums.

Mrs. Carman feels that prospective Siamese owners should buy kittens instead of grown cats to enjoy the deepest bounds of affection with their pets.

She also advocates that these cats should be declawed before making man's home their castle.

Although Christmas time finds a number of shoppers seeking kittens as gifts that are different and sure to please, the Siamese does not always co-operate in balancing supply with demand.

Mrs. Carman comments that last year she had on kittens to sell for the holiday season.

This year, however, her four female cats have supplied her with lively litters but are the "cat's meow" for any gift list.

The kittens' father, Jerome can be justly proud of his 12 tiny offspring.

Truck Burned In Garage

The interior of Seaborne Enterprises on Sinclair Avenue suffered extensive smoke damage and the loss of one of their large high-pressure cleaning trucks Saturday night, as the result of a blaze of undetermined origin.

Workmen had removed a motor from an old car. Firemen report there was grease covering the floor of the garage.

An acetylene torch used by the men, was also confiscated by city fire Captain Allen Vance, after the blaze was extinguished.

The fire was primarily contained within the truck. Firemen believe when the vehicle caught fire, its tires blew. When this occurred, the heavy truck fell on a quantity of varnol, which also burst into flames.

Two of the workmen suffered minor injuries in an attempt to save the vehicle. Richard Ward, 24, of Thomasburg, sustained a broken right hand. Lloyd Mont. 37, also of Thomasburg, received lacerations to his back. Both were treated at Belleville General Hospital and released.

Although no actual value has been established, a spokesman for Seaborne Enterprises this morning said it would take "a lot of work to get the unit back on the road."

29 Accidents Mostly Minor

City police report a total of 29 minor accidents in the city over the weekend. A spokesman for Belleville General opital this morning reported "a regular parade of bruises, cuts and bumps."

Ontario Provincial Police also report a large number of minor accidents and "ditchings" along area roads. Most of these averaged between $150 and $350 in damages.

Most serious reported in the city has resulted in a charge of failing to yield against a Belleville driver.

Joseph Kenneth Courneyea 28, of 65A Charles Street, has been charged as the result of a Saturday morning accident on Dundas Street at the entrance of Constellation Canada Ltd.

Police report he was leaving the company's private lane, when struck by a vehicle driven by Kenneth David Howlett, 24, of RR1, Drilville.

Mr. Courneyea sustained fractured ribs, a broken jaw and concussion. His condition is listed as "satisfactory". Neither his passenger Elizabeth Huddleston, 35 of 44 Harriett Street, nor Mr. Howlett, were injured.

Total damage has been estimated at $1,100.

Bell Truck Stolen, Recovered

Sometime on Sunday, a thief or thieves broke into the Bell Canada garage on Wilson Avenue and stole a company truck.

A door had been locked, but apparently had not caught, thereby allowing the thief entry.

The truck was recovered near the junction of Moira and Sidney Streets this morning.

Paul Hellyer's World

It is April 1968 and the Liberal leadership campaign is reaching its peak in Ottawa. Justice Minister Pierre Trudeau, hair thinning and a lot more confident than today, is the odds - on favorite. But among the other candidates there is Transport Minister Paul Hellyer and like most of his rivals he has an array of young women supporters, superbly groomed in miniskirts and sweaters and straw hats. The girls are in ranks of seven with letters on their sweaters so that they form the name HELLYER in bold letters. Others tout posters proclaiming. Hellyer as the man of "vision and decision." The minister himself is out front with the girls, dark - coated, and suited and sporting one of those straw hats, but looking a little uncomfortable as he tries to keep up with the girls' majorette - style stride.

By far the most numerous of the cheerleading groups, one report noted, "were Paul Hellyer's girls. Bright, pretty and always smiling, they made the most noise, sounded the most eager, and were easily the pushiest . . . "

A report from Montreal said that Le Devoir, in an editorial signed by publisher Claude Ryan, supported Paul Hellyer.

For Mr. Hellyer, as for the others it was the peak of his career. It could have led on to further fame and fortune . . .

The scene is Washington, December 1971. Paul Hellyer is in the U.S. capital to promote his book, "An Agenda: A plan for Action."

Said one report: "Mr. Hellyer was his usual dapper, dynamic self but he sounded discouraged when he talked about the fortunes of Action Canada (the party he established on resigning from the Trudeau government) and his own political future."

Mr. Hellyer, the report went on, blamed the media for much of Action Canada's troubles. "I think in fairness that the media should give more attention to new ideas. Action Canada's policies for economic prosperity, through wage and price controls, deserve a decent debate."

Asked if he thought himself as a voice in the wilderness whose time in history would come — "a Canadian de Gaulle as it were," Mr. Hellyer shook his head and made this statement: "Frankly, I would like to get out of politics. I'm sick to death of politics." But no, he replied to the smarting, inevitable question, he was not about to give up. He was committed to his ideas.

And there we have a glimpse of what it is like to be near the summit of power — then to slip into near - obscurity with your books and economic theories which no one seems willing to listen to, and your memories (notably unification of the armed forces). Wonder what do the retired admirals think of Mr. Hellyer's decline?

Shakespeare said it long ago: "There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune. Omitted, all the world is bound in shallows. . ."

Air Canada, not content with the variety of fashion styles it now permits its stewardesses to wear, has named a former stewardess and in-flight supervisor, Phyllis Ancowas, as its first internal fashion co-ordinator for in-flight service.

Changes, says Miss Amoruso, are to be gradual with the focus on a comfortably ready - to - wear ensemble. Well good for Air Canada; just as its aircraft cannot stand still, nor should the cabin crew garb remain the same. After all, look what CP-Air's mild "non-uniform" did for business. It did not exactly drive passengers away but it did set CP Air thinking again about passenger and cabin crew tastes again. Even Air Canada's pursers will have new look outfits, including new jackets to be used on flights to the Caribbean.

Incidentally, the girls of the armed services are not being outdone these days. The 1,100 women serving in the forces are being issued with new fur hats — of mink no less. They will cost $15.34 each and will replace the unstylish peaked caps left over from pre-integration days. The 6,000 male officers and ratings remain in storage), incidentally, is a boost for Canada's ailing mink industry.

The Gentle Touch

We recall an American woman horticulturalist saying on television that sweet talk and soft music were beneficial to plant growth. Further confirmation of this phenomenon comes from Joy Dowler, a 22-year-old horticultural technician who looks after the exotic plants that grace the 23 office floors of Alberta Government Telephones in Edmonton.

Asked if she believed that talking to plants helped them grow, Miss Dowler smiled and said: "It's interesting. One floor in the offices has a very relaxed and friendly atmosphere and the plants there are just flourishing. Another floor, there is a lot of tension. And the plants there don't seem to be doing so well."

Who would have believed it?

How To Form A Cabinet?

Robert Stanfield as A Potential Prime Minister

By FARMER STEVINGTON

OTTAWA — My dictionary defines the word "integrity" as follows: Rigid adherence to a code of behavior, probity. The state of being unimpaired; soundness; completeness; unity. See synonym for honesty.

And if "probity" throws you, the dictionary defines that as: Complete and confirmed honesty; uprightness; good; honesty; virtuous.

Integrity and honesty are the two words being applied with increasing frequency to Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield. Talk to Conservative MPs or the party brass and ask them how they feel about Mr. Stanfield and the impression he is making on the voters. Invariably, the reply comes back like this: "The man's obvious honesty and integrity are beginning to get through to the people. Canada can feel they can trust him and put their confidence in him."

No talk about charm or charisma. No mention of brilliance or intellect. Little discussion of oratorical skills or improved parliamentary and political tactics and performance. Just talk of Mr. Stanfield as an honest man of great integrity.

I find it a curious assessment. That Mr. Stanfield is an honest man of great integrity is beyond question. It is doubtful if he could have remained premier of his home province for so many years, or have been elected head of the Progressive Conservative national party unless he was an honest man with high principles.

When the Conservatives constantly mention honesty and integrity as his two greatest assets, they seem, by inference, to suggest that Prime Minister Trudeau, and probably the New Democrats' David Lewis, are not honest and lack integrity.

Frankly, I don't believe it. Whatever faults the Christianity's Most Significant Event Ignored at the Time

Man, as a finite creature, can't grasp the infinite, but that doesn't prevent an infinite God from revealing Himself as the human level. His doing so is the basis of faith. To Christians, the high point in that process is the Incarnation, celebrated at Christmas. A five-part series, In Light of the Incarnation, begins with the following article about the "Ways of Revelation."

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

It was a remote, mostly ignored event. Yet its implications permeated the world. Christians consider it the greatest occurrence of all time, the marvel of the ages, the supreme revelation to man.

Yet when it happened, few noticed or cared—only a rustic, midnight crew of susceptible shepherds, some distant students of the stars, accounts say. It was an isolated, mostly disregarded affair, in a tiny mountain town.

But that is the kind of obscure, unfrequented frontier where man encounters his surprises about reality. It is seldom in the spotlight.

It comes at "the boundary of our consciousness," yet at the "hidden centre" of actuality, says Dietrich Bonhoeffer, the German churchman martyred by the Nazis. It blows what one should know or be, even while unable to do it, a flash of further possibility.

The "self-disclosure of God," the great Swiss thinker, Karl Barth, called it the enfleshing of the divine purpose for mankind in Jesus, the "Incarnation."

It is the "foundation of Christianity," says Roman Catholic theologian Karl Rahner, and he observes: "Ideas only become truth in earnest when they stand forth in flesh and blood."

And that is the substance out of which have come the convictions of Judeo-Christianity, the world's oldest and largest religious lineage affirming one universal God of all creation.

The rudiments of the faith were spun out of the unfolding chronicles of mankind and inspired insights into concrete events, their implications, motivations and consequences.

Other major religions, such as Buddhism and Hinduism, draw their concepts from inner contemplation and regard earthly history as a confining burden, seeking release from it.

But Judeo-Christianity considers it the matrix of enlightenment and growth, of consummate purpose, with human decisions affecting its movement toward God's ultimate perfection of it.

The context for it is earthly reality itself, whose basic inexplicability first poses the question. That reality has men in its power, not vice versa. And the objective dynamics of that very fact impells man first to ask in order to be answered.

The prompting, the invitation, is implanted in the sheer mystery of existence. Why? From whom? For what? But learning from it always is a two-way proposition of invitation and response, of submissive alertness to those aspects of reality that tell of God.

"Revealed truth always is relative to the minds that receive it," says British Methodist Kenneth G. Grant. As Goethe once put it, "Had not the eye a sunlit nature, the eye could never see the sun."

As in any field, however, objects, events, words, persons and the logic of history itself take on meaning only through interpretation of them, and the interpretations can be entirely wrong, mere illusions.

What then distinguishes and confirms the divine intimations to man? Basically, they are considered "self-authenticating," a quality that validates them in the testing of human experience.

But the "clues" must first be spotted, sensed, somehow detected, and this necessitates openness to it, a predisposition for it. "If you do not believe it, you will not understand," Augustine put it.

The spark first caught among a nomadic, oppressed people of old, the Jews, drawing a responsive Abraham into a mutual covenant of devotion and promise. But God known, which—is "considered the case, oddly and eternally, with Jesus.

Trenton-area Accidents Minor

TRENTON — Police in the Trenton-Brighton area report about a dozen minor vehicle accidents over the weekend, but none resulted in serious personal injury.

However, in one of Trenton's seven weekend auto mishaps, Mrs. Ralphine Labonte of 623 Dundas St. West, Trenton, did require medical attention for facial lacerations following a Saturday afternoon crash at the corner of Dundas St. West and Fourth Avenue.

There were only five minor accidents in the entire Brighton OPP district.

Mohawk Council Faces Busy Term

TYENDINAGA RESERVE, (Staff) — Earl Hill won his third successive term as chief of the Bay of Quinte Mohawks here Saturday night in an election held as Indian affairs grow more complex.

And his next two-year term will continue a "busy time" for himself and his four-man council in straightening out problems and maturing projects now being considered, the chief declared after his election.

These include:

Centralizing the reserve's schools in one big unit; plans for bringing home elderly Mohawks to a home for the aged on their own reserve; facing the federal government early on a major issue — the question of surrendering reserve lands leased to non-Indians.

Chief Hill, with 194 votes won the election over his opponent Bennett Brant, with 94 votes.

Three of the present four-man council were re-elected: Dr. C. D. Brant heading the polls with 287 votes; Carl Brant, 201 William J. Brant 136. The fifth councillor is Wilfred Hill, who gained 141 votes. Losing councillor was Garnet Maracle, with 125 votes.

Problems of Indian local government "have been greater in the past two years than they've ever been," said Chief Hill, who served two years as councillor before his first chieftainship.

He pondered if the controversial White Paper on Indian affairs issued two years ago by the federal government that any lands owned by the reserve first be surrendered to the government before members helped stimulate difficulties and added to the pressures on land claims.

"It takes time to iron things out. We know what we're doing, but what happens is every time we get a problem straightened up, something else has taken its place," he explained.

A major concern at the moment, said the chief was a statement recently received from the federal government fore any acreage may be leased to non-Indians.

The government, which then leases the land, returns any revenues to the reserve, but surrender of property means the government "has all the say about it," said the chief.

While the Mohawks still want federal authorities to handle the leasing, they don't wish to surrender the land.

Surrender would remove Mohawk influence on decisions which might involve revenues from such land.

Probably between 1,500 - 2,000 acres are held directly by the Quinte Mohawks as a band entity on their reserve, the chief estimated. He said a meeting with federal authorities was planned for January to discuss and iron out the issue.

The school project under consideration would centralize the four schools now serving Mohawk students on the reserve up to grade eight. (The system also includes kindergarten and special education classes.)

As currently envisioned, the scheme considers substituting a new building to house all students under one roof.

"We've talked this over with federal authorities — we've been looking at a site now and we hope this'll be in the very near future now," said Chief Hill.

Council also will "definitely" be working on creating a home for the aged on the reserve, he said.

There are already a number of Mohawks in similar homes around the Belleville area "and they would feel more at rest if they were home here among their own people," added the chief.

New Music Syllabus Offers Flexible Course For Individual Student

Georges Smale, principal of the Western Ontario Conservatory of Music, recently visited Wayne Vance, music instructor at Albert College, and eastern zone representative of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association, about the proposed changes which Western hopes to introduce in its new syllabus next year.

The two music educators agreed that the present examination system is in many cases a hindrance rather than a help to a student's musical progress. In too many instances music students spend all their time learning how to pass examinations rather than learning fundamental musical principles. It is quite possible for a music student to go through the present system to the end to Grade 8 and to come out of it with a rather superficial knowledge of music, especially if he has had the misfortune of studying with unqualified or incompetent teacher.

The new syllabus will offer a more flexible course of study tailored more to the needs of individual students. Creativity will be encouraged, a place will be made for improvisation, and students in every grade will be encouraged to perform for the examination at least one piece of their own choosing or their own composition. Less stress will be laid on the learning, memorization, and presentation of a set number of pieces. Sweeping revisions are also under discussion for the technical and theoretical requirements to make them more relevant to the student's practical studies.

If all the proposed changes are adopted, Western will be the first to offer one of the most pedagogically progressive programs of any musical institution in Canada. Also, a series of workshops on ways to present the new material will be made available to teachers across Ontario.

Last year, after preliminary discussions with Mr. Vance, Dr. Ouchterlony, principal of the other accredited conservatory in Ontario (Royal Conservatory of Toronto), met with area music teachers to discuss examination procedures, and the licensing of private music teachers in Ontario.

Family Cooking

Extra Dressing Adds to Festive Meal

By ALICE DENHOFF

Change seems to be the order of the times in almost every phase of living. But a few things still do remain. One is the Christmas dinner served to a happy gathering of family and close friends, an observance that is still traditional.

There it comes to table, proudly borne, that turkey in all its golden brown beauty, accompanied by dressing and favorite vegetables. As well as filling the bird's cavities, it is a good idea to have a separate pan of dressing for those who just can't seem to get enough out of the bird.

As for the gobbler, roast it until done, in oven continuous heat. A low temperature (325 degrees) assures better flavor, less shrinkage and less loss of juices. For best results, use a shallow pan with a rack at least 2½ inches high. This raises the turkey off the bottom of the pan, keeping it out of the drippings, and allowing the heat to circulate around the bird, roasting it evenly. An expert chef advises that when the skin is light golden brown, a loose tent of aluminum foil should be placed over the legs and breast to prevent excessive browning of these areas. When the turkey is two-thirds done, cut the cord or band of skin holding the legs at tail, to release the legs and permit the heat to reach the heavy-meated sections.

It's a good idea to put only a modest amount of garnish around the turkey to make carving and serving easier. A side plate to hold bones and garnish simplifies the task of the carver. And a warmed platter to set the sliced meat on can be garnished, if desired.

As mentioned, a batch of special stuffing, baked separately, does much to enhance the festive meal. Something different in a fruity dressing is this:

AVOCADO-APPLE DRESSING

½ cup unsalted butter
1 quart diced celery
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 package (6 ounces) stuffing mix
1½ cups (2 small) thinly sliced, tart cooking apples
1 avocado, cut in ½-inch slices
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground ginger

Saute onion and celery slowly in butter until onion is transparent but not brown, about 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. In large mixing bowl, add water gradually to moisten; mix uniformly. Slip in the onion-celery mixture. Blend apple and avocado with spices. Gradually stir the fruit into the dressing. Spread evenly in 2-quart casserole. Bake in 350 degree oven 30 minutes. Serve hot. Serves 10 to 12.

When preparing the fruit, reserve several slices of apple with skin and several pieces of avocado, for garnish.

The dressing can be baked earlier and heated up when the bird is taken out of the oven to rest in platter while its juices set.

For something different in the vegetable category:

SPICED CARROTS AND GRAPES

1 bunch (1 Pound) carrots
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ teaspoon mint flakes
½ teaspoon ground coriander
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains ground pepper
1¼ tablespoons water
1 cup seedless grapes
½ cup sugar

Cut carrots in ¼- to ½-inch diagonal slices. Saute them in butter until slightly browned, about 10 minutes.

Add mint, coriander, pepper and water. Simmer, covered, 5 minutes. Add grapes and sugar; heat uncovered 5 minutes, if desired, add additional salt to taste. Serves 5.

Homes Are for Showing Friends

By DORIS CLARK

They spent the evening with friends. Friends who had once been neighbors and who had now moved into a home like-built themselves.

"Why didn't they show us the place?" Jean asked Jack.

"All we did was sit in that gorgeous living room and gab, gab."

Jack agreed. "I would have liked to see some of those things they had in their original plans. Perhaps they were too self-conscious to show us around, or perhaps they just couldn't afford all those trimmings they boasted about before."

Perhaps Jack was right. But it ought to have occurred to somebody that the builders of a new home would like a little admiration for it. Might have been glad to show their friends around if any interest had been expressed.

Isn't a home an extension of the personality of the builder? Old friends surely express admiration and interest; and builders ought not to wait for their friends to request the grand tour.

Don't introducing your friends to your home helped to make them feel at home?

Dear Doris: I was interested about that elderly lady whose independence was so critical that it began to be selfpity. I had written a homespun poem in 1963 on the very same theme. Thought it would give you a chuckle or two. — Ira.

Dear V.A.: Chuckle? Yes. And a reflection of how true it was. The first two verses read:

Peggy was a perfectionist;
Undoubtedly quite clever;
But did she have a faithful friend?
Goodness no! Never!

For every time Peg found a pal
It wasn't very long
Before she began to find some fault;
There was always something wrong.

And so it goes on, until Peg had no friends at all, and it is one day dawned on her that nobody was perfect — or words to that effect.

Readers: Watch for these six "homespun" but permanent-press verses. Ask for "Squarer Peg" enclosing a self-addressed envelope and 10c.

Dear Doris: I have a four-month-old baby. My friend who baby-sits for me has been caught slapping the baby in the face as the legs very hard. The baby seems all right now, but could this affect her in later years? — Worried

Dear Worried: Anyone who could slap a four-month old baby is not fit to look after a child of any age. No baby of mine would ever come within reach of such a one. Shoes to the head certainly can be harmful!

How I wish you'd enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope so that I could have answered your letter immediately!

Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. Time to learn, write, give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.

Ann Landers

Everything Has A Price

Dear Ann Landers: I am addressing this to one of those married-in-name-only women. Has your husband stopped begging for your favors because you froze him out long ago with your backaches, your headaches, your stock excuses — "The kids will hear. It's too late. It's too early." If you see yourself in this letter you should know that your husband hasn't simply dried up and stopped living. He has a charming, willing, exciting friend. Me.

Of course I would rather be a wife than a mistress, but both my lovers (yes, I have two) are in no position to marry and I am settling for whatever I can get. Neither man knows about the other and there's no reason they should. I see Mr. A. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and Mr. B. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. I am not a kept woman. My alimony from my ex-husband is substantial and I am a part-time model.

These two men contribute to my emotional good health as well as to my wardrobe, my jewelry box and the wine cellar. I contribute to their physical well being and their mental health. So you see, everybody gains. Love, Sissy

Obviously what you want most is to be left alone. So appreciate me.—No Name Lady

Dear Lady: No name? That's what you think. You have a name, but the paper wouldn't print it. How nice that you have Sunday off. A routine like yours could kill a girl. I have no advice for you, but I think you should know that everything has a price and you'll be paying up one of these days.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a telephone receptionist in a large office. During a month, I may speak to at least 50 people on the telephone. Usually they are calling to be put through to an executive.

It so happens that the name of this firm is rather long (it's actually four names) and sometimes before I get past the first name, the caller will cut me cold and ask for Mr. so-and-so. Then there are the super-pompous jerks who don't ask—they demand to be put through. They bark orders. "Connect me with ..." or "let me talk to ..." Not please—just a command. Of course they never say "thank you."

The most exasperating callers are the ones who ring back a second and third time, after having left a name and number, and hint broadly that for personal reasons (which, for the life of me, I have never been able to figure out) I failed to deliver their messages.

I hope you can find space in your column for this letter, Ann. You might make life more pleasant for hundreds of telephone receptionists. Thank you. —The Voice

Dear Voice: Here is your letter and I hope it helps. Try not to forget what life is like for the person on the receiving end—and this goes beyond the telephone receptionist. Thanks for the reminder.

Dear Ann Landers: A girl I work with has asked me to sing at her wedding. I told her I would. I've done some professional singing and enjoy it. This girl is a new friend and has never heard me sing but she knows several people who have. Now I wonder if she expects me to sing as a favor. To put it bluntly, how can I find out if she intends to pay me?—Chicka-dee Fifi Cash Please

Dear Chick: You have already said yes—so that's settled. All you can do now is wait and see if she considers you a professional or a friend. The time to have discussed this was when she asked you to sing. Remember for the next time.

Miss Grit of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can someone get by without ambition?

YES, and many people do very well though they couldn't care less about success. Yet, a person who would ordinarily be ambitious will often quash a desire to strive for something better. His fear of the effort it might cost him and the frustration that might follow if he were ever to put his skill and talents "on the line" will cause him to refrain from trying anything to improve himself lest he be labeled "ambitious."

Should a pregnant wife be pampered?

YES, but her husband should be the only one to pamper her. A pregnant wife should not attempt to use her "condition" to control anyone else. If she demands pampering, a pregnant wife is not being immature nor is she asking for sympathy. Her gravest problem could be that she is fearful of any change in her husband's love for her—and if he has to spoil her to prove that their love is the same, their new baby will "unspoil" her.

Is a sharp memory better than a high IQ?

TAKE THE HIGH IQ, if you're smart. Then you really can't lose, for you will have both. D. S. Halsey Jr., whose book "Man and Memory" (Harper and Row) incidentally recalls some remarkable mental feats by people endowed with extraordinary memory says; "Unfortunately, the possession of a good memory does not necessarily guarantee genius or even normal intelligence in the possessor. But intelligence presupposes a good memory."

Police Have Definite Suspects in Windsor Bank Robbery

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Police have "definite people in mind" in their search today for a gang dressed as janitors which struck a Royal Bank of Canada branch a million-dollar cleaning job Saturday.

Described by the manager as "concerned and polite," the gang took $1,128,000 from the main branch in the 15-minute robbery conducted with commando-like precision," They left $800,000 untouched.

"If it's who we have in mind, it was just a small group," Police Chief Gordon Preston told a news conference Sunday.

The four armed robbers, wearing blue-green coveralls and masks, waited until an armored truck delivered about $300,000 in receipts from Windsor Raceway.

One acted as look-out while the other three, carrying pails filled with handcuffs, herded 12 employees into a washroom and handcuffed them together.

They then turned to the count-ing room and stuffed three large canvas bags full of money.

As they were about to leave, bank manager Kenneth Moore, 34, made an unscheduled appearance.

A man in a cleaning outfit took the manager to the cash cage and handcuffed him to it.

Although assistant manager Gordon Cornish, 25, arrived at work at 10:15 a.m., within about 30 minutes of the robbery, it wasn't reported until an hour later because he didn't realize there was a lockup until he finally heard Mr. Moore's cries for help.

No one knows exactly when the members of the gang entered the bank, but it was, according to Chief Preston, "a very professional job."

Cubans Facing Tight Rations

The Associated Press bureau in Havana has been closed since 1963, but recently an AP reporter was admitted to Cuba in connection with the amateur World Series of baseball. As it turned out he was barred from filing news of the games—but he stayed in Havana for two weeks. This is the first of three uncensored dispatches he brought out.

By JOAQUIN MARTINEZ

HAVANA (AP) — Most Havana residents have to reckon constantly with three facts of life—Fidel Castro's armed forces, the Committees for the Defence of the Revolution, and the Communist Youth.

And the fourth horseman is rationing and regimentation. There are complaints, but nothing in the atmosphere indicates a change toward liberalization in the immediate future.

No one seems to be starving, yet the scarcity of food dealt out to the populace contrasts sharply with what is available to foreign visitors and the "new class" of government bureaucrats.

The average Cuban is allowed a maximum of 12 ounces of meat a week and similarly low quantities of eggs, coffee, milk and other foods.

As a paying guest of a hotel reserved for foreigners, I could breakfast on ham and eggs, coffee, milk and rolls with generous portions of butter. For dinner there were freshly-caught fish and lobster and beef.

The hotel—the former Havana Hilton—is closed to the man in the street. Guests are admitted into the lobby only after showing a special pass.

When it came time to pay my bill the cashier would not take Cuban pesos. He said I had to settle in U.S. dollars—the surest currency the propaganda machinery of the regime blames for its sorrows and many of the world's ills.

Cuba's rulers have good reason to bar John Q. Public from the hotel premises. Guests there can freely buy any amount of cigars, cigarettes and liquors of a quality far above that which is available to ordinary citizens. The merchandise in the hotel shop is of export quality, mainly sold abroad to earn hard currency or another gargantuan debts run up with the Communist bloc.

The average Cuban is rationed to 40 cigarettes a month. These are of such poor quality that they keep going out several times before smoked to the end. And yet these feeble cigarettes fetch the equivalent of $20 a pack on the black market.

The Revolutionary Armed Forces, headed by Castro's younger brother Raul, appear to exercise absolute control. What little escapes them is scrutinized by a host of repressive organizations. The state security system, once known as G-2 plus the watchdog Committees for the Defence of the Revolution and the machine that indoctrinates youngsters with a steady political diet from the age of four onward.

As youngsters grow up they are watched over by the Communist Youth, who keep a close eye on high schools and universities.

By the time a Cuban marries and settles down he—like his parents—will be under constant surveillance by a Committee for the Defence of the Revolution. These are neighborhood groups made up of Castroite stalwarts who keep watch over a block 24 hours day. They report to security offices the comings and goings of neighbors and strangers, the arrival of suspicious objects. They also control the distribution of food-rationing books, check school enrolment and enforce health measures.

The food ration book is vital to obtain essentials doled out by the regime. Its backers hail the system as one that has done away with inequalities.

"Now we all eat the same," a cab driver says with pride.

"Nowadays no one goes to bed hungry," a housewife observes. But there is grumbling, especially among those who belonged to the now-wilted middle class.

Berlin Wall Pact Signed

BERLIN (AP) — East and West Berlin signed a wall pass agreement today that will give West Berliners 30 visiting days a year in East Germany.

The pact was signed in East Berlin. It includes a separate section on an exchange of about 100 acres of territory that provides direct access to West Berlin exclaves inside eastern territory.

The agreement takes effect after the four-power pact on Berlin is signed in final form by the United States, Britain, France and Soviet Union. That probably will be at least six months from now.

In the meantime, the people of the divided city face a sixth consecutive Christmas without passes for the West Berliners to come to the east.

The signing took place in the House of Ministeries hard on the Communist wall that was erected Aug. 13, 1961.

C. Bruce, Journalist, Poet, Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Bruce, poet, author and for many years one of Canada's most distinguished newspaper men, died in his sleep at his home Sunday. He was 65.

Funeral services will be private.

In failing health for a number of years, Mr. Bruce retired from the active newspaper field in 1963. He was general superintendent at that time of the Canadian Press, the national news co-operative with which he had been associated for 35 years.

On retirement, he devoted several years to research for News and the Southams, a history of the newspaper and publishing company and its family members, published in 1968.

He has since contributed articles, most of them relating to his native Nova Scotia, to a number of Canadian publications.

Hostesses Are Upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — An arbitration board ruled Friday two Pacific Western Airlines stewardesses who refused to wear "unduly provocative" uniforms were suspended by the company without proper cause and are entitled to pay for lost time.

The decision involved Sharon Gray and Ursula Warnat, suspended for six weeks when they refused to wear the airline's "stampede" uniform, which includes a mini-skirt and frilly red bloomers.

They refused to wear the uniform after Mrs. Gray was grabbed by a logger on a flight June 1 from Port Hardy, B.C., to Vancouver.

Good Shepherd Animals Die In Barn Fire

DUNCAN, B.C. (CP) — More than 30 animals died Sunday as fire destroyed a barn at the Good Shepherd animal shelter at Mill Bay, near this Vancouver Island community.

The shelter's entire herd of 29 goats died, apparently of asphyxiation, along with two ponies and four cats.

Mother Mary Cecilia, the controversial 83-year-old nun in charge of the shelter, said three tons of grain also were lost in the blaze.

The shelter was moved to Mill Bay in 1965 after problems with zoning laws at the original site near Victoria and a dispute between Mother Cecilia and her superiors in the Roman Catholic Church.

School For 12 Months Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is asking the provinces to keep students off the summer labor market by making them attend classes year-round, Prime Minister Trudeau says.

Mr. Trudeau's remarks were part of an interview with Canadian Contemporary News broadcast Sunday on radio stations.

He said that until the year-round school schedule is adopted the federal government will continue youth summer employment programs.

"If we didn't have the type of school year as we have now which is based on an agricultural society where people attended universities and schools during the winter months and then in the summer they worked on the farm in order to pay for their winter and so on, it's certain that we wouldn't have this bulge of unemployed young people looking for work in the summer.

"And to meet that we're trying to convince the provinces, who have as you know jurisdiction over education, we're trying to convince them that they should be more and more considering the full year, the full academic year without a summer break."

Mr. Trudeau was asked about government statements that current high unemployment is partially due to a greater percentage of housewives and students entering the labor force.

"Is this a good time for the government to be making it easier for housewives to work through such things as funding day-care centres and new maternity leave benefits?" asked interviewer Paul Akehurst.

"Well, I don't think the conclusions necessarily follow," replied the prime minister. "For instance, if a housewife leaves the home to work as a stenographer, the fact that she goes back to the house doesn't mean that the pipefitter who is out of a job is going to get a job because she has withdrawn from the labor force.

"So I couldn't answer your question simply. It's certain that if less of these women said they are working, or have wanted to work and are looking for a job, then the figures would be lower and in that sense you are perfectly right. . . . Unemployment figures are higher by comparison than they would be if people were following previous patterns.

"It wouldn't mean that there are not still some people unemployed for whom we should be trying to create jobs."

Passenger Sets Fire To Plane

TOKYO (AP) — A passenger shouting "I want to kill myself" set a fire in a Japanese airliner Sunday and attacked the pilot, but the plane landed safely and the passenger later died of a self-inflicted stab wound in his chest.

Captain Yoeho Yamada, his hand bandaged because of a stab wound, told a news conference:

"I fought with the man, holding the control handle with my left and shouted to him: 'Stop it! Stop this foolish thing. If I'm dead all the people on board will be killed.'"

Yamada said the man, later identified as Masaaki Arai 32-year-old office employee of Matsudo, near Tokyo "seemed to be insane."

Officials of All Nippon Airways said the man jumped to his feet shortly before the plane started its landing approach for Tokyo on a flight from Fukui, carrying 13 passengers and a crew of three. They said he poured inflammable liquid on the floor of the passenger compartment, set it afire and shouted: "I want to kill myself."

While the copilot, a stewardess and several passengers put out the flames, the man dashed to the pilot's seat and tried to stab him.

Stunt Flyer Flees Reds

NUERNBERG (AP) — Ladislav Bezak, famous Czechoslovak stunt flyer, fled with his wife and four children from Prague to West Germany in a light plane Sunday, dodging bullets from a pursuing MiG jet, Bavarian border police reported.

They said Bezak, 39, landed safely at Nuernberg airport and requested political asylum in West Germany about two hours after taking off from a small airstrip near Prague.

Bury Gan 13-1

Imperials Save Best 'til Last

The Blaks Kerr Imperials saved the best until the last Sunday, scoring seven times in the final period to bury Gananoque 13-1 in an OMHA bout played in Belleville.

The Western Tire Juvenilers met with varying degrees of success in their weekend action, falling 4-1 to Napanee before rebounding Sunday with a 5-3 win over Stirling.

Rob Foster notched the lone goal for Belleville in Saturday's contest and added two goals and two assists in Sunday's win. Brian Rumbles also scored twice in the win over Stirling as Western Tire jumped into an early 3-0 lead before coasting to the win.

The Belleville Kinsmen bantams also rose to the occasion after falling in their first weekend game. The Kinsmen were edged 5-4 by Kingston Rotary Saturday but took a 4-1 Sunday verdict from Picton.

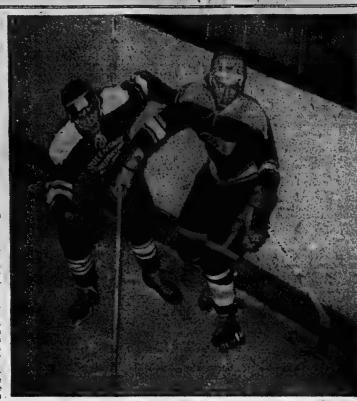
Peter McBride, Rick Barbeau, Mark Foster and Mike Crawford each counted once in the Kingston loss. Barbeau was the big gun in Sunday's win, firing a hat trick while Crawford accounted for the Kinsmen score.

Thurlow's Belleville Auto Dealers Assistance Entry got a shutout goaltending performance from Farley Vader to blank the Y's men bantam house league entry 3-0. Scoring for the winners were Sandy Waterson, Pete McInroy and Dan Meeks.

Rollins peewees also got off on the wrong foot with a 4-3 loss to Oshawa Friday before righting themselves with a Saturday win in Gananoque.

Bob Crawford and Gary Fredericks tallied Friday for the losers. Three goals by Jeff Gow helped Rollins to a 5-3 win over Gananoque Saturday with Randy Hutchinson and Mike Bennett picking up the other goals.

The Belleville peewee majors absorbed their second loss of the weekend Sunday, coming out on the short end of a 5-3 count with Kingston. Bobby Crawford had two goals in that game with Andy Lupeatte adding another.



The Eau Car Wash Peewees got off to what was undoubtedly the worst start of the weekend for any minor team. The peewee minors were snow bound on Highway 401 forcing cancellation of their scheduled game in Brockville.

In a Sunday bout at the Belleville Memorial Arena they lost 7-1 to Cobourg. Andy Plane with two goals and David Harris with one were the Eaks scorers.

The Wilson Concrete tykes turned in a solid weekend performance with a 3-1 win over Napanee Saturday followed by a 12-1 drubbing of Picton.

Taylor, Thompson and Bisbee scored for Wilsons Saturday. Leger, Taylor and Powell each counted for a Sunday hat trick with Bisbee getting two goals and Hounshow the other.

Wins Follow Sequence

It was easy as one, two three for the Dukes and Hornets to record Northern Electric Hockey wins Sunday.

The Dukes dumped the No-Stars 3-2 while the Good Guys rapped the Hornets 3-1.

Bill Carson, Ron Wessels and Rick Rosebush each counted once for the Dukes to offset two goals by Bob Brownlee of the No - Stars. Mark Aquafredde added two assists to the winners scoring output.

Tom Pierce, Dwight Rathwell and Glen Hamilton looked after the scoring in the Good Guys' 3-1 win. Ed Christopher tallied the lone reply by the losers.

Quintes Lose Step

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

The Belleville Quinte Co-ops would take one step forward only to be forced two steps back against the Barrie Flyers in Saturday's 7-4 loss.

The Quintes who were placed in a 1-0 hole during the first period of the OHA Senior A bout, narrowed the gap to 4-3 at one point in the game with a second - period flurry. They were quickly repulsed by the powerful Flyers, however as the visiting team scored three times in just over four minutes to ensure their 7-4 victory.

Belleville coach Gene Porter singled out loose play in their own end as the biggest single factor in his team's loss. "We were giving the puck away in our own end too much," he stated, "too many blind passes."

Former Canadian National team performer Corky Adams opened the scoring after only 44 seconds of play and winger Bob Cunningham upped the count to 2-0 when he connected with just over a minute left to play in the first frame.

Left winger Lorne O'Donnell finally got the home team rolling when he cashed in Dave Jones' rebound for a power play tally. Two further Barrie tallies appeared to place the Flyers firmly in control before Belleville began their second period surge.

Team captain Ralph Plane collected Jones' pass to beat Lloyd Vaughn in the Barrie nets near the half-way point of the period. Centre George Godinez, who Porter admitted "always seems to play a good game" narrowed the Barrie lead to one goal when he connected with linemates O'Donnell and Perry Chittick.

The Flyers snuffed out any hopes of a Belleville comeback, however with three unanswered goals. They held a distinct advantage in play over the rest of the frame, combing Steve Rexe with 16 shots for the period, while Vaughan was tested only eight times in the Barrie nets.

Right winger Wayne McConnell scored the only goal of the final frame by beating Vaughan with a low, 20-foot slapshot at 7.28.

The team could receive some defensive help from former Belleville Junior B defenseman Mike Healey, who saw some action in the Eastern League this season. The towering rearguard, who was a member of the Niagara Falls Flyers and Hamilton Red Wings of the OHA Junior A circuit, is expected to attend tonight's senior workout.

Hull Converts Non-believers

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bobby Hull and Chicago Black Hawks are making believers—again—of critics who recently ruled them out as a power in the National Hockey League's West Division.

Billed in pre-season polls to finish out of sight in the final standings, the Hawks have had a fast start. At one stage they were as much as five points ledders.

But Hull and the Hawks all but destroyed any thoughts they were finished as overwhelming leaders of the West during the weekend, crushing their nearest rivals, Minnesota North Stars 4-1 at Bloomington Minn. Saturday and blasting St. Louis Blues 3-0 Sunday.

The two wins opened a seven-point lead over the Stars and Hull, who scored goals in both games while his team played with a man in the penalty box, added to his stature as the hockey's most complete player.

The Hawks played both games with two high-scoring forwards—Stan Mikita and Jim Pappin—sidelined with injuries, but the opposition's inability to contain Hull, who also played on power play in addition to his regular shift, added to their frustrations.

Elsewhere Sunday, Boston Bruins played a frustrating 2-2 score with Pittsburgh Penguins and Montreal Canadiens settled for a 3-3 tie against California Seals to remain deadlocked for second in the East. three points behind leading New York Rangers who needed a late goal from Jean Ratelle to pull out a 1-1 game with Minnesota.

In other games, veteran Jacques Plante registered his first shutout of the season in Toronto Maple Leafs' 4-0 win over Philadelphia Flyers and Buffalo Sabres, who were laced by in Toronto Saturday, rebounded for a 5-1 victory at home against Vancouver Canucks.

BOBBY HULL

Also Saturday night, lowly Los Angeles Kings dumped Detroit Red Wings 4-2, Johnny McKenzie's two goals helped Boston 4-3 over Pittsburgh and New York ripped St. Louis 5-2.

Tuesday night Los Angeles visits Minnesota.

The shutout at Chicago was Gary Smith's third of the season, abetted by the Hawks' toughest power play—Bobby Hull engineering the winning score by Pit Martin at 14:56 of the first period.

Smith didn't have an easy time, facing 26 St. Louis shots, and showed a lot of mobility in smothering Jim Shires' danger-ous rush while enjoying an equal amount of luck when Mike Murphy fired wide of an open net with the Chicago goalie far out of position.

The Bruins opened fast against Pittsburgh, whom they had beaten 11 times in their 13 previous meetings—only a 1-0 setback marring their record.

Goals by Esposito, his 25th and Mike Walton sent the Beantowners away to fast start, but Red Kelly's Penguins changed the pattern of play and showed by their defences in front of goalie Roy Edwards to shut out Boston the rest of the way.

The game marked the return of veteran defenceman Tim Horton to the Penguins lineup.

"It's about time we got some breaks," said Kelly of a goal by Pittsburgh's Jean Pronovost that tied the score. The goal in question rebounded off the Penguin winger's leg and trickled past Boston goalie Gerry Cheevers.

Wayne Carleton blistered a 40-footer by Montreal goalie Ken Dryden early in the third period to pull California even for the second time in the game.

Ratelle's goal, his 20th of the season and 200th career score, came at the expense of Minnesota's Gump Worsley that maintained New York's unbeaten string at home to 15 games.

Guy Trottier's two goals spearheaded the Toronto attack at Philadelphia where the Flyers showed powerless to stop the dogged Leafs in the first period.

The injury-plagued Leafs had be out.

The two more victims from the Philadelphia encounter. Defenceman Jim Dorey needed 12 stitches to close a head wound, and Paul Henderson was rapped on the knee in the second period and didn't play the rest of the game.

"Henderson got a slash on the knee," said Toronto coach John McLellan. "It's quite painful . . . I don't know how long he'll

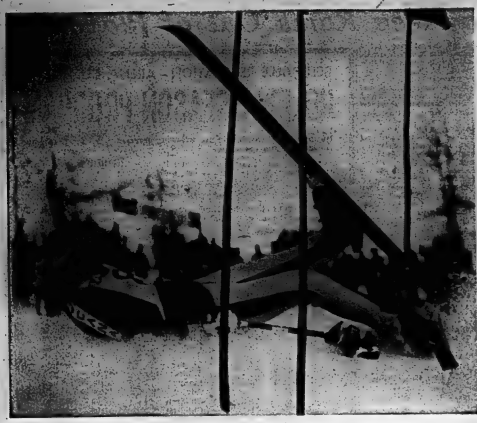
When it comes to holiday driving, Santa Claus has a little magic going for him.



The rest of us don't.

Down here, on terra firma, there's nothing ho-ho-ho about driving. Especially at festive times like the holiday season.

That's why we suggest: don't be too busy to look after things. Keep your car in top-notch shape, and keep an eye on yourself, too. Moderation is the key to enjoying life's pleasures, whether your pleasure is sports, gala dining, or toasting the holidays with your friends.

We're sure Mr. Claus would agree.

Thieves Have Field Day at Montreal Area Ski Slopes

MONTREAL (CP) — Skiers are not the only ones who know that their sport is a fast-growing one in the Montreal region.

Thieves, too, have become greatly interested in the popular winter past-time.

More than 1,000 pairs of skis valued at more than $100,000 were stolen from skiing centres in the Montreal area last winter.

"And these figures represent only half of the total number of pairs that were actually stolen," says Insp. Paul-Emile Lapierre, commanding officer of the Montreal division of the provincial police.

He said that only half of the skiers report thefts of skis to police because many skiers are not covered by insurance and have resigned themselves to the fact that their skis will not be recovered.

Police also say many skiers let their skis be stolen so they can collect insurance money and buy a new pair.

Dunks 32 Points

Wilt Leads Laker Rampage

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wilt Chamberlain, Los Angeles' massive 7-foot-1, 290-pound centre poured in 32 points Sunday night as the rampaging Lakers extended their record National Basketball Association winning streak to 25 games, overpowering Philadelphia 76ers 134-122.

Chamberlain, the league's leading rebounder, also found time to grab 34 rebounds, an NBA single-game high this season, and block 12 shots.

Meanwhile, Milwaukee Bucks won their sixth in a row, thrashing Baltimore Bullets 111-113, Atlanta Hawks defeated Cincinnati Royals 101-99, Chicago Bulls bullied Cleveland Cavaliers 119-101, and Seattle SuperSonics outlasted Phoenix Suns 126-127 in overtime.

The 154 points squalled Los Angeles' all-time single-game point record as the Lakers boosted their season's record to an amazing 31-5.

Gail Goodrich added 31 points for the Lakers and Jerry West had 27.

Kareem Jabbar, the league's top scorer, pushed in 34 points as Milwaukee raised its record to 30-4 by beating Baltimore.

Lions Can Always Find Way to Keep Rams Out of Playoffs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A year ago, Detroit Lions kept Los Angeles Rams out of the National Football League playoffs by winning their final regular season game. This time they did it by losing.

San Francisco 49ers edged the Lions 31-27 Sunday on John Brodie's 10-yard touchdown scramble with 10 minutes to play. That gave the 49ers the National Conference's Western Division crown over the Rams, whose 23-14 triumph over Pittsburgh Steelers allanother meaningless second-place finish.

Last season, the Rams beat the Giants in New York on the final day to stay alive, only to have the 49ers defeat Oakland Raiders and win the West while the Lions whipped Green Bay Packers for the best second-place record in the NFC and the conference's wild card playoff spot.

Elsewhere, Miami Dolphins trounced Green Bay 27-6 and won the AFC Eastern Division title by one-half game over Baltimore when the Colts bowed to New England Patriots 21-17. Dallas Cowboys won the NFC Eastern crown Saturday by routing St. Louis Cardinals 31-12.

The Super Bowl playoffs open next Saturday with Dallas meeting Minnesota Vikings and Miami taking on Kansas City. Chiefs Sunday finds Baltimore meeting Cleveland Browns and Washington Redskins at San Francisco.

Other results Sunday were Cleveland 28, Washington 13; Minnesota 20, Houston Bears 10; Atlanta Falcons 24, New Orleans Saints 20; Oakland 31, Denver Broncos 13; New York Jets 35, Cincinnati Bengals 21; Philadelphia Eagles 41, New York Giants 28 and Houston Oilers 49, Brodie, who earlier threw scoring passes to Dick Witcher, Ken Willard and Gene Washington, pulled the 49ers from behind for the third time with his decisive gallop. He faded to pass, escaped two rushers and scrambled up the middle.

The 49ers took possession of the ball for their winning drive when Frank Nunley and Earl Edwards combined to stop Detroit's Greg Landry on fourth down and then he tried to avoid for less than a yard at the Lions' 46.

The Rams, their backs squarely against the wall, had had all against Pittsburgh on a pair of David Ray field goals and Roman Gabriel's 28-yard pass to Jack Snow.

"It was hard for us to play this game," Gabriel said. "It really don't think our team concentrated well at all. We all just thought San Francisco was not going to lose."

Miami, locked in a 6-6 struggle with Green Bay, exploded for three touchdowns within five minutes of the second half and then sat back to await New England's upset of Baltimore. The quick scores came on seven-yard runs by Jim Kiick and Larry Csonka and Curtis Johnson's 67-yard sprint with a blocked field goal attempt.

Green Bay's John Brockington ran for 73 yards to become the ground-gaininest rookie in NFL history with 1,105 yards.

New England's Jim Plunkett fired his second touchdown pass to Randy Vataha, his one an 88-yard bomb, to offset a late ran 60 yards with an interception for the Patriots' other touchdown.

Mike Howell's 58-yard interception return set up Bill Nelsen's tie-breaking four-yard pass to Chip Glass that boosted the Browns over the Redskins. Jim Steered's five field goals and Bobby Bell's 25-yard interception gave Kansas City its triumph over hapless Buffalo, which wound up with a 1-13 record.

Bob Lee passed to Bob Grim for two touchdowns in a wind Minnesota over Chicago and Bobby Berry's 23-yard pass to Ken Burrow with 24 seconds enabled Atlanta to turn back New Orleans for the Falcons' first winning season (7-6) ever.

Daryle Lamonica's 47-yard pass to Raymond Chester started Oakland to its victory over Denver.

Joe Namath passed for two touchdowns—and then announced he'd be back next year—and Emerson Boozer ran for a pair as the Jets downed Cincinnati. Pete Liske fired for three touchdowns in Philadelphia's rout of the Giants.

Ken Houston intercepted two consecutive John Hadl passes and returned them 34 and 29 for third-quarter touchdowns as the Oilers rallied to beat San Diego That gave the veteran safety nine NFL records of nine interception touchdowns in a career and two in a game.

Duane Thomas exploded for four touchdowns Saturday in Dallas' triumph over St. Louis. He ran 53 yards and three yards twice and belted 34 yards with a screen pass.

"I hated to point out his girl in the stands with another guy. But how else could I get him to kick a 47-yard field goal?"

Vitamin Saves Seconds

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal swim team is testing a vitamin derivative which their coach says is producing "just fantastic" results.

In the seven weeks they have been using the substance, one 14-year-old boy has chopped 10 seconds off his time in the 100-metre butterfly to 1:09.8. The provincial record in the event is 1:07.2 and the national is 1:02.

"We couldn't lower the times of some of these swimmers no matter what we did," coach Gerald Janelle says. "But when we started them on the vitamin substance, the results were just fantastic."

Alpha-tocopheryl, a compound found in vitamin E, is the same substance a Toronto doctor claims could have prevented a blood clot which caused the heart attack death of Jim Chuck Hughes, Detroit Lions football player.

Janelle said he checked to make sure it was safe before giving it.

"You can't just start something like that without being sure."

Toronto Artist, 73, Becomes Detective

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto artist Alfred J. Casson, widely known for his fine oils and watercolors, recently began a new career at an age when most men are retired.

Mr. Casson, a spry 73, is working for the provincial police as an investigator and adviser.

He says his job is to uncover unscrupulous artists, auctioneers, gallery owners and antique dealers who try to palm off fraudulent works of art on the unsuspecting public.

Described by his superiors as "a super-expert" with "an uncanny eye," Mr. Casson refuses to accept a salary from the police.

He says the job is his way of repaying the legendary Group of Seven, which "adopted" him at the age of 18 and taught him much of what he knows about art.

Many of the fakes involve work passed off as that of the Group of Seven. Members of the group spent the first 30 years of this century interpreting the Canadian landscape in a bold, innovative way.

Mr. Casson's memory has proved invaluable to police on numerous occasions.

Once, for example, police sought his opinion on about a dozen small sketches alleged to be the work of J. E. H. MacDonald, a Group of Seven member. They were dated in the 1920s and were of the Rockies.

Mr. Casson remembered, however, that Mr. MacDonald's last trip to the Rockies had been six years before the date noted on the sketches. He knew they were frauds.

Senate Sends Tax Reform Bill to Committee for New Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate, apparently determined to shake off image as a rubber stamp and to remain the chamber of sober second thought, has sent the government tax bill to its banking committee for detailed study.

The committee was to start scrutiny of the bill today, following approval in principle by the Senate in an unusual Saturday sitting.

The committee already had made a preliminary study during the fall, while the legislation was still in the Commons.

The question now is whether it will hurry its deliberations—perhaps adding the amendments it has already recommended in three reports — in time for Senate passage by the scheduled Jan. 1 implementation date, or take a detailed look at the 332 clauses in the bill.

Senator Paul Martin, government leader, said Saturday the Senate should decide for itself how to handle the bill. He detailed government pressures to meet the Jan. 1 date.

But he said that it is a good bill, and early passage would remove uncertainty and confusion that could arise in the new year if it is not passed.

Most senators taking part in the debate urged thorough committee study of the bill.

Senator Donald Cameron (Ind. L—Alberta) expressed hope that the committee would take whatever time is necessary to study the legislation.

While he approved of the general thrust of the bill, he sensed a rising public opposition to it, and to government attempts to speed passage.

"The storm warnings are up."

Senator Allister Grosart (PC —Ontario) said it was precisely the kind of bill on which the Senate should take a stand in defence of its right to examine legislation.

It had been passed by an un- Commons—where a de- free basis-limiting rule was used twice to win passage by the Liberal majority.

Many of its clauses had not been carefully studied in the Commons, there was provincial opposition to early implementation, and there was widespread public opposition.

He suggested that Finance Minister E. J. Benson agree to make recommended changes to the bill, or to delay implementation of several contested clauses.

Several senators criticized press coverage of the Senate's approach to the bill.

Senator Martin said the press — not the government — was trying to pressure the Senate.

Senator Grattan O'Leary (PC —Ontario), editor emeritus of the Ottawa Journal, said "young illiterate political reporters" had predicted the Senate opposition to the bill would "end in a whimper."

Senators also attacked the extent of the bill, which would reduce personal income taxes, introduce a tax on half of a taxpayer's capital gains, and rearrange corporate taxes.

Senator Rhéal Bélisle (PC—Ontario) sensed a stress on equity in the bill which he said conflicted with the need for economic growth.

The Robin Hood theory "if taxation is quite manifest in this legislation, and we have no sympathy with it."

He said the government was committing a cruel fraud on the public by predicting that one million Canadians would be removed from the tax rolls, and that another 4.7 million would enjoy tax reductions.

Increased personal exemptions would be offset by wider definitions of taxable income, he said.

Senator Ernest Manning, former Social Credit premier of Alberta, expressed disappointment that the bill did not include better provisions for provincial and municipal governments.

Queen's Law Professor Is Convicted of Murder in Edmonton

EDMONTON (CP) — Keith Eagle Latta, 43-year-old Queen's University law professor, has 30 days to file an appeal against his conviction in Alberta Supreme Court in the non-capital murder of an Edmonton travel agent.

Chief Justice J. V. H. Milvain sentenced Latta Saturday to the mandatory life imprisonment after a jury of seven men and five women returned a verdict of guilty. They deliberated three hours and 40 minutes.

Latta of Kingston was charged in the shooting of Bob Neville, 38, travel agent and a separate school board trustee.

Mr. Neville's wife Karen was helped from the courtroom in tears after the verdict was read. She left the city Sunday to join her children in Hawaii for Christmas.

When the verdict was announced, Latta, former partner in Mr. Neville's travel agency, put his hand over his face.

He will be held in Fort Saskatchewan jail, 15 miles northeast of here, pending a decision on an appeal.

Chief Justice Milvain said he was "deeply grateful" to both defence and prosecution lawyers for the "eminently fair manner" in which evidence was presented during the five-day trial.

He commended the Edmonton police force "for the good and careful" preparation on the case.

In his charge to the jury, Chief Justice Milvain said the evidence showed Mr. Neville "did not lead the most circumspect life . . . but this is not a determining factor as he is not on trial."

He told the jury that it was not necessary to have a motive to prove that the crime was committed by the accused.

Neville, shot twice in the back and once in the chest, was found in his downtown office Sunday, June 13.

In his summation, defence lawyer Cameron Steer said enmity and hate created by Mr. Neville's relationship with other women may have prompted a blackmail attempt and his murder.

Mr. Steele told the jury to remember that no one saw who killed Mr. Neville.

An Edmonton police officer had testified earlier that a man identifying himself as Latta told him, in a long-distance telephone conversation shortly after the murder, of an attempt by someone to blackmail Mr. Neville.

Court was told that the attempt, involving $10,000, apparently was connected with Mr. Neville's relationships with women, including one who became pregnant.

Mr. Steer said that someone connected with one of the women may have been involved in the blackmail attempt.

The alleged pregnancy "could raise the enmity and hate" which would furnish a motive for the murder.

Earlier evidence was that Latta was a partner in Mr. Neville's travel agency. He owned a $37,500 insurance policy on Mr. Neville's life that included a double indemnity clause, while Mr. Neville had a $17,500 policy on Latta's life.

Crown prosecutor W. J. Stanton told the jury he felt the blackmail story was part of "falsehoods of the whole background the accused has laid in this case."

Bank Manager at London Defrauded of $3,000

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The man who escaped with $3,000 Friday after convincing a bank manager he needed ransom for kidnappers, ended his handwritten note with "Merry Xmas," police said Saturday.

The man handed the note to Jack Perry, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch, and a few minutes later left the bank with the money.

Police are hoping the style of the note, including some spelling and punctuation errors, will provide clues in the search for the man. The note reads:

"Read this carefully do not panic. We have this man's wife and kids in our custody. We are watching you right now. We have your telephones bugged from outside so don't try being cute. He has been instructed to write nothing or say nothing. If he does he'll never see his wife and kids again.

"He is a lawyer and wanted it take us to his own bank but yours is handier. We are escaped convicts and have nothing to lose. If you do not cooperate we might just pick up some members of your (the word 'your' was underlined in the note) family.

"Put three thousand dollars in a canvas bag or deposit bags. In 20's, 10's 5's only.

"Do not go near a phone or leave the bank for 5 minutes after our hostage leaves with the money. If on your account we do not get what we want we will get your families. We want this note back you have exactly 2 minutes left. "Merry Xmas."

The identity used by the man was found to be false. Police also found there had been no kidnapping.

Mr. Perry said he was convinced the note was the truth. He waited five minutes before sounding the alarm.

Minor Quake Felt at Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — A minor earthquake measuring 4½ on the Richter scale was felt throughout the Ottawa and Montreal areas Saturday morning.

Seismologist experts in the department of energy, mines and resources said the quake probably was felt throughout a hundred-mile radius of Mt. Tremblant, in the Laurentians about 10:30 a.m. EST.

Dr. Kenneth Whitham, chief of seismology in the department, described the quake as a bump lasting from one to three seconds. Any damage would be minor and restricted to a small areas in the Laurentians.

Technical information could not be compiled until outlying areas mailed their reports to the department.

The tremor lasted 15-20 seconds in the Ottawa area and about six seconds in Montreal, where it was felt as a slight bump.

No injuries were reported although there were unconfirmed reports of persons thrown out of bed and windows broken in the Mont Tremblant area.

Five Indian Children Die in Fire

MASSET, B.C. (CP) — Five children died Sunday when fire swept their home on an Indian reserve near Masset, a village near the Northern tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands, off the northern British Columbia coast.

Police said the three boys and two girls were the children of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Bell. Two of the boys were aged seven, one was a year old and the girls were five and nine.

Police said the fire, which broke out about 5 a.m. and destroyed the house, was believed to have started from overheated stovepipes.

Dacca Sees Dark Deeds

DACCA, East Pakistan (AP) — The jubilation of victory has given way to savagery as Dacca's Bengalis avenge their murdered relatives and comrades in blood.

The city's Bihari community, among whom the Pakistani military regime found most of its collaborators, is the target.

The Indian troops who occupied Dacca Thursday are trying to check the killings. But they cannot stop the stab in the dark and the back street reprisal.

Some 3,000 Bangla Desh guerrillas, armed with modern automatic weapons, race through the streets in crowded trucks and jeeps, dispersing their brand of justice to suspected traitors to their new nation.

They have plenty to avenge. Two days before the Pakistani surrender, 120 local intellectuals were rounded up and butchered. Many were tortured to death.

Their decomposing bodies, kicked over by crowds and feasted on by dogs, still lie scattered among water-logged clay pits on the outskirts of the city.

Hundreds go daily to the morgue, taking their children with them.

They had a fresh body to gape at Sunday. A young man had been shot in the chest, and a big crowd watched his death throes. His left arm twitched, his head lolled, and his ankles slashed into knots.

People in the crowd claimed he was a Bengali killed by Biharis, but they seemed unlikely.

The Indian army's headquarters is inundated with inquiries about missing relatives.

Mutilated bodies are a common sight in the streets. They were there is a hint for school.

A Bihari student who revealed the whereabouts of a mass grave was seized and bound. Only the presence of an Indian patrol saved him from the mob.

Four bound men were bludgeoned and bayoneted to death Saturday at the end of a public meeting called to celebrate the victory over the Pakistanis.

Abdul Kader Sadiq, a self-styled guerrilla general, told the crowd about the blood that ran into his own hands would be punished. He said his prisoners would be given a proper trial, as soon as he ended his speech. He gave the order for their execution.

With each bayonet thrust, the crowd roared. "Joi Bangla!," the Bangla Desh battle cry.

As the blood flowed, Gen. Sagat Singh, commander of the Indian troops in Dacca, was telling reporters at his headquarters: "I see a rosy picture."

Indian patrols are disarming the Bangla Desh movement. Mukti Bahini are guerrillas but it is a slow process.

"We have no more need for arms," an Indian lieutenant-colonel told one guerrilla squad. "You can't trust them," but eventually the Mukti meekly handed over their guns.

They had been allowed to keep their weapons until all had been disarmed at the airport barracks and their safety secured.

Gen. J. S. Aurora, India's eastern commander, told a press conference the prisoners soon would be shipped to seven camps in India.

Joining the prisoners at the barracks was former Gov. A. M. Malik, who had taken refuge with the Red Cross during the war.

Along with 240 West Pakistanis, he was transferred from the Intercontinental Hotel to the military cantonment before dawn.

Busy Shipping Season

Most officials of Canada's seven ports say that 1971 was a good year for shipping business and they expect it to be even busier this winter, in Halifax, officials expect an increase in container traffic while general cargo levels may remain the same as 1970.

Sudat Calls Parliament And Party to Conference

CAIRO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat, after presiding over a weekend meeting of the national security council on the military and political situation, has called an unprecedented joint secret session of parliament and the country's policy-making body.

The authoritative Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said today that the People's Council — parliament — and the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political organization, would meet Thursday to hear an address by Sadat.

Vice President Mhamoud Fawzi, Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad, War Minister Gen. Mohamed Ahmed Sadek and Interior Minister Sharawi Gomaa also will speak.

Al Ahram did not say why the meeting had been called.

The security council meeting Sunday — it was held in the utmost secrecy — heard a report on latest political developments in the Middle East crisis from Riad and also was briefed by Gen. Sadek on the military situation between the Egyptian and Syrian fronts facing Israel.

Syria is Egypt's partner in the Federation of Arab Republics along with Libya and the general is the federal commander. He made two visits to both Libya and Syria last week.

Dec. 21, Arab foreign ministers will meet here and they are expected to call for an Arab summit to decide what action the Arabs should take against Israel should it continue to refuse to implement the Security Council resolution of November, 1967, calling for withdrawal of its forces from occupied territories.

U.S. Bomber Attacks Vietnam Missile Site

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. fighter-bomber attacked anti-aircraft defences within 90 miles of Hanoi Sunday in the closest strike to the North Vietnamese capital since the unsuccessful attempt to free Americans from the Son Tay prisoner-of-war camp more than a year ago.

The U.S. command said it was responding to Hanoi's claims that four American fighter-bombers were shot down during the weekend. But the command said an Air Force F-105 fighter-bomber was supporting air operations over the northern part of Laos Sunday when its electronic equipment indicated that a radar site on the North Vietnamese side of the border was tracking his flight preparatory to firing a surface-to-air missile.

The pilot fired his missile first, and the command said the action caused the site to cease operating.

On the ground, Communist forces marked the 25th anniversary Sunday of the start of the Indochina war and the 11th anniversary today of the founding of the National Liberation Front with attacks in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

Heavy fighting was reported in the Plain of Jars in northern Laos, where U.S. air strikes were increased to bolster the Laotian troops, and on Cambodia's northeastern front. Saigon was hit by rockets for the first time in 2½ months.

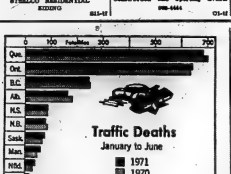
Heavy Lions Might Help Cancer War

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Scientists at the Princeton particle accelerator laboratory said Sunday they have made a significant breakthrough in the possible beaming of high energy ions for cancer therapy.

Dr. Milton G. White, project director at the lab, described the researchers have been able to accelerate the normally immobile heavy neon ion to 118,000 miles per hour, more than half the speed of light, which permits the ion to penetrate the human tissue and reach internal parts of the body.

By bombarding cancerous cells in the body with heavy ions, White said, the growth possibly will be destroyed without severely damaging healthy cells.

The research has been carried on at the lab at Princeton University. White said early work by Dr. Cornelius Tobias of the University of California and Dr. Paul Todd of Pennsylvania State University indicated that heavy ions capable of entering into the body would be greatly superior to x-rays in treating cancer.



While said although any one of a number of heavy ions may be used in the process, he feels that neon ion would be the best since it is the heaviest we have so far "been accelerated to such a high rate.

Thieu Orders Ceasefires

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu tonight announced 24-hour ceasefires for southern allied forces in South Vietnam for Christmas, New Year's and the Tet celebration of the lunar new year in mid-February.

Thieu coupled his announcement with an appeal to the Communists on the occasion of Christmas to "end the fighting immediately and completely" throughout Indochina so that prompt and serious discussions could be held to restore peace.

The Viet Cong announced nearly three weeks ago that its forces would observe ceasefires of three days each for Christmas and New Year's and four days for Tet.

Traffic Deaths

Traffic deaths for the first six months of 1971 remained fairly static in comparison with figures for the same period in 1970. Only four provinces recorded decreases in traffic deaths. New Brunswick: 8.2 per cent (-7 deaths); Quebec: 2.5 per cent (-18 deaths); Alberta: (-18 deaths); and British Columbia: 1.6 per cent (-4 deaths). (CP Newsmap)

Bombs Kill Four In Ulster

BELFAST (AP) — Bomb blasts killed four teen-agers during the weekend and a fifth died in a collision with an army vehicle, sending the death toll to 205 in nearly 2½ years of communal violence in Northern Ireland.

Three Roman Catholic youths 18 and 19 years old blew themselves up in a car Saturday when a 19-year-old driver of them apparently was crading in his lap detonated, a British army spokesman said. The wreckage of the small car was found in Magherafelt, 30 miles north of Belfast.

The youths apparently intended to plant the bomb elsewhere but made a mistake with the timing, the army spokesman said.

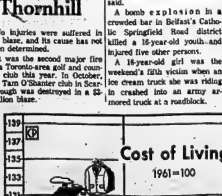
A 16-year-old girl was the weekend's fifth victim when an ice cream truck she was riding in crashed into an army armored truck at a roadblock.

Country Club Razed By Fire at Thornhill

TORONTO (CP) — A fire that started Sunday morning a few hours after members left a party destroyed the Thornhill Country Club, causing $1-million damage.



George Barber, manager of the 35-year-old golf and curling club, estimated the damage but said the club was fully insured.

By 10 a.m. Sunday, when the fire had burned itself out, all that was left of the club was the shell of the curling rink and several curling stones smeared with plastic—the remains of handles melted by the heat.

Summer Home Burgled

TRENTON (Staff) — Theft was reported Saturday night of household appliances and a shotgun from the home of Donald Murray township summer home of Trenton builder Wasil Sidor.

Brighton detachment OPP said today thieves gained entrance to the premises north of Smithfield by forcing the front door and removed a television set, a stereo record player-radio, and the gun.

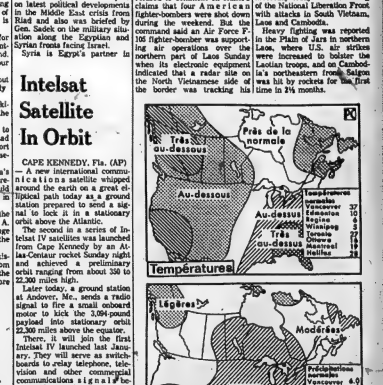
Index Rises

The consumer price index rose to 135.4 last month from 134.9 in October, reflecting higher housing and clothing costs, Statistics Canada reported Thursday. Food prices remained the same for the two months, and transportation costs dropped slightly.

All other components of the index rose. The index is based on the 1961 prices equalling 100. (CP Newsmap)

Intelsat Satellite In Orbit

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — A new international communications satellite whipped around the earth on a great elliptical path today as a ground crew prepared to fire it a signal to lock it in a stationary orbit above the Atlantic.



The second in a series of Intelsat IV satellites was launched from Cape Kennedy by an Atlas-Centaur rocket Sunday night. It achieved a preliminary orbit ranging from about 350 to 22,300 miles high.

Later today, a ground station at Andover, Me., sends a radio signal to fire a small onboard motor to kick the 3,094-pound payload into stationary orbit 22,300 miles above the equator.

There, it will join the first Intelsat IV launched last January. They will serve as switchboards to relay telephone, television and other commercial communications signals between North and South America and Western Europe.

Each Intelsat IV is capable of handling 6,000 simultaneous telegrams. A total of eight Intelsat IV satellites are to be launched to form a global network to replace the Intelsat III payloads, which can handle only 1,200 phone circuits or four TV programs.

The 82-national International Telecommunications Satellite Corp. paid the Nautilus Aerospace and Space Administration $16 million to launch the new $13.5 million payload. The launch fee includes the cost of the rocket.

Warm Forecast

Central Canada can expect above normal temperatures and precipitation in the next month according to the 30 day forecast of the United States Weather Bureau. Western Canada can expect below normal temperatures and precipitation with the odds favoring moderate precipitation coupled with lower temperatures.

Top Teams Tie Games

Manchester Held Scoreless

LONDON (CP) — The three top soccer clubs in the English League all played tie games Saturday, leaving their positions in the standings unchanged. In Scotland, Glasgow Celtic crushed Motherwell 5-1 to stay one point ahead of Aberdeen, a 3-0 winner over Dundee United.

Manchester United, the English leader, was held to a scoreless draw by Ipswich Town which had given up 11 goals in its three previous matches.

England star Francis Lee scored his ninth penalty goal of the season to keep Manchester City four points behind United with a 1-1 draw at home to Leicester City. Leicester, on a goal after seven minutes by Keith Weller, had appeared to have the game sewn up until Lee slammed in his 13th goal of the season.

Leeds United also figured in a 1-1 draw, with rapidly-improving Crystal Palace. Leeds took the lead after 41 minutes on Peter Lorimer's goal and John Craven got the equalizer in the 68th minute.

Alan Ritson kept Derby in the title hunt by scoring the winner in a 2-0 victory over Everton, while Liverpool and Tottenham were fighting out a scoreless draw.

Welsh John Roberts, a late Arsenal addition in place of injured Peter Simpson, netted twice in a 2-0 victory over leading place West Bromwich Albion.

Nottingham Forest, one place above West Brom, led until the 79th minute against high-flying Sheffield United. But United won 2-1 on goals by Alan Woodward and Tony Currie.

Vic Halom was on loan to Newcastle United from second division Luton Town, scored his second goal in two games for the club and it gave them a 1-0 victory over West Ham United.

Wolverhampton Wanderers extended their winning streak with—a 2-0 victory over Stoke City. Derek Dougan scored one of the goals and Alan Bloor put the ball into his own Stoke City net.

Southampton won by the same margin over struggling Hal dersfield Town to ease its relegation worries.

Carlisle's Stan Bowles slammed in three goals to send Norwich City, second division leaders, down to a 3-0 defeat.

Bottom club Aston Villa went to Plymouth, both promoted last season, continued to head the third division. Notts cruised to a 3-0 win over Walsall, while Bournemouth beat Halifax 3-1.

Brentford, the fourth division leader, had Brian Turner sent off in the 20th minute of the match against Hartlepools, but still managed to win 2-1.

Dixie Deans, recently signed by Celtic from Motherwell, continued on a scoring spree with his fifth goal in four matches for the Glasgow team. The other Celtic scorers in the 5-1 romp were Bobby Lennox, Jimmy Johnstone, and Kenny Dalglish with two.

Steve Murray put Aberdeen ahead of Dundee United in the 34th minute and Alex Willoughby and Joe Harper made it 3-0.

Colin Stein, Alex Jardine and Graham Fyfe all scored in the first half as Rangers topped the Airdrieonians 3-1.

'Foster' Families Do Well at 'Spiel

The Foster parent plan was initiated at the Quinte Curling Club this weekend, at least on the ice surface.

While some entries in the annual Bonspiel weren't composed of natural families, others were formed by the "adoption" of some junior curlers by senior club members.

A total of 12 rinks competed in the Saturday event. Dan Cowley's team emerging as top points getter in the two games that they played. Other members of the winning foursome included Madge Cowley, Jim Lovett and Jim Dixon.

Other rinks winning both of their games were those skidded by Ken Fowler and Bruce Parsons.

Playing for the Pfinder rink were Kae Pinder, Rod Cameron and Darlene Armstrong. Rounding out Parsons' foursome were Anne, Peter Jr. and Ian Acton.

Chris Storms Makes Self at Home

KINGSTON (Special) — Picton's Chris Storms continued to find a home at Frontenac Downs. The Prince Edward county driver, who recently moved his winter stabling quarters to the Kingston track, won the featured event of Saturday's card by driving Philaurie to a win in the ninth. The Christmas season and heavy weekend snows helped keep attendance down. A total of 653 fans attended the Saturday races with 789 on hand the following day.

Four Militiamen Tortured Before Public Dacca Execution

By HORST FAAS
and
MICHEL LAURENT
AP Photographers

DACCA (AP) — Each time a soldier hanged forward to stab his bayonet into one of the four tortured men, the hiss of excited breath could be heard from the crowd.

There was almost silence when the soldier turned and twisted the bayonet.

When he stepped back, withdrew his rifle and raised the gleaming steel high, dripping blood, the crowd responded with a guttural cry of "Joi-Bangla" — Victory to Bangla Desh.

Some 5,000 men and children saw the merciless, blood-curdling execution of four young men at the end of Bangla Desh's first public rally after the surrender of Pakistan's troops in East Pakistan.

None of the leaders of the Mukti Bahini, the military force of Bangla Desh, could explain specific charges against the four men.

"They are Razakars," said one, referring to the generally-hated local militiamen who are known to have committed widespread murder, rape and looting during Federal Pakistani command through the last nine bloody months.

On the morning of the execution—Saturday—at Dacca's Race course, the mass graves of several hundred men, mostly intellectual—doctors, university professors and students—had been found near Dacca. All had been tortured and murdered in the last days before the Pakistani surrender.

Following Moslem custom, only men gathered for the rally beside the stadium. Mukti Bahini soldiers guarded the approaches to the speakers' stand. The four tied men were dumped from a jeep beside the rostrum and when speakers harangued the crowd, no one paid any attention to the Razakars.

The tall bearded Mukti Bahini officer, Abdul Kader Siddiqi, who later ordered the bayoneting, called on the demonstrators to preserve calm and discipline, and not to take the law into their own hands.

More and more blood came. They were beaten with clubs. A cheering crowd had to be beaten back with sticks by some of the torturers.

The beating went on for about 30 minutes. Then the militiamen were still bleeding for their lives, tried to use legs and feet of their attackers.

Then the mukti speaker stepped from the rostrum and the crowd fell silent. He pointed his swagger stick. Two soldiers carefully fired their bayonets.

The first soldiers leaned back, aimed his bayonet and stabbed the man who had been pointed out.

Then other soldiers joined in. After a brief pause Jaruar began to work on the other three men, methodically, quietly. They stabbed in the chests but avoided the heart. Legs, abdomen, throat and face were other targets.

The stabbing was briefly interrupted when the self-styled "general," Abdul Kader Siddiqi, asked for a bayonet.

A Mukti Bahini soldier handed over his rifle and then propped up one of the bleeding men so "general" could make some sinking and then the tallest one to die.

Killing of Montreal Policeman Called Assassination

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, describing Thursday's killing of a Montreal policeman as an "assassination," has called for enforcement of the death penalty in such cases.

Mr. Choquette said in an interview there has been an increase in murders since capital punishment was abolished three years ago in Canada for all but murders of policemen and prison guards.

"Too many murderers of policemen and prison guards are escaping capital punishment, he said.

He said the machine gunning of Constable Jean-Guy Sabourin outside a Montreal department store in Candiac who attempted a $50,000 robbery was a "terrible event" and an "assassination."

"I know of at least three cases of policemen and guards who, with three children aged 10, 11 and 12, was gunned down by bandits who emerged from the Robert Simpson Co. store carrying a bag of spoons.

One witness said the killers walked up to him, said nothing and then the tallest one fired a burst from the machine-gun held at the bandit's velist. Crowds of Christmas shoppers fled for safety.

He was the seventh Montreal policeman wounded by gunfire in three months and the second to die.

To Your Good Health

Certain Type of Infection Described by Term Cellulitis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: While on a trip my left knee swelled up and got hot and we stopped at a hospital for treatment. The doctor told me I had "cellulitis."

Since I never heard of it before, I wonder if you could tell me something about it. Perhaps how I got it and its effects, and treatment and results.

You were wise to get immediate treatment, because cellulitis, unless promptly controlled, can develop into a serious situation. Not that it always does, of course, but it can.

Cellulitis means, to the doctor, a very specific type of infection, although not necessarily from any particular germ. Probably in a good number of cases the patient may merely be told that it is an infection without mention of the term cellulitis.

Most, although not all, cases develop on the surface of the body. The infecting germ spreads rapidly. Inflaming the skin and underlying tissues.

The area is hot, red and painful. The patient often has chills, fever and aching. Lymph nodes in the area are likely to be swollen and tender.

The point is that the germs, wherever they may have originated, spread quickly through the area. Had the same germs been there, but surrounded and "fenced in" by the body's defences, then you might have had a boil, or a small local infection. But the rapid spread through cellular tissue that makes it "cellulitis."

The germs usually involved is either streptococcus or staphylococcus (although other germs can be culprits, too), and these germs ordinarily gain entrance through a break in the skin or mucous membrane.

Treatment involves rest, wet dressings and antibiotics, and the sooner the better. If the infection, once having picked up speed, gets out of control, severe ulcers, septicemia (blood poisoning) or other complications can develop, depending on the part of the body that is involved.

Exactly how your trouble started is not easy to say. The germs may have entered through a scratch or wound so trivial that you paid no attention to it at the time. But when the wrong germs manage to get in, and start multiplying they can cause a lot of trouble, such as cellulitis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend went to dinner where they served very tough cooked with rock salt. Would this have any effect on a person's system?—C. T.

This is a popular way of preparing roast beef in some sections. Only harm would arise if a person is on a low-sodium (Low-salt) diet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A recent blood test showed an excess of uric acid. The doctor put me on medication and said that would help expel this acid.

Is there some type of food I should eat or not eat to help? Will vitamins decrease or increase it? Does an excess amount of uric acid give you a reaction similar to arthritis?—A. F. N.

Diet—avoiding foods with high purine content—has some effect in preventing excess uric acid, but medication is a much more important factor. Vitamins have no effect either way.

Excess uric acid can lead to gout, and in a sense, when gout is active (attacks come and go) it is a form of arthritis in that it causes severe joint pain. That phase of gout is called gouty arthritis.

Uric acid also can cause kidney stones, so there's more than one very good reason for keeping the level down.

The bidding:

Opening lead — king of hearts.

Edgar Kaplan, New York star, was playing in a team of four event many years ago and got to three notrump on the bidding shown.

West led the king of hearts, which held, and continued with the queen. Kaplan won with the ace and went into a very long huddle, emerging from it by playing a diamond to the jack.

At this point the roof caved in. East won with the king, returned the queen of spades, and the outcome was that Kaplan went down eight — 800 points!

Oddly enough, and despite the result, Kaplan's method of play received almost unanimous support from his teammates and other experts. He could have gone down two by running the clubs and cashing the ace of diamonds, but it did not seem likely to him that the clubs would be divided 3-2 after West had shown up with seven hearts.

Instead, Kaplan played for three diamond tricks, which would guarantee the contract regardless of how the clubs were divided. This was not really much to expect, since West might easily have had the singleton or doubleton king of diamonds.

Had this been the case, he would have scored nine tricks even if the clubs were divided 4-1 or 5-0.

Note that Kaplan could not afford to test the clubs first, for if that suit proved to be unfavorably divided there would be no way of cashing five diamond tricks even if West had the K-x of the suit. The diamonds would be clocked in that event and he would be able to score only four diamond tricks, not five.

Some players might call the outcome a Pyrrhic victory, while others might say that the operation was a huge success—though the patient died.

Tomorrow: Planning the play.

Hospital for Insane Refuses More Patients

PENETANGUISHENE, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario government's hospital for the criminally insane temporarily has stopped accepting patients from jails from provincial courts, administrator Dr. Barry A. Boyd said Sunday.

Dr. Boyd said he cannot accept any more patients for observation because of a staff shortage at the Oak Ridge maximum-security unit of the hospital.

"I've got two certified psychiatrists, another who's a trained psychologist and a general practitioner right now," he said. "We need three more good psychiatrists."

Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said in an interview Sunday there are other places, such as the Clarke Institute and Lakeshore Hospital in Toronto, to which patients might go.

Monetary Pact Should Boost U.S. Employment and Help Trade

WASHINGTON (CP) — The new set of monetary values agreed upon by the Group of Ten richest non-Communist nations should boost U.S. employment and make American products more competitive with foreign goods.

Combined with the U.S. pr mise to lift the 38-per-cent extra levy on imports, the agreement likely will translate into more jobs in Canada as well as higher prices for overseas imports.

A major question is whether the new economic policies will succeed in restoring economic growth in the United States and thus bolster the demand for Canada's major exports to the United States, such as pulp and paper.

It is "the most significant monetary agreement in the history of the world," President Nixon said Saturday night when he appeared at the Smithsonian Institution to announce the currency agreements.

Under the pact among the Group of Ten industrial nations, which was approved Sunday by the International Monetary Fund, the Nixon administration made a contingent promise to devalue the dollar by raising the official gold price 8.57 per cent to $38 from $35 an ounce.

The Canadian dollar was left to continue its "free float" as it has since it was unpegged in May, 1970. But the Japanese yen and West German mark are being revalued sharply higher, and many other of the world's currencies are being reset.

Nixon said there was no particular beer or wheeze in the changes.

"The whole free world has won" because the new financial stability will mean that "competition can be more fair" and that there can be true prosperity and in the long term more peaceful world."

Treasury Secretary John Connally said the U.S. will "receive a fair share" in the 10-per-cent levy it imposed last Aug. 15 on dutiable imports and will scrap the "buy American" limitation on the newly-restored seven-per-cent tax credit for business equipment purchases. Both will be lifted simultaneously.

Also effective immediately, the Group of Ten agreed that its currencies will be allowed to fluctuate more widely than before around their new official rates. In contrast to the old limitation of one per cent either way, the Group of Ten communique provides for a margin of 2¼ per cent, up or down. This would discourage "hot money" flowing from one country to another to take advantage of higher interest rates or currency-rate speculation.

The net effect of dollar devaluation will be to make U.S. goods cheaper overseas and most imports more expensive in the United States. That, in turn, is expected to spur U.S. business production and produce more jobs.

But there should be little over-all impact on U.S. living costs, since imports account for only four per cent of American purchases.

The U.S. devaluation amounts to 7.89 per cent in relation to other currencies, such as the British pound, which are not being revalued; or 8.57 per cent in relation to gold.

Some other countries in the Group of Ten are revaluing their currencies upward, making the change even more dramatic.

For example, the Japanese yen is being revalued upward 16.88 per cent in relation to the newly-devalued dollar and the German mark will undergo a 13.57-per-cent upward revaluation in relation to the devalued dollar.

The U.S. has no intention of resuming the sale of gold for dollars in the near future. This, Connally said, is a question to be resolved when the financial powers determine the shape of the fundamental reform of the monetary system called for in the Group of Ten communique — a decision that may take years.

Dr. Milton Friedam of the University of Chicago said Sunday that "the worst thing about the agreement from the international point of view is that it re-establishes a system of fixed exchange rates which is bound sooner or later to bring further monetary crises."

"From the U.S. point of view," Friedman said, "I believe it will prove a great mistake to have agreed to a bookkeeping change in the price of gold. By cutting the links between the dollar and gold on Aug. 15, President Nixon set the dollar free as it should have been many years ago."

Most governments termed the agreement a reasonable compromise and a welcome assurance that stability would be restored to disrupted world conditions.

But Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda called it "the greatest economic shock" to an country since the Second World War.

Both Japan and Germany, the countries whose currencies were changed most drastically in relation to the dollar, were considering special measures to help exporters expected to be hurt by what amounts to a steep price for their products in world markets.

The agreement was expected to be a tonic, however, for the U.S. stock market.

New York Reaction Awaited

LONDON (AP) — The Europeans and the Japanese kept their foreign exchange markets closed today and watched the New York market for reaction to the world monetary shakeup.

"Sanity will not return to the foreign exchange markets for at least a week and a half," said one London dealer.

Many governments delayed setting new rates for their currencies until they could gauge the effect of the dollar devaluation on world trade—and their own chances of benefiting or hurting from it.

The monetary agreement by this weekend gave European businessmen the green light for stepping up an export drive held back by months of uncertainty. While criticizing some parts of the package, they hailed removal of the 10-per-cent U.S. import surcharge.

Canada is the only member of the Group of Ten that refused to return to a fixed rate of exchange. The Canadian dollar currently is floating at 1.008 parity of 97.5 cents U.S., lifted in May, 1970.

When the European currency markets reopen, currencies will be allowed to fluctuate more widely above and below their new official rates with the dollar. Dealers expect them to open low as speculators bolding marks, pounds, French francs and other European currencies take their profits by selling them at their new higher rates.

If the rates begin rising later, central banks in each country are expected to start buying to keep them down since lower rates are better for their exporters.

Until President Nixon threw the international monetary system into turmoil last August, governments were committed to keep the fluctuation to only one per cent above and below parity. The new agreement widens this to 2.25 per cent.

The new rate for the British pound is $2.6057, up from $2.48 in August and representing a 7.89-per-cent dollar devaluation.

"The new rate is too high to will bring one dealer contake the strain on the balance of payments that reflating the economy and going into the European Economic Community. This was well above the five per cent achieved in the floating markets before the agreement.

plained. But the Confederation of British Industries called the agreement "a good start" and Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber called it "equitable and realistic."

The French franc's new parity in comparison to the devalued dollar is 5.11570, the Bank of France said today. The old parity was 5.55419 francs.

The parity change represents a 7.89-per-cent devaluation of the dollar and a 8.57-per-cent revaluation of the franc.

The bank of France intervention level—the point where the bank supports the dollar—was set at 5.0005-5.2310 francs, compared with 5.4125-5.5980 before the new parities were announced.

French banks were giving tourists about five francs for the dollar today, compared with about 5.20 Friday.

The biggest changes came in West Germany and Japan, the chief targets of Nixon's campaign for revaluation of foreign currencies.

West Germany puts its rate at 3.223 marks to the dollar, up 13.57 per cent, and Japan set the yen at 308 to the dollar, up 16.88 per cent.

Italy, seeking a trade advantage in Europe to help its stagnant economy, revalued its currency upward less than the amount of the dollar devaluation. The new rate is 568.40 lire, up 7.68 per cent.

OHC to Call Tenders For 250 Apartments

Senior Citizen Units Planned

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Ontario Housing Corporation is prepared to construct 250 additional senior citizen apartment units in Belleville, it was learned yesterday at city council.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds said he had been informed by OHC that it had been unable to find a downtown site for the 117 units which had previously been approved.

But since the 117 units had been approved, the demand for senior citizen housing in the city has increased to the point where there are now 247 on the waiting list and OHC is prepared to call for proposals from private contractors for 250 units.

The units could be in the form of a highrise apartment and would preferably be in the downtown area.

Ontario Housing Corporation now has more than 150 senior citizen apartment units in the city including 80 on Bridge Street across from the Fairgrounds.

On motion from Mayor J. Russell Scott, council voted to ask OHC to construct the proposed 250 units with preference to be given the city's downtown area.

Mayor Scott said the co-operation of OHC in offering to construct the needed senior citizen housing was commendable.

He said senior citizens were appreciative of the type of housing provided by OHC. The turnover of tenants is small and the senior citizens seem to live longer.

He urged that council do all it could to assist the OHC in its proposal to construct the housing and have it finished next year.

And two other housing proposals — single family detached and condominium — have also been given council's okay.

Two weeks ago, council approved a condominium housing proposal for north of Coe Court Street in the Moira and Prince of Wales Drive area.

But there were two objections to the necessary bylaw change and Alderman Arthur Keegan was named a committee of one to see the two parties with the view of having them withdraw their objection.

Yesterday, Ald. Keegan told council the objections had now been withdrawn and only OMB approval was necessary to allow the project to go ahead.

The other approval given by council was for a plan of subdivision for the North Glenarden area in West Park Village.

The subject property was originally intended for a school site but the county school board later favored another site and the 15-lot area will now be developed by local builder Maurice H. Rollins. The subdivision agreement calls for the area to be serviced by underground electric wiring.

Five Arrested

Toronto Police Locate Million

TORONTO (CP) — Five persons were arrested in nearby Mississauga Monday night by police, who said they had recovered virtually all of the $1,129,000 taken in a bank robbery in Windsor, Ont., Saturday.

The bulk of the money was in a blue metal trunk found in a second-floor motel room where two men and a woman were arrested. Two other women were arrested in a private home where $7,000 was found.

All five were charged with possession of stolen property. Police also charged the two men with possession of a firearm, a .25-calibre revolver which they found under a mattress.

Toronto Chief Harold Adamson said the raids were conducted by Toronto, Mississauga and Ontario Provincial Police on information supplied by the Toronto Intelligence unit.

He identified the three arrested at the motel as William Ferguson, 48, of no fixed address, George Ivan Davidson, 43, and Edna Simpson, 36, both of Toronto.

Mississauga police said Jessie Delorme, 45, of Toronto and Edna Lefebvre, 45, of Mississauga were arrested at the private home.

In Windsor, Police Chief Gordon Preston said two more men were being sought in the Toronto area and two others in Windsor.

There was initial confusion about the charges and the number of arrests.

First reports said the three picked up in the motel were charged with armed robbery but Toronto police said no such charge had been laid. They were also unable to confirm the two additional arrests until later today.

"There was money flying all over the place when we opened that trunk," said Toronto Staff Sgt. Adolphus Payne.

He said the three persons in the room offered no resistance.

When the money was removed from the motel, police were unable to stuff it all back into the trunk and filled a pillowcase with the overflow.

Virtually all the money was in small bills, almost equally divided between Canadian and United States currency. There were a few rolls of $50 bills and the odd $100 bill.

Employees of the bank were brought from Windsor today to count the money.

Saint John Hashish Is Seized

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — About 200 pounds of hashish, imported through the port of Saint John from Pakistan with a street value estimated between $1.25 and $1.5 million were seized Monday by RCMP.

RCMP S. Sgt. Eric Ferguson told a news conference today four United States citizens have been arrested and will appear in court here this afternoon. He did not say what charges will be laid.

He said it is believed to be the second largest drug seizure in Canadian history.

RCMP searched a camper van with international licence plates that arrived in the port last Friday on the Pakistani motor vessel Panda. S. Sgt. Ferguson said "numerous blocks" of hashish were concealed in the vehicle.

The van was kept under surveillance for three days until it was picked up Monday afternoon. A man and a woman in the van and another couple in a car with California licence plates were stopped by RCMP on a highway near Welsford about 20 miles from Saint John during a snowstorm Monday night.

Dollar Strong

LONDON (PA) — The U.S. dollar opened strongly in foreign exchanges today but trading was slow and hesitant. Traders waited for the big money men to make a move.

Dealers said there was no early indication speculators were in the market buying dollars bought by the billions since last June to take their profits on the foreign currency they had May.

Buying and selling ranges from the dollar widened, a sure sign of uncertainty and slow trading.

The South African government, meanwhile, announced a 10 per cent devaluation of the rand in terms of gold, but delayed fixing new dollar parity. The foreign exchange remained closed.

Markets reopened nearly everywhere else after Monday's closure to prepare for the new exchange rates arising from the weekend agreement in Washington. The agreement was to devalue the dollar by 7.9 per cent in relations to gold.

The dollar hit its new ceiling of 314.83 yen at one point on the Tokyo exchange, the first to open. The ceiling is the point at which the Bank of Japan is obliged by international monetary rules to sell dollars in order to bring the rate down.

The pressure later eased off and the dollar closed at 314.17 yen.

Canadian Dollar Declines

TORONTO (CP) — The value of the Canadian dollar fell slightly at the opening of domestic currency markets today.

The opening trades were at about four-tenths of a cent above par with the United States dollar, down from a close Monday of about six-tenths of a cent above par.

Currency traders said the volume of transactions in dollar trades was about average.

The Canadian dollar remained stable during what one trader called "a relatively normal day" of trading on domestic currency markets Monday.

The value of the dollar was about six-tenths of a cent above par with the United States dollar when markets closed. The closing value was the same as the opening and identical to the close Friday before the weekend announcement of agreement on realignment of major world currencies.

UN Tries Once Again To Fill Job

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Security Council tries today for the third time to pick a new secretary-general with the strength of character of the various candidates apparently an issue.

The 15-country council failed to choose a successor to retiring U Thant on its second attempt Monday when three voters were cast against front-running candidates.

The council is running out of time. The General Assembly, which must approve the council's choice of a man, is scheduled to adjourn tonight or Wednesday.

That is to step down as the office he has held for 10 years at the end of the year.

Conceivably, if the council does not make a decision today or Wednesday the assembly will be called into special session who will be called before the end of the year.

Three candidates acquired the necessary nine votes for council approval Monday.

They were:

—Austrian Ambassador Kurt Waldheim who received 11 votes with two against. One of the negative votes came from a permanent member—reported to be Britain—and this constituted a veto. Waldheim was also vetoed on the first meeting Friday.

—Argentine Ambassador Carlos Ortiz de Rozas, whose name was proposed by the Big Five after a Saturday meeting. He received 10 votes and a veto, apparently cast by Soviet Union.

—Finnish Ambassador Max Jakobsen, who, received nine votes but a veto, possibly from China, although it may have been by the Soviet Union.

The only relatively well-known name among the candidates is Max Jakobsen, the Swedish diplomat who is the UN's Middle East envoy. He received eight affirmative votes Friday and seven Monday.

In both cases there was no negative Big Five votes and thus he has to be considered a potential compromise candidate.

Pakistanis Promised Revenge by Bhutto

RAWALPINDI, West Pakistan (AP) — Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, Pakistan's first civilian president in 13 years, pledged a return to democracy for his war-ravaged country and vowed revenge on India Monday night as he faced Pakistan's most explosive crisis since the country was born in 1947.

Only hours after he returned from New York to take over from Gen. Mohammad Yahya Khan, Bhutto told Pakistanis in a broadcast: "Do not lose heart. We will redeem this. We will take revenge."

He was referring to the loss of East Pakistan in the two-week war against India which ended last Friday. He declared: "We will see to it that this wrong is rectified."

Bhutto, who devoted much of the 37-minute broadcast to trying to bolster Pakistanis' badly shaken morale, warned India: "Do not gloat over a temporary military victory."

As he spoke, police in Rawalpindi, Lahore and Peshawar, fired tear gas to break up demonstrations by angry Pakistanis still bitter over the loss of the eastern wing, now the Bengali state of Bangla Desh, and Yahya's acceptance of the ceasefire Friday.

Bhutto said: "India's days in East Pakistan are doomed to fail. India should not get intoxicated that it has taken over by military force part of Pakistan. We will die for our honor, self-respect and integrity."

But in more conciliatory tones, he told correspondents at a news conference later that he wanted to be on good terms with India.

However, he again insisted India must first pull out of the former eastern province before he would negotiate with them on what he called "honorable and equitable terms."

Heath and Nixon Disagreeing

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — President Nixon and Prime Minister Edward Heath are moving in their summit talks toward tacit agreement to disagree on some elements of future foreign policies.

The two leaders met for five hours Monday, 30 minutes longer than scheduled, in a drawing room of the Governor's House overlooking the Atlantic.

The initial session carried philosophical and ideological overtones, officials indicated, while the concluding two meetings today were to focus on such specifics as how to complete the rebuilding of the international monetary system.

The White House released the Bermuda talks as the occasion for two announcements Monday — the removal of the U.S. 10-per-cent extra levy on dutiable imports and the decision to ask Congress next year to grant generalized trade preferences to developing nations.

Nixon personally announced outside Governor's House that — he had signed while en route to Bermuda a proclamation on the import surcharge. The U.S. action was promised as part of the monetary realignment agreement reached by the Group of Ten ministers.

Two Major Sewer Projects Proposed for City

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

If current plans at two levels of government are carried through as intended, the next 18 months could well set an all-time record for sewer construction in Belleville.

Within the next month, the Commission will commence construction of the long talked-about Moira River sanitary trunk sewer intended to serve the northeast section of the city and all of Thurlow township.

Construction of the river sanitary sewer will proceed in two sections under separate contracts.

Then, some time next spring, the city hopes to commence construction on the first phase of a $1.25-million storm sewer project to drain the city's east developing north end west of North Front Street.

The first phase of the dual project is the construction of a storm sewer across North Front Street to the Moira River to drain the west side of Treacy Street. Estimated cost of this project is $350,000.

And yesterday city council gave the okay to a $740,000 storm sewer project which would drain the low-lying area west of North Front Street and south of Bleecker Ave. and Maple Drive.

The storm sewer would start out as a 27-inch pipe at Maple Drive and generally follow the present Farley Street road allowance across College Street and beneath the CN double tracks and across Coleman Flats to hook up with the existing twin box culverts under Moira Street at the Moira Street bridge.

The sewer size would increase to 72 inches at Harriet Street with the construction of a new to Moira Street to be a 4-by-8-foot box culvert.

The size of the first phase sewer running across North Front Street to the Moira will range between 42 and 66 inches.

When completed, the two storm sewers will tap the area west of North Front Street between College Street and Highway 401 and would open up present low-lying sections of this area for development.

The east - west sewer leading across North Front Street to the river was given council approval some months ago but procurement of certain easements has delayed construction.

City council last night gave approval to the Fahey Street storm sewer and gave two readings to a bylaw authorizing construction. The bylaw still now to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval before being given third reading.

But the Fahey Street storm sewer project didn't receive council okay without some doubts being raised about whether it should have precedence over the city's proposed new bridge over the Moira at the north end of Pinnacle Street.

Alderman Donald Sostter expressed a fear that proceeding with the Fahey Street sewer might delay construction of the Pinnacle Street bridge as well as other phases of the proposed north-south arterial route.

However, City Manager J. R. Reynolds said that if application for the Fahey sewer project the work made before the end of the year, it could be charged against the city's 1971 capital works estimates, leaving allowance for projects which will not be proceeded with this year.

Projects included in this year's capital works quota for which applications will not be made are the north - south arterial, $200,000; University Ave. extension with storm sewer, sanitary sewer and watermain, $115,000; Valleyview Cres. sanitary sewer, $25,000; Moira St. West sanitary sewer, $25,000 and sanitary sewers for the College Street Bypass, $75,000, $76,000, for a total of $600,000.

Mr. Reynold said it appeared therefore that if council would proceed with the Fahey Street sewer project, there would be sufficient funds available in the 1971 capital works quota.

An amount of $305,000 is already included in this year's capital works budget for the Fahey Street sewer, but the estimated cost of the project is now $400,000 over the budgeted amount.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission is paying the capital costs for the Moira River trunk sewer.

City Engineer Wilbur Purnell said if council decided now to proceed with the sewer, design plans could be prepared next year in time for calling tenders and getting the work under way during the winter of 1972-73.

Dundas West Widening Plans Reviewed

Preliminary plans for the reconstruction of Dundas West to a four-lane undivided arterial route from the city limits to Holden Street were reviewed yesterday by city council.

Plans for West Dundas were presented by Dale Galloway of Greer, Galloway and Associates Ltd., consulting engineers, who two weeks ago were awarded the contract for widening of Dundas Street East from Front Street to Bleecker Ave.

Council agreed that a East Dundas Street reconstruction plan at a total estimated cost of $694,000 of which the city's share is estimated at $176,000.

Plans are that a construction start on the East Dundas Street reconstruction will get under way next spring.

No cost estimate is yet available for the 1.2½ mile West Dundas street reconstruction, which would require acquisition of only one small block of Albert College property at the corner of Dundas and Sidney.

The triangular block would be necessary to provide a continuous right turn lane for eastbound traffic onto Sidney Street.

The four-lane reconstruction of Dundas Street would meet up with the existing four-lane section of Highway 2 between Belleville and Trenton to four lanes, which Dr. Galloway said was likely to commence next year or in 1973.

Plans call for the provision of bus bays opposite the Ontario School for the Deaf where a pedestrian activated signal and crosswalk would be installed.

The Dundas and Sidney Street intersection would be fully signalized.

Mayor J. Russell Scott questioned the need for bus bays at the OSD, noting that students normally were transported by school owned buses.

He felt that it would be much better be placed at Sidney Street, an area which he said would have a lot of pedestrian traffic.

Ald. Alderman Paul Russell was concerned over the number of trees slated to be cut down over the 1.2? - mile route.

He said he counted more than 50 trees when the reconstruction plans called to be removed and asked if the Department of Trnmportation and Communication allowed grants for tree replacement.

On recommendation of Alderman Ben Corke, the preliminary plans for the reconstruction of West Dundas were approved with the engineers to consult with the OSD, school commission, traffic committee, residents of the area and with the highways department before preparing detailed plans.

Yule Fire Risk Great

Like everything else, too much of a good thing can present problems.

During this Christmas season, the Belleville Fire Department issues a fire safety warning directly related to Yuletide festivities.

If families are using a natural tree, it should be purchased fresh and green and kept indoors in an unheated garage before being brought into the home for decorating. A disgonal cut on the butt should be made several inches from the base and then set in water, which should be maintained above the level of the cut.

This allows the tree to "drink" and remain as green as possible during the festive season.

Colored tree lights and electric window decorations should be checked for worn insulation, broken plugs or loose bulb sockets. Only CSA-approved lighting sets and only non-flammable decorations should be used.

Discarded gift wrappings should be disposed of immediately. A green tree will burn if ignited by burning paper around the base.

The Christmas tree should be set away from any heat sources such as fireplaces, television sets or radiators. It should not block doors or window. In the event of a fire, the tree could prove a disastrous obstacle.

All lights should be switched off at bedtime or when leaving the house.

If the tree dries before it is taken up, it should be put in safe moisture level. A dry tree can be ignited by a single match, it burns violently to a charred state in a few seconds.

With artificial trees growing in popularity, fire safety safety points have been set down.

Metallic trees are conductors of electricity and should not be decorated with strings of lights. Floodlights will provide safer and adequate illumination. Some plastic trees, made from styrene materials, are flammable, and should be safer version of Polyvinylchloride.

Buyers are urged to check labels or consult with sales personnel or manufacturers.

Small children, cats or puppies have a natural inquisitiveness. Left alone, it's not uncommon for parents to return and find the colorful Christmas tree lying in a heap.instal position.

Belleville Fire Chief Leo Gohane, in issuing the Yuletide warning, points out that the Criminal Code of Canada forbids leaving a child alone in a house if it endangers life or health of any youngster under the age of 10 years.

When lying a tree, check branches for brittleness. A branch which can be broken, belongs to a dried up tree . . . unsafe in the home. Needles are also a good source to check for dryness. Once erected, wait 24 hours and then check the branches and needles again. A tree should be watered at the first critical point before erection, with not enough water continue to dry out, even when standing in water.

"Cheaper it is to purchase a new tree, than to lose family, children or home." Belleville's fire chief warns.

Several firms have placed fire-retardant chemicals spray on the market. Fire officials warn that these are substitutes for butt immersion and are not recommended.

Watchers Count 28 Birds

Twenty-eight species of birds were sighted Sunday by the Belleville Field Naturalists during their annual winter census of local fowl.

Despite blowing weather, between 30 and 40 members took part. Patrolling the area within a seven mile radius of city hall, the birdwatchers spotted such species as mowy owls, snowy owls, sparrowhawks, goldfinches, jays and juncoes.

The count is held at the end of each year by naturalists all over the North American continent. The results are published by the Audubon Society and provides invaluable information on bird migration and species survival.

Spring Breakup Will Determine Bayside Opening

Bayside Secondary's students will probably move into their new school in March, Hastings county board of education chairman announced today.

The students, now attending Trenton High School on an alternate day system, will continue at that school until after the winter holiday break.

The board held an on-site meeting with its architect and contractor yesterday to review progress on the $3.5-million school building.

"After a tour of the school, it was felt that the building should be substantially finished by the end of March and could be occupied by that time," announced chairman Donald Williams of Stirling.

However, the paving for the driveways for buses and the walks will not be completed, and if the spring breakup results in too much mud, occupancy will be delayed.

"If the place is a sea of mud in the spring, we won't take students through that into a new, carpeted school," said Bayside's principal L. D. Rosel.

In the meantime, satellite learning centres for Bayside students will be established by mid-January at CFB Trenton and in Frankford. Teams of teachers will go out to the satellite centres on Bayside's off days to give the students extra assistance.

For extra assistance about 120 to 200 of Trenton's students now attend classes at their school on the days Bayside occupies Trenton High School.

Bayside now has grades 9, 10 and 11 and will add grade 12 next September.

Despite the "difficult situation" of sharing the same school, neither student body has suffered unduly.

Failure rates in the Christmas exams were average for any high school — about 16 per cent. Bayside students achieved 11 per cent first class honors, again an average record.

The failure rate decreases in subsequent exams throughout the year, said Mr. Read.

Group discussion involves use of sign language at the Ontario School for the Deaf graduates and now key punch operators at Unemployment Insurance Commission computer centre. Connie Berry, 22, (left) gives advice to (clockwise) Marlene Joynson, Gayle Gaudreau and Linda Hart, all 20.

Authority Buys Old Mine Property

MARMORA (Special) — The old Gatling gold mine on the east side of the Moira River south of Highway 7 will be turned into a recreation area by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

Graham Bell, Marmora township's representative on the authority, told council that the 26 acres of land, also known as the Ackermaa property, had been acquired by the authority and would be turned into a year-round recreational area and park.

The old gold mine shaft will be restored as part of the park.

The site was once owned by C. J. Gatling, brother of the inventor of the multiple-firing Gatling gun, forerunner of the modern machine gun.

The mine was established in the spring of 1867, but the ore was found to have a high arsenic content, making the gold difficult to extract. Although some "excellent" gold was reported to have come from the mine, it was never a heavy producer.

Pedestrian Slips Under Transport

A pedestrian who watched a large transport truck approach him, is in serious condition in the intensive care ward of Belleville General Hospital today after slipping from the snowbank on which he was standing.

Austin Roy Gregory, 31, of 11 Bell Boulevard sustained multiple fractures, a broken left leg, crushed feet, broken pelvis and possible internal injuries when he fell beneath the wheels of a transport truck.

Driver of the Doyle's Wonder Bakeries truck, Harold McFarland, 26, of Kingston, told police "he fell in front of my vehicle".

The Kingston firm's driver, said Mr. Gregory was standing on a snowbank in front of Grant Motor Sales at the corner of North Front Street and Bell Boulevard at 7.38 p.m., when the accident occurred.

Two Youths Captured In Stakeout

PICTON (Staff) — Two youths were apprehended today in a police stakeout at the County Centre, Picton, and have been charged with break and entering.

Picton police chief George Pitt said this morning that charges have been laid against David Paul Dugay, 17, and Stephen Michael Rycroft, 17, both of the Globe Hotel, Picton.

The chief explained that the youths were apprehended by Constable George Wright as they entered the County Centre at 1:30 a.m. today. No further details were available.

Chief Pitt said break-ins at the centre have been reported on four occasions. On two occasions, persons have been apprehended in connection with the incidents.

Earlier this month a thief or thieves broke into the building and removed $169 in cash which had been left there.

Pin Marks 25 Years' Service To City

It's been a long three weeks for Raymond A. Reid, truck driver with the Belleville Public Works Department, who yesterday received a 25-year gold pin in recognition of his quarter century of service with the city.

The presentation was made by Mayor J. Russell Scott at the outset of Monday's council meeting.

Asked if he had anything to say, Mr. Reid told council that when he started with the works department 25 years ago he only intended the job to be temporary.

"I hired on only for three weeks, but that's been a long three weeks," he said.

Smallpox Vaccinations To Be Discontinued

Vaccination of children against smallpox-once obligatory — is being halted by the Hastings and Prince Edward Health Unit.

Instruction to halt routine vaccination programs was received yesterday from provincial health authorities, says counties' health officer Dr. C. R. Lenk.

The move apparently is part of an acceptance that smallpox has been eradicated in Europe and North America, he indicated.

As a result, the health unit will cease holding once-regular vaccination clinics and smallpox vaccinations no longer will be given by public health nurses to school students.

Dr. Lenk noted recent publicity — in Britain and elsewhere — suggests smallpox no longer exists as a threat in itself in the western world. The fact, the threat of the disease is so small there may be more risk in the vaccinations, he said.

However, international law still demands that all travellers be vaccinated, and the unit will still carry smallpox serum to service such a demand.

Also, vaccinations will be continued for persons working under certain risk conditions such as nurses and laboratory workers, Dr. Lenk said.

OSD Graduates Fill Key UIC Positions

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Writer

Communications is more than a matter of words — and for working gavel there's a quickly, operational quartet of girls at the Unemployment Insurance Commission regional office in Belleville.

Each day — or night, depending on shift assignments — the four report for a normal work round, a matter of satisfaction, not only for themselves, but also, apparently to UIC officials.

For the girls are Ontario School for the Deaf graduates, who, in spite of hearing handicaps are among the UIC's keypunch staff to the basement computer area and producing "excellent results," their employer says.

The four have been employed by the UIC varying lengths of time, depending on their graduation.

Connie Berry, 22, for instance, started work two years ago; Linda Hart, 20, has worked more than a year; Gayle Gaudreau and Marlene Johnson, both 20, have been working since last summer.

Co-operation is a keyword in the girls' success, says a commission spokesman. Although they had been taught key-operating as an OSD course, this was not a substitute for on-the-spot experience.

"Adjustment to a new job can create difficulties — (including) problems in communicating. But to an OSD graduate, this situation can be multiplied many times," said the official.

The UIC solved the problem by using a rotation, teaching method. Job assignments were preceded by practice sessions at the key-boards of machines which punch out information cards for the computer.

As each girl learned part of the operation she would explain it to the newcomer, and former school mate.

"In this way many of the initial doubts and misunderstandings were eliminated. They worked hard and they learned their job quickly," says the official.

As ongoing key figure among the four is Connie Berry. Since she not only has the most experience but also some hearing ability, she became a "valuable asset" in training and communicating — in sign language when necessary — to the other three, girls. She still helps verify work if problems arise for the girls.

Their employment was not exactly mere coincidence. The OSD had notified Canada Manpower it had trained key-punch operators available. When the UIC also told Manpower it needed operators for its computer centre, lines began to hum.

"As far as the commission is concerned there's no such thing as 'handicaps'," claimed the UIC official. "Anyone capable of a satisfactory job performance, can be hired by the UIC for steady employment."

Mrs. Binda Loadini, supervisor of the operators, was quoted as being "more than satisfied" with the work of the former OSD students.

Trenton Asks Investigation Of Sewage Plant Move

TRENTON (Staff) — Town officials here have asked the Ontario Water Resources Commission to examine the possibility of shutting down the present sewage treatment plant and adding a new treatment system elsewhere in the town.

Although the commission "was not receptive" to the idea, it will prepare a feasibility study on the option and present it at discussions to be held with the town in the new year.

OWRC had suggested during the summer that Trenton embark on an expansion program on an existing plant in Centennial Park already greatly overtaxed. However, the town is now hedging at this view point. The prospect additions to the plant would eat into valued acreage in and adjacent to Trenton's premier park.

Mayor Duncan McDonald estimates the expansion would consume about 600 feet of frontage along Bay Street and the enlarged treatment centre "longer exists as a threat in itself in the western world. In fact, the threat of the disease is so small there may be more risk in the vaccinations, he said.

However, international law still demands that all travellers be vaccinated, and the unit will still carry smallpox serum to service such a demand.

Also, vaccinations will be continued for persons working under certain risk conditions such as nurses and laboratory workers, Dr. Lenk said.

taxpayer would increase. It is doubtful that the existing plant would function, if decision is made to locate expansion elsewhere, says the mayor.

Although costs for a site study would be the price tag, possibility exists now that proposed expense to Trenton ratepayers for the expansion may be somewhat less than those originally discussed, if the enlarged centre accommodates the surrounding region. OWRC has agreed to review the cost in view of the area plant concept.

Meanwhile, Trenton has given up its objections to several aspects of the proposed additions, particularly those concerning size of the outfall pipe that will stream effluent into the Bay of Quinte and plans to implement tertiary (nutrient) removal of the town's sewage.

There is no resolve now among councillors on the question of expanding in the park or moving the entire operation to another location. As Mayor McDonald puts it, "it is hard to decide what to do until we get the costs."

Councillors Invited

Members of city council will be invited guests of the Belleville Kiwanis Club at the club's noon luncheon on Tuesday, December 28.

The club has declared the date as "civic day" and councillors will be invited to outline city proposals and prospects for 1972.

The invitation was extended by club president Gerald J. Brennan and endorsed by Alderman E. A. Orr who as Kiwanis club member passed along a personal invitation to council members.

Prince Edward Board Hears Pool Proposal

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — A delegation of four Rotarians belonging to the service club's swimming pool committee last night presented Prince Edward school trustees with "tentative proposal" later accepted in principle by board members for joining forces to provide a community pool.

Robert Charlebois, chairman of the Rotary Club's pool committee stated in a letter to the board that "the proposal is to the effect that we will present to our complete club the concept of donating a swimming pool to the board of education if the board, in their part, will investigate providing accommodation for such a pool".

Trustees heard Mr. Charlebois' presentation then passed a motion to accept the proposal in principle and to investigate possible accommodation for a pool.

Accompanied at last night's school board meeting by Rotarians Milton Fennell, Clifford McKaigle and Hayard Mallett, Mr. Charlebois referred to the project as "quite an undertaking".

Director of education John McNeil, who is an advisee to the school board's committee, added that when two organized groups discuss co-operation "there is always the matter of procedure".

At the weekend meeting, representatives of the Picton Rotary Club and the Prince Edward board of education discussed "procedure", the cost of the pool and change areas and the cost of a pool covering.

Mr. Charlebois said last night in his address to trustees that the club would insist the pool would be used by the public after school hours.

He suggested that it would be ideal if all students could learn to swim before graduating from school.

The Rotarian stressed that he could not state how much financial support his club might extend toward the proposal if it receives initial approval from the membership.

He quoted approximate cost figures of $40,000 for a pool, $24,000 for change rooms and $60,000 for a building.

"Could you or will you accept a pool built outdoors and in such a fashion that it can be roofed over later perhaps the pool were raised through the combined efforts of several service clubs there, among them the Rotary Club.

Still A Problem

Right on schedule, with the weekend's snowfall, came the snowmobilers. And whether it was because they had had to wait so long for the action this year we don't know, but there was blatant disregard in many instances for their own and the public's safety as well as for recent federal government recommendations. We refer to the operation of snowmobiles on public roads, including county routes. Here, on what normally are quiet rural tracks, snowmobilers were to be found at top-rodding their machines back and forth at speeds of up to 60 mph. Local municipalities, as well as the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward should not be so lenient in this regard. As it is however, it seems as long as you have a licence and are over 16 there is nothing to prevent snowmobiles being run on the road.

It is clear that some members of the snowmobile fraternity are still infants when it comes to knowing what is right and proper in the conduct of this fledgling sport, despite the record of death and injury, despite the warnings of damage to property and the environment at large, despite the fact of some three years of maturing (but obviously still far short of full maturity in owner behavior), and despite legitimate public outcry.

We are fully aware that snowmobiling is here to stay, and that the sport has done much for the economy, but it is high time that the regulations governing its operation were made strict enough to forbid operation on public roads and in built-up areas (including rural communities) where both noise and reckless operation are irritating, hazardous, and show lack of consideration for others.

Stud Holdouts

Twenty-six residents of Red Lake in northwestern Ontario, including a doctor, have been given two weeks by Judge J. V. Fregeau to have studs removed from their tires in accordance with the province's ban.

We sympathize with these people, especially after Friday night's sudden snowstorm in this area which is reported to have resulted in a rash of minor accidents here and in neighboring communities. Until the sand trucks get their work done — and there can be a serious time lag in this regard — road surfaces can be extremely dangerous.

Even Judge Fregeau, while saying the law must be enforced, had to admit he would have liked to have had studded tires for his drive over an icy road from Kenora to Red Lake.

Incidentally the doctor in the case, Dr. Michael Gloster, is chairman of a group called the Citizens' Committee for Studded Tires. He says he is prepared to go to jail rather than pay a fine. Again we can understand his feelings but think he is only biting off his nose to spite his face. He would be better off going along with the law in this regard — or move to Florida!

War's Aftermath

Although official orders apparently were given that Hindu intellectuals in East Pakistan, now Bangla Desh, scores are reported to have been killed in this manner. They include local militiamen alleged to have committed murder, rape and looting under Pakistani command. The slow torture killing of four of these, by bayonet, as described in a report from Dacca, is a measure of the brutality that invariably follows warfare in that part of the world. And we are not ignoring the fact that the victims by their own conduct earlier, were inviting such reprisals. In addition there was the discovery of several hundred bodies of professionals — doctors, university professors and students — intellectuals who could have helped build up the new nation. This too is a reflection of the appalling ruthlessness and bestiality of many of the soldiery in this situation.

Like It Is

This is the way it is in Northern Ireland just now, as told (initials for names): "We are living here — just G — and I — (directors of large department store on Royal Avenue, Belfast's main downtown thoroughfare) are finding the trend of business increasingly difficult to operate. They have cut down on staff and expenditure etc. One just hopes . . ".

Another writes: ". . . in some ways life is surprisingly normal, in other ways abnormal. For instance, there is very little social life in the evenings and even a simple pleasure like meeting a friend for coffee in town is a fairly dangerous ploy. The whole thing is very depressing, but I shudder to think . . (an acquaintance) continues to work too hard trying to keep the business going in the Lower Falls. We wish he were somewhere else. . ."

Transport's Gardens Cost $75,000 A Year

The Bureaucracy's Work-Oriented Transport Environment

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Did you know that the Department of Transport had its own staff of "office gardeners"?

To water, fertilizer — feed, prune and attend to all the other aspects of grooming and nurturing that go into the care and cultivation of tropical plants?

Keeping four and five men busy on the weekend?

All in the interest of creating what, the bureaucracy tells Parliament, is "a pleasant, healthful, work-oriented environment?"

Well, that is the way it is in Transport, and the way it is going to be in Information Canada, Finance, Environment Canada (the trendy new name for the Old Fisheries and Forestry Department) and all the other federal boards, bureaux, commissions and assorted agencies setting up government shop in the National Capital's ever-thickening forest of gleaming glass-and-stainless-steel high-rise office towers.

Each will have its very own "pleasant, healthful, work-oriented environment" — more than that way by tropical gardens, each one nurtured by its own staff of gardeners.

So what is it, going cost you ask.

For starters, since the figures are in only for the Transport Department's "office gardens," some $75,000 a year for each federal agency that works amid the splashy color and heady perfume of such tropical plants as hibiscus, oleander, palm and other exotic growth such as Florida and the islands of the Caribbean.

Okay, so Transport goes in the way the federal government spends it, $75,000 is peanuts, what?

Peanuts perhaps, except that it is not the share of the $71,000 taxpayers get in foreign instead a few of Sydney's 23,000 vestment income.

Or, to name more than one-third of the $222,000 income that a dozen of the 15,254 taxpayers in Belleville derive from farming and fishing.

Just another half of the $143,000 rental income enjoyed by a portion, of St. Thomas' 14,394 taxpayers.

So while it may be nothing to those who tax and spend — and the figures quoted here come from the National Revenue's latest "Green Book" — it is to pays what and where "... a sum of $75,000 is something to almost any and all taxpayers.

By the time all the departments moving into their new high-rise towers are properly and tropically "landscaped," the bill could easily read a half million dollars or more.

The shrubs, flowers, vines and dwarf trees.

What is it all about?

Well, nobody was saying much about it — certainly not the government until it had a rationalize it.

Turned out the tropical setting for government offices was all in the name of what federal House of Commons Estimates Committees stumbled across.

Then plenty was said.

Parliamentarians, especially those in the Opposition, saw it as just another instance of government extravagance.

Small, at $75,000 per department, but symbolic.

Liberal parliamentarians, who have no room in their cramped offices for tropical greenery, and even if they had space would have to pay out of their own pockets for it, were quietly disturbed, secretly envious and perhaps resentful of the civil service in its "pleasant, healthful work-oriented environment."

Even the government felt compelled to speak up — and explain — with Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, the cabinet's number-one, fingered to

Scholars Baffled by References to Jesus' Existence Before Birth

This is the second article in a five-part Christmas series about the Incarnation. It deals with one of the most baffling concepts concerning Jesus, His pre-existence before His birth in Bethlehem.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

"Before Abraham was, I am," He once said.

It was a shocking contention, and still is, for Him to put His origins back thousands of years before His birth in the flesh, even before the earliest patriarch of Jewish antiquity.

Incensed at the claim, opponents sought to stone Him, as they often did, but He eluded them temporarily.

Although Bible experts disagree about whether such statements of Jesus reported in the gospel of John are precise quotations or interpretive paraphrases, the same enigmatic antecedence is ascribed to Him repeatedly in other New Testament books.

The concept "proclaims the centrality of Christ in the whole universe," says Bible scholar G. Preston MacLeod.

The primogenital, comprehensive view of Jesus Christ, termed "Christology" by theologians, is not tied to physiological process, but to the purpose behind it; the existential objective.

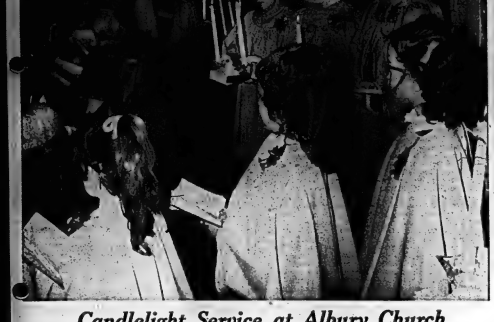
It sees Jesus' earthly life as incorporating an infinite dynamism imbued in all creation, in every atom, idea and desire, for its authentic growth toward fulfillment, which He actualized, within time, and prefigures for others.

"Behold, I make all things new," comes His promise in the visionary Book of Revelation. "I am the Alpha and the Omega, the First and the Last, the Beginning and the End."

This blurring of time is characteristic of the Bible, which takes an almost Einsteinian view of historical sequence as merely relative, as if past, present and future actually are bound together in the eternal whole.

Descriptions of God's will or acts are presented as if applicable both before and since, a continuous activity beckoning toward a further goal, glimpsed by men only momentarily as it breaks in from the beyond.

Christ appears as the "centre or focal point toward whom and from whom all being flows," says Catholic theologian George E. Mahoney. "He becomes the goal toward whom the whole cosmos is moving."



In that sense, He gives history its meaning, which was in it unseen from the outset.

The most familiar portrayal of this aspect of Christ, the prologue of John's gospel, says:

"In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God . . . All things were made through Him and without Him was not anything made. In Him was life, and the life was the light of men."

In John's account, the analytical elaborations distinguish it from the straight narrative action of the other gospels. It uses the Greek term, "Logos" or "word and thought are to man."

Repeatedly in the oldest scriptural book, Genesis, the

Candlelight Service at Albury Church

Churchgoers of all ages shared the Christmas spirit in abundance in the United Church charge in Ameliasburg township over the weekend. The special candlelight service in Albury Church on Sunday evening attracted a good turnout in spite of the weather while the Christmas party for Sunday school children was a big success as well. The church's senior and junior choirs provided seasonal music for the worship service.

Project 500 to Hire At Least 11 Youths

At least 11 area youths will be employed by agencies in the city as a result of funds made available by the provincial government through Project 500.

Working with government agencies in various municipalities, the Ontario government has made available sufficient funds to employ 500 youths for a 17-week period during the winter months.

"The project is selective in the sense that applicants must have at least grade 12 education and preferably grade 13," said Frank Noble spokesman for the Department of Social and Family Services.

Mr. Noble's department is acting as liaison between the city and the governmental offices for the project.

Applicants for the program are first screened by the Department of Social and Family Services and then routed to agencies where they would best be suited.

"There is no use sending someone who is interested in working with young people to the Hastings Manor," said Mr. Noble.

It is then up to the individual agencies to make the final decision between the four to six screened applicants they will meet.

Among the agencies participating in the program are Belleville recreation centre, City of Belleville Music pal Day Nursery and the Hastings Manor.

"Final word should be available the coming week on successful applicants," said Mr. Noble.

Before any work is started by the youths, they will be taken to Ottawa for a training session in the field in which they will be working.

Expenses for the trip will be covered by the Ontario government, including food and lodging.

If all runs to schedule, the group will begin work in early January.

Postal Schedule Announced

Postal workers — those frantic folk who make the Christmas season so much more enjoyable — will have a chance to recuperate over the holiday period.

The post office today announced its local service schedule for the next three weeks and depending on their capacities, employees could have as many as five days off to relax after the busiest month of the year.

There will be no delivery of city or rural mail December 25, 27 and 28 or Jan. 1 and 3.

In addition, street letter box collections will stop Christmas and New Year's Day, although pickups will be made Dec. 27, 28 and Jan. 3, following the Sunday schedule.

Postal wickets will be closed Dec. 25, 27 and Jan. 1. Windows will be open from 8 a.m. to 12 noon Dec. 28.

The lock box lobby will remain open for 24-hour service.

Special delivery service will also shut down the 25th and 27th of this month and the 1st of January.

"Word," for the energizing projection of God's will, is active expression in the universe, its creative work.

"And the Word became flesh and dwelt among us."

In that perspective, the Christmas event is not just an isolated occurrence, but the entry into human history of a life that both animates the entire process and presages its ultimate future.

In connection with Jesus' sayings that, in essence, He preceded and was known to Abraham, there are Jewish Scriptural allusions to the ancient papers rejoicing that God dispensed through him would bless all generations.

Scattered throughout the Jewish scriptures, which Christians call the Old Testament, are other intriguing passages alluding to a co-acting faculty in good functioning to create, reconcile and draw life to Him.

"Peer into the dim past as far as you may, you will never come on God alone," writes Scotch theologian Arthur J. Gossip. "Always there has been Another with Him, who is to God what a man's

Secretaries' Party Held

The Quinte Medical Secretaries Association held its Christmas party on Wednesday, December 8 at the Four Seasons Motel when Mrs. Eileen Conley, vice-president, welcomed the guests on behalf of the president, Mrs. Diana Maxwell.

Each medical secretary brought a gift with her to be given to an adult. These gifts are presented to the Canadian Mental Health Association for wrapping and distribution to patients under their care.

Gifts were also presented to Mrs. Cousins and her assistant for their help at regular meetings at Education Hall. A special thank-you was accorded to Mrs. Jacqueline Vivian and her committee whose efforts made this a most enjoyable evening.

Prior to the party, a bake sale was held at 322 Front St. A special thank-you was expressed to Peter Zamaris for the use of these premises.

The next regular meeting will be held at Trenton Memorial Hospital on January 12, 1972 at 8 p.m. when the guest speaker will be Dr. T. G. Watts.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson

Couple Mark 60th Anniversary

"It was a Sunday and the weather was just beautiful" said Mrs. Isaac Stephenson of 105 Great St. James, speaking of her wedding day 60 years ago on December 24, 1911. Surrounded by cards and flowers which had arrived the previous day in time for the anniversary celebration held at their home, Mrs. Stephenson who will be 80 on January 1 and her husband, who will soon celebrate his 88th birthday reminisced about their wedding in Lancaster, England.

Mrs. Stephenson remarked with a smile that being married on Christmas eve in England did not pose the weather problems the same day might have done in Canada as the winter there is relatively mild. Soon after their marriage, Mrs. Stephenson (nee Maria Clark) and her husband came to Canada in 1913 and have lived in Belleville for over 50 years.

On Sunday their daughter Jeane hosted an informal get-together of relatives and friends in honor of her parent's wedding anniversary. About 50 guests gathered to offer the couple congratulations and best wishes. The anniversary cake was in the shape of a yule log. Congratulatory messages were received from the Queen, Prime Minister Trudeau, William Davis, Robert Stanfield and Mayor Dr. Russell Sorry. also a plaque from the government of Ontario. Belleville Lodge 132, of which Mr. Stephenson is a member presented him with a pot of poinsettias and Mrs. Stephenson with a beautiful orchid corsage.

The Stephenson's have one daughter Jeane who lives at home with them and several sons. Bill of Sault Ste. Marie, Isaac of Toronto, Tom of Belleville and the late Robert James and John Clark. They have eight grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Earlier this year, in September the family enjoyed a reunion at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel to fete heir parents on the forthcoming anniversary. This dinner party was hosted by Sam Goodman.

"Our children have been wonderful and we can't praise them enough" said Mrs. Stephenson in her pleasant voice which still has traces of a Lancashire accent.

Serenely happy the Stephenson lead a quiet but full life. Mr. Stephenson is a past master of Belleville Lodge 132 and past principal of Quinte Friendship Chapter. He has initiated four sons into the Masonic Lodge. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stephenson are charter members of Belleville chapter 55, OES and belong to Victoria Avenue Baptist Church where they were formerly active in church work. Mrs. Stephenson is an avid reader and loves reading on many subjects especially politics.

Their home has a gay, "open house" atmosphere about it and Jeane Stephenson said her parents would be happy to see friends and relatives throughout this week.

Sunday School Children Enjoy Supper, Party

The Christmas story was told by Mrs. Everett Barrons and Christmas customs in European countries explained by the senior teens.

A reading and children's carols were led by Mrs. Walter Potts.

Women of the World

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With or without the efforts of Women's Lib, female heroines were widening in many parts of the world as 1972 approached.

A courageous British girl became the first woman to sail the Atlantic solo, two women in Hong Kong were admitted to the hitherto all-male Anglican priesthood, and Switzerland at last gave women the vote and elected its first female MP.

Canada's Margaret Sinclair accomplished the unexpected feat of toppling Prime Minister Trudeau from his bachelor pedestal: Their March 4 wedding in North Vancouver was the year's best-kept secret.

Northern Ireland's peppery Bernadette Devlin gave birth to a daughter, refused to name the father and plunged back with scarcely a pause into the turmoil of Ulster politics.

Lady Amalia Fleming, Greek-born widow of the discoverer of penicillin, defied Greece's right-wing military government by taking part in an abortive plan to free a man jailed for an assassination attempt.

Sentenced first to jail, then deported from Greece and deprived of her Greek passport she had dual Anglo-Greek nationality—the 51-year-old widow vowed she would, if necessary, walk back to Greece through Albania.

Symbolic of a new adventurous spirit in 1971 was Nicolette (Nicky) Milnes-Walker, 25-year-old psychology graduate from Cheshire, England, who made her daily odyssey from Wales to Rhode Island in a 30-foot glass-fibre sloop—mostly in the nude, she later let drop.

Of her epic voyage, when she was threatened by whales among other hazards, Surgeon's daughter Nicky said: "I think women are more suited to this sort of thing than men.

"Men are designed for quick and immediate reactions, whereas women are much more able to withstand adverse conditions. They have better stamina and are better able to deal with physical strain."

Women's Lib made strides during the year, gaining attention with the writings of America's Gloria Steinem in New York and Germaine Greer in Britain. The movement spread even in conservative southern Ireland, producing a piquant encounter with embarrassed Dublin customs officers when a group of Libbers returned from a trip to Belfast flaunting scores of contraceptives—banned in the predominantly Roman Catholic Republic of Ireland.

In embattled Northern Ireland, however, women took on a sinister role as bitterness swelled against British troops trying to flush out nationalist guerrillas in the Celtic ghetto areas. The world was shocked when mobs of Londonderry housewives attacked teen-age girls who were dating British soldiers, shaved their heads and-poured tar or paint over them.

Among the veterans, mystery queen Agatha Christie published her 80th book on her 80th birthday and saw her marathon thriller The Mousetrap enter its 20th straight year on London's West End stage.

At the other end of the age scale, Australia's pert, grace-ful Evonne Goolagong, 19, became the first of her Aboriginal race to capture the Wimbledon women's tennis championship.

Another female first was chalked up by British-born Prof. Margaret Burbidge, one of the world's leading optical astronomers, who was appointed first woman director of the Royal Greenwich Observatory.

The world's two leading women politicians—India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and Israel's Premier Golda Meir—continued to preside over their countries' precarious destinies. Mrs. Gandhi, touring Europe to promote awareness of India's position in the Pakistan confrontation, described her job as sitting on a hot volcano.

Two outspoken American matrons received the year's prize male retorts. Martha Mitchell, wife of the U.S. attorney-general, recalling how she refused an invitation to the Queen at a London reception, was advised by the American-born Earl of Lindsay in a letter to remain at home in Kalamazoo until she learned how to behave in polite society.

And New York's gravel-tongued Congresswoman Bella Abzug was described by author Norman Mailer as having a voice that could boil the fat off a taxi-driver's neck.

Christmas Past Was Religious Holiday

By DORIS CLARK

Christmas, as we know it, is an observance made possible by the abundance of manufactured goods and belongs to this century. However, for the first settlers this was a religious holiday marked by as lavish a dinner as their winter supplies would allow and the retention of such homeland customs as decorating with greens and the ritual of the yule log.

It was not until the mid-century that Christmas began to be a special occasion with a decorated tree and gifts, both of which were reserved for children only. . .

Although in many areas goose or roast pork was the main dish at Christmas dinner, the turkey soon became a favorite, and in the days before the holiday there were many shooting - matches.

Pigeons were released from traps and whoever killed the most won a turkey. The food markets were lavish, — thus Abrahamson, in God - Bless Our Home (Domestic Life in Nineteenth Century Canada)

Dear Doris: I believe there are two generations that need us today: Our youth and our aged. There seems to be quite a stir to do something for our youth and rightly so, but I do feel our older folk are a forgotten generation. If we let those years slip, we thus touch our youth and some day, if God leaves us here long enough, youth will graduate into the forgotten generation.

Our group of ladies plan to do something about it. We do need information and ideas so we can do it well. You mentioned a leaflet about games, inspirational, and things one could do to bring cheer to long-lonely days. — Someone Cares.

Dear Someone: Age and loneliness and boredom do seem to go hand in hand.

Medical science has given us an added 20 or 25 healthy years — time for a whole new career. The pace has to be slower, the choice related to the individual's special best. The elderly healthy person usually wants, not to be entertained, but to be useful.

There are volunteer bureaus where this kind of activity and counselling is excellently done. An experienced nurse is not pushed into a car-driving routine; nor is a car-driver given a typing job.

The key is to see this time of life as one filled with tremendous new opportunities — tasks youth would be frightened to tackle but which age takes on with serenity and eagerness.

Your best lead is for representatives from your group to visit your local social planning council or other volunteer - organized facility.

Do you feel as if nobody wants you anyway? Then believe me, not yourself, and make that first bold move. There's no telling what adventures you may begin. But do tell us, when they happen.

Think what they might do for some other reader's courage.

Ann Landers

Body Not Removed for Hours

Dear Ann Landers: If this did not happen to me I would not have believed it. I am sending my name and address and you can check out the facts with the newspaper if you like.

My father-in-law was admitted to the hospital last week for a routine physical examination. He was put in a room with two very old men.

One of the patients died at 1:15 p.m. on Friday. My husband and I were in the room at the time. The nurses pulled a sheet over him and left.

That evening at about 7:30 p.m. I called my father-in-law to ask what time we should come and take him home the following day. He said "as soon after breakfast as possible. I'd like to get out of here." I asked him what was wrong. He replied "the poor fellow who died this afternoon is still in the room."

Ann, they didn't wheel the dead man out until 8:30 that evening. It had been a county hospital where they don't have time to attend the living, much less the dead, I could understand it. But in a private place I cannot grasp the meaning of the whole thing. Please explain it. Our entire family is baffled.— California Reader

Dear Cal: It shouldn't happen anywhere-public or private, for rich or poor. But according to the physicians with whom I discussed this macabre incident, where hospitals are concerned these days, anything is possible —and it is becoming more so every year.

Dear Ann Landers: I swear every word of this is true. I am 25 and have been dating a man of 26 for over a year. I always thought it was odd that he never expected me to go beyond a goodnight kiss. Last night he asked me to marry him but said I'd have to sign an agreement —no sex. I asked him why and he said "I tried it once and I don't like it."

This man is good looking, intelligent, has a promising career and we get along well together. I think we could have a successful marriage, but I am bothered by his request. Do you think I will be able to get him to change his mind after we are married? Help, me, decide.—Bewildered

Dear B.: This guy has strudel in the noodle. If you agree to a sexless marriage in the hope that you can convert him later, you deserve whatever you get—which, I assure you, will be very little in the line of romance.

Dear Ann Landers: I have two lousy sisters and one rotten brother—My younger sister carried on an affair with my husband behind my back. He finally asked for a divorce and married her. He supports her children by a previous marriage and ignores his own.

My older sister is an alcoholic and has the warmth of a crocodile and the character of a snake. When I was out of the house she drove our 82-year-old, slightly senile mother to a lawyer's office and got her to sign over everything. I was so mad I hired an attorney. He sent a constable - to my sister's. She was afraid of the consequences so she returned my mother's money.

Of course my sister is mad at me and says that when Ma dies she is coming to the funeral if rules such a stink I will never live it down. Ma is talking fast and I need to know if there's any way I can keep my sister out?—Worried

Dear Worried: You can ask that a policeman be present. If your sister "disturbs the peace" you can have her removed.

Variety Show by Pupils

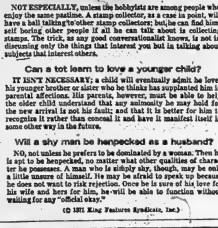
Christmas decorations created by the students adorned the halls of Kentz school in Ameliasburg and a Christmas tree bearing only hand-made trimmings blossomed outside the gymnasium doors for the Christmas concert presented by students on Thursday night.

The variety show included plays and group singing by students from grades one to eight. The junior and senior choirs under the direction of Mrs. Groom entertained with the selections recently broadcast on CJBQ. Mrs. Faulkner assisted Mrs. Groom with piano accompaniment during the concert.

One of the three plays was presented in both French and English and a skit was written and produced by the students. The program was well received by the standing room-only audience which filled the gymnasium and overflowed into the corridor.

Entire-School Presentation

The Home and School Association of Queen Victoria Public School announced its Christmas pageant at the school on December 14 with the entire student body participating in some capacity. The students co - operated in acting, preparing programs and decorating the hall, making the entire project a combined effort of the student body.



Principal Don Lockyer introduced the pageant which he explained was a creative drama production and was done in an entirely spontaneous manner without a script.

The pageant consisted of readings and four scenes which gave free play to the imagination of the actors. The staff and audience pronounced it a great success.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Are hobbyists good conversationalists?

NOT ESPECIALLY, unless the hobbyists are among people who enjoy the same pastime. A stamp collector, as a case in point, will have a ball talking to other stamp collectors; but he can find himself boring other people if all he can talk about is collecting stamps. The trick, as any good conversationalist knows, is not in discussing only the things that interest you but in talking about subjects that interest others.

Can a tot learn to love a younger child?

IT ISN'T NECESSARY; a child will eventually admit he loves his younger brother or sister who he thinks has supplanted him in parental affections. His parents, however, must be able to help the older child understand that any animosity he may hold for the new arrival is not his fault; and that it is better for him to recognize it rather than conceal it and have it manifest itself in some other way in the future.

Will a shy man be henpecked as a husband?

NO, not unless he prefers to be dominated by a woman. Then he is apt to be henpecked, no matter what other qualities of character he possesses. A man who is simply shy, though, may be only a little unsure of himself. He may be afraid to speak up because he does not want to risk rejection. Once he is sure of his love for his wife and hers for him, he will be able to function without waiting for any "official okay."

Diefenbaker Told Appeals Of Pen Sentences Unlikely

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker, saying there is "aroused public opinion" about light sentences for convict killings at Kingston penitentiary, was told Monday that no appeal of the sentences is likely.

Mr. Diefenbaker, former Conservative prime minister and a long-time defence lawyer, raised in the Commons Monday the issue of a four-day riot at the Kingston institution last April in which two prisoners were killed by fellow convicts.

"Normally I do not believe in harsh sentences," Mr. Diefenbaker said.

But in this case, "there are fears in various penitentiaries across Canada that the sentences are so light as to constitute an invitation on the part of inmates to follow along the same course taken by those in Kingston." Mr. Diefenbaker said.

He asked Justice Minister John Turner whether there has been communication with the Ontario attorney-general's department to suggest that appeals should be lodged against the sentences because judges do make mistakes.

Mr. Turner said the responsibility rests with Ontario Attorney-General Allan Lawrence. But he understood there had been communication between federal Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer and the Ontario department about the Kingston riot and the Ontario minister "does not intend to appeal."

Thirteen Kingston prisoners were charged with non-capital murder after the April riot and the killing of the two prisoners. As their trials were under way, 12 men pleaded guilty to the reduced charge of manslaughter and the other pleaded guilty to an even lesser charge of causing bodily harm.

Sentences ranged from 20 months to 12 years. Five of the sentences were consecutive while the others were concurrent.

Mr. Diefenbaker described the situation where the slain prisoners were tortured before death, as one including "murder and unspeakable cruelty."

The former Conservative leader also joined in questioning of Mr. Turner about what is to happen at the expiration of the five-year trial period for abolition of capital punishment in Canada, which expires Dec. 29, 1972.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked what the government will do to meet the "serious situation" resulting from the number of police officers or prison personnel killed in the last 18 months. The trial law abolished execution for all but those convicted of murder of police or prison guards on duty.

Mr. Turner said the whole question of capital punishment will have to be reviewed by the government and Parliament before the end of the trial abolition period.

And in a written return for Gerard Laprise (Social Credit-Labelle), the government said 15 policemen or prison guards were murdered or killed by criminal action since 1967, when the trial period started, and there have been no executions.

Fifteen persons had been convicted, one of them still under sentence of execution. The death sentence had been commuted for three others and the rest had been sentenced on lesser charges.

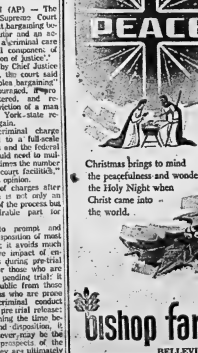
Sentence Bargaining Defended



WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court said Monday that bargaining between a prosecutor and an accused person in a criminal case "is an essential component of the administration of justice".

In an opinion by Chief Justice Warren Burger, the court said so-called "plea bargaining" should be encouraged, "properly administered, and reversed the conviction of a man who said New York state reneged on a bargain.

"If every criminal charge were subjected to a full-scale trial, the states and the federal government would need to multiply many times the number of judges and court facilities," said the court's opinion.

"Disposition of charges after plea discussion is not only an essential part of the process but a highly desirable part for many reasons.

"It leads to prompt and largely final disposition of most criminal cases; it avoids much of the corrosive impact of enforced idleness during pre-trial confinement for those who are denied release pending trial; it protects the public from those accused persons who are prone to continue criminal conduct even while on trial; it relieves, and by shortening the time between trial and disposition, it enhances whatever may be the rehabilitative prospects of the guilty when they are ultimately imprisoned."

Christmas brings to mind the peacefulness and wonder of the Holy Night when Christ came into the world.

Mississauga Mayor Gets New Heart

TORONTO (CP) — Mississauga Mayor Robert Speck received a new heart Monday in a transplant operation described as successful by hospital officials.

"His blood pressure is normal and the heart has been beating on its own since a little after 5 o'clock," a representative of St. Michael's Hospital said.

The three-hour operation, which ended at 1:30 p.m., was done by a team under the direction of Dr. Clare Baker.

The heart was taken from the body of Richard Wokiewicz who died Monday morning.

The boy, who would have been 15 today, was severely injured Friday when he leaned forward from a subway platform and was struck by a train.

His kidneys were removed for transplants in Toronto General Hospital and at a Cleveland hospital.

Mr. Speck, 56, has had heart trouble for some years. He was in hospital when he won his second term as mayor of the west Toronto suburb on Dec. 30, 1970. He was unopposed in that election.

Since suffering his third heart attack last Jan. 14, he spent nine of the last 12 months ill or convalescing, and was admitted to St. Michael's again Sept. 30.

The transplant was at least the 77th in Canada. Two of the patients survive: Charles Perrin Johnston, a retired accountant, and Rev. Edward P. Madigan, a Roman Catholic priest.

Mr. Johnston has had his replacement heart for just over three years and Father Madigan for about 1¼ years. Both men are from Toronto and both operations were performed at St. Michael's.

Mr. Johnston has been in St. Michael's since Nov. 16 with chest trouble. Details of his illness have not been disclosed, but the hospital has said his heart is fine.

Here are the sites of the other Canadian heart transplants:

—Nine at the Montreal Heart Institute, including the first, on May 31, 1968. That patient, a retired Montreal butcher named Albert Murphy, died 46 hours after the operation.

—One at Montreal's Royal Victoria Hospital.

—Three at Toronto Western Hospital.

—One at Toronto General Hospital.

Mr. Speck's duties as mayor have been assumed by Reeve Charles Murray; Early in 1968, when Mr. Speck returned from an illness, the town passed a bylaw making the reeve acting mayor automatically in the absence of the mayor.

Apartment Building Ordered Torn Down

OTTAWA (CP) — A partially-completed luxury apartment building on the western outskirts of Hull, Que., must be torn down within six months, the Supreme Court of Canada ordered Monday.

The court order, sought by a group of property owners in the area on grounds that the area was zoned for single-family bonnes, appears to spell the death knell for a planned $12-million project by Dasken Enterprises of Montreal.

"What a lovely Christmas present," said Mrs. Renee Joyal Brossard, one of the property owners who took the action.

Hull Mayor Marcel D'Amour said the court judgment is "a major setback in the development of the municipality."

It is believed the city will attempt to have the Quebec legislature pass a private bill authorizing the project.

Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon, who wrote the majority court judgment, found that the high-rise buildings contravenes the city's zoning bylaw.

The partly-completed building, valued at about $1 million, must come down and the 11-acre site must be restored to its former grassy condition.

Photos of Executions Banned

CALCUTTA (AP) — Indian military authorities told The Associated Press Monday that five radiophotos depicting the executions of suspected East Pakistani collaborators in Dacca could not be transmitted because they were detrimental to "the national interests."

The photos were part of an 11-picture series on the killings. The other six were transmitted.

A senior officer of the Overseas Communication Service, the government agency which transmits radiophotos abroad, informed the AP of the decision after the news agency asked government offices in New Delhi and Calcutta to have the pictures radioed to the AP's regional picture headquarters in London.

The film of the public execution, which took place Saturday, was brought back to Calcutta Sunday and processed here because radiophoto transmission facilities have not been restored in the former East Pakistan capital.

The photos from the execution and a Bangla Desh political rally that preceded it were submitted for transmission Sunday night in Calcutta.

The five pictures officials refused to transmit included:

—A self-styled Mukti Bahini rebel general, Abdul Kader Siddiqui, stabbing one victim who was on top of another victim. In the background was a third man who was stabbed previously.

—A little boy, who tried to reach one of the victims, being stomped on by a Mukti Bahini soldier. The crying boy was believed to be a relative of the dying victim shown in the picture.

The six pictures transmitted included scenes of the Mukti Bahini soldiers and intended victims praying at a rally before the executions, a laughing torturer beating one of the victims, a prisoner pleading for mercy as Mukti Bahini soldiers pounced on him with fists and rifle butts, a Mukti Bahini leader preparing to press a burning cigarette into the face of a victim, and a Mukti Bahini soldier kicking a victim.

An engineer at Honeywell's Marine System Center at Seattle checks one of the digital circuit cards for a data logger that the University of California at San Diego will use as part of an ocean-bottom study for seismic activity. The tape deck, (foreground), and low-power electronic package are to be placed at depths ranging to 20,000 feet by Scripps Institute scientists to monitor earth surface activity for the first time in deep-ocean environment. Senators Give Tax Bill Day's Committee Study

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate banking committee, expressing confidence that a soft sell will work on the government, has returned the big government tax bill to the Senate without the amendments Liberals had feared would delay implementation beyond the Jan. 1 target.

The report of the committee to the Senate today, after its one-day study Monday, makes it probable the Senate will pass the bill by Thursday or noon, permitting enactment by New Year's.

The Liberal majority on the Senate committee rejected the idea of adding amendments. Monday after Finance Minister E. J. Benson indicated he was sympathetic to the changes proposed by the committee in reports during the fall.

The committee held a series of hearings on the bill while it was in the Commons.

He said some of the amendments would be considered for inclusion in an amending bill that would be introduced in the Commons in "a matter of months."

The decision by the committee was important because any changes would have had to be approved by the Commons—which could have taken days or weeks.

Government Senate Leader Paul Martin told the committee that recommendations — not limiting amendments — would be the most effective way of changing the bill.

Recommendations listed as top priority by the committee involve provisions dealing with foreign income by Canadian firms, profit-sharing plans, investments by non-residents and the mechanism for applying the proposed capital gains tax.

Mr. Benson has said he will propose amendments on profit-sharing plans in January.

In its report to the Senate, the committee added a recommendation for changes in handling undistributed corporate income and in the power the revenue minister would have in giving advance rulings on certain corporate tax questions.

By rejecting amendments — and in the report itself — the committee avoided the issue of the Senate's constitutional right to make changes in a tax bill that would impose a cost on the treasury.

Benson Welcomed as Hero

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson was given a town's welcome by Liberal MPs Monday as he returned to the Commons from the Washington international monetary talks and predicted that the "Canadian economy will move forward with even greater vigor."

Obviously enthusiastic about the monetary agreement, designed to defuse a world monetary crisis, Mr. Benson said it will permit the United States economy to expand again, and "when the U.S. prospers, Canada prospers also."

Removal of the U.S. surcharge against imports will assist Canada's economy, he said, and the appreciation of other currencies will help this country's competitive position. The agreement would also restore economic confidence and encourage greater production and investment in Canada.

There were shouts of approval from Liberal back-benchers when Mr. Benson said "there is no doubt that the meeting two weeks ago between our prime minister and President Nixon contributed to the satisfactory outcome from the point of view of Canada."

Enthusiasm for the Washington agreement was not as unqualified on the opposition side. Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he was left in a state of "hopeful skepticism," since many questions were unanswered.

John Burton (NDP—Regina East), speaking on behalf of his party, also said there were many explanations to come before a final judgment could be made.

Both men wanted to know what concessions Canada had made or will make to the U.S. in return for a continued floating of the Canadian dollar. The U.S. told the conference it will devalue its own currency by about 8% per cent.

Mr. Benson said no concessions had been made. If such concessions were made later, Canada would expect corresponding concessions from the U.S.

Mr. Benson told reporters later that the trade issues being discussed by the two countries are not major ones. Asked about the Canada-U.S. agreement on Canadian safeguards, he said these could not be considered of major importance since they date back to 1964.

C of C Annoys Basford

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian Chamber of Commerce delegation told Corporate Affairs Minister Ron Basford Monday that they think is wrong with his proposed competition act.

A spokesman for the minister said Mr. Basford was "not too pleased with them."

The chamber had had six months to prepare since the bill was introduced in the Commons and could only come up with "a small eight-page brief that wasn't too specific.

"Perhaps there could be a lack of precision in our suggestions so far to the minister," said Esmond Peck of Montreal, one of the delegation, at a news conference.

Mr. Peck, an officer of Power Corp. and Canada Steamship Lines Ltd., said the minister had asked for positive suggestions. The chamber would discuss the matter and meet government officials to discuss their views in detail.

Black Hawk Backstops Steal Limelight from 100-pointers

MONTREAL (CP) — The 200-point-plus season by National Hockey League scorers has dominated the game for the last three years.

But a pair of Chicago Black Hawks now appear intent on reversing the trend and moving the spotlight back to the goaltenders.

Statistics released by the NHL today show that netminders Tony Esposito and Gary Smith of the Hawks are making believers out of the faithful this season by displaying the finest goaltending the league has witnessed in the last 17 seasons.

In 33 games so far, they have allowed only 55 goals for a combined goals-against average of 1.66 a game—the lowest average turned in by any goaltenders since 1955-56 when Jacques Plante and Bob Perreault of Montreal Canadiens teamed for a 1.45 goals-against average after the same number of games.

That season Plante, now with the Toronto Maple Leafs, won the Vezina Trophy with a season average of 1.86, the last time the award was won with an average of fewer than two goals a game.

While Esposito and Smith have compiled a respectable 2.23 average on the road, it is within the friendly—for them—confines of Chicago Stadium that the two have come into their own. At home they have allowed the opposition 17 goals in 16 games, an average of 1.06 a game.

The Hawks have yet to lose a home game this season. As a result they lead the West Division with 48 points, seven more than Minnesota North Stars.

By restricting the opposition to two goals in three games last week, Esposito and Smith opened a .31-goals-a-game lead over veteran Gump Worsley and Cesare Maniago of the Stars. The Minnesota pair led the goaltenders' race one week ago.

Esposito, with an individual average of 1.66 and Smith at 1.67, each have three shutouts for a league-leading team total of six.

Meanwhile, in the scoring race, Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins, Tony's older brother, continues to occupy the No. 1 position with 38 points, including a league-leading 25 goals.

The Boston centre maintained his top spot despite the dogged pursuit of New York Rangers' line of Jean Ratelle, Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert.

Hull reached two more career milestones Sunday when he scored the 378th goal and1,198th point of his career in regular-season play.

Glover Game Same

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "When I came here my goal was to make the playoffs," says Fred Glover. "That's still my goal."

The gruff coach of Los Angeles Kings is nothing if not an optimist. The Kings expected to bid for a playoff spot this season after a strong finish last year, are instead challenging their team of two seasons ago, which set an all-time National Hockey League record for futility with only 14 victories.

The Kings have won only seven of 31 games. But perhaps even a better measure of their season so far is the fact they've tied only one game, fewest in the league, and only two of their 22 losses have been by one goal. Their longest winning streak is one game.

With a 4-2 win over Detroit Red Wings Saturday night, their last venture on to ice, the Kings hope to expand their record when they invade Bloomington, Minn., tonight against Minnesota North Stars in the only scheduled game.

Much of the team's problem is psychological, the coach says.

"This club had a fine stretch drive last year, and the success that certain players had caused them to take some things for granted," Glover says.

Don't Blame the Goalie: He Stopped 86 Shots!

BLENHEIM, Ont. (CP) — What do you tell a goalie who has just faced 101 shots in a single hockey game?

"Well, you just stopped 86 shots," manager Gord Kent told Tom Anderson of the Blenheim Golden Blades after one such game.

"If you'd just stopped 15 more, you'd have a shutout."

But the flurry of shots and a 15-1 loss to Moretown Flags in a Great Lakes Junior Hockey League game Sunday night didn't get Anderson down, according to coach Dave Baldwin.

For one thing, the 17-year-old Chatham native is used to it by now. The Blades have just one win and one tie to up 199 goals.

Anderson and sub-goalie Al Fisher have given up 84 goals in Blenheim's last seven games; Anderson has faced 232 shots in the last three.

"The more work he (Anderson) gets, the better he likes it," Baldwin said Monday night. "Our goaltending has been our greatest strength."

DETROIT (CP) — Robby Florek scored three goals to lead the United States Olympic team to a 6-1 victory over a combined team from Detroit Junior Red Wings, and Detroit Red Wings in an exhibition game Monday night.

Detroit plays in the Southern Ontario Hockey Association-Junior "A series, while Fort Huron is a member of the International Hockey League.

Rangers' Christmas Early

NEW YORK (AP) — Emile Francis, the cool Cat who runs the New York Rangers, is a little hot under the collar right now because of the National Hockey League schedule.

The Rangers held their annual Christmas party with Santa Claus and all the ingredients Monday at Madison Square Garden. It will have to do for the players and their families, who'll be separated by half of the United States on Christmas Eve and Christmas night, thanks to the NHL schedule.

New York spends Christmas night in Minnesota and in order to be sure they're there on time, Francis, who is no Scrooge, must fly the team to Minneapolis on Friday night —Christmas Eve.

"It's always been a rule in the NHL to schedule teams as close to home as possible on Christmas," said Francis.

"So where are we? Halfway across the country. The only place they could have put us that would be farther from New York would be the West Coast."

What's more, the Rangers play Montreal Canadiens at home the day after Christmas, so when the club returns from Minnesota, early Sunday morning, the players will head straight for a Manhattan hotel instead of home.

Ironically, the Christmas night game will be the only one away from home for the Rangers for the next three weeks. They have a stretch of five straight games at Madison Square Garden starting with the Montreal game.

The NHL schedule is pieced together in the summer by Brian O'Neill, the NHL's director of administration. Francis went straight to O'Neill with his beef when he got his first look at the schedule.

"He said there was nothing that could be done," said Francis. "Something about Minnesota being the only slot we could fill on that particular night."

EMILE FRANCIS

"The players won't see their families until Monday morning," snapped Francis. "That's some scheduling, isn't it?"

Colts Defend Honor

Above Average

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore Colts will be defending their Super Bowl crown when the National Football League post-season playoffs begin, but right now they're busy defending their integrity.

The Colts wound up in that position Sunday when they were upset by New England Patriots 21-17, losing the Eastern Division title in the American Conference to Miami Dolphins, but at the same time guaranteed what most people feel is an edge in the first-round playoffs.

If the Colts had won, they would have had to face Kansas City Chiefs in the first round, which Miami now must do. Meanwhile, the Colts will meet Cleveland Browns, an opponent presumed to be an easier match than the Chiefs.

That has stirred the skeptics — and the Colts.

"I don't give a damn what people say," coach Don McCafferty said after the loss to New England. "I don't want to lose to anybody, anytime."

While the Colts were defending their integrity, San Francisco 49ers were defending their National Conference West title and qualifying for the last playoff berth by defeating Detroit Lions 31-27.

That set up the following schedule for the playoffs:

Saturday, Dec. 25

NFC: Dallas, 11-3, at Minnesota, 11-3, 1 p.m. EST.

AFC: Miami, 10-3-1, at Kansas City, 10-3-1, 4 p.m. EST.

Sunday, Dec. 26

AFC: Baltimore, 10-4, at Cleveland, 9-5, 1 p.m. EST.

NFC: Washington, 9-4-1, at San Francisco, 9-5, 4 p.m. EST.

Meads Measly with Mustangs

Belleville's Marg Ruttan has been way above average with the five pin bowling lines this year. She is currently carrying a 229 mark tops among women bowlers in the city. Her average, in fact, has been bettered by only three of the top male bowlers. The North Park Street resident bowls regularly in three city leagues.

Marg Bowling Well Enough To Out-pin Most City Men

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

To Marg Ruttan, it matters not how well you bowl; it's how much you enjoy playing the game that really counts. "I'm not really out to see how many people I can beat or how high an average I can run up. It's just something that I enjoy doing," relates the Belleville bowler.

Of course it's pretty easy to enjoy something like bowling when you're as proficient at it as Mrs. Ruttan. She is currently sporting an average of 250 in the COF Brunswick Mixed League, placing her easily at the top of city women five-pinners.

Marg's current 250 average is 22 points above the mark which she compiled last season to place second in the city averages. "They've put in new rubbers at the Brunswick Bowl and I'm getting more mileage from them," is how she explains the huge jump in average.

Another explanation could be that practice makes for improvement. Besides the COF league she bowls in the Monday Nite Mixed League and Thursday Nite Catholic League at the Bowl-O-Drome and coaches junior bowlers in the Brunswick Youth League.

She has a high game to her credit of 278, 32 pins below her best ever effort, and a top triple of 753 for this season.

Junior Chargers Gain First Win

Centennial's junior basketballers finally broke into the win column for this season with a 45-35 victory over Centre Hastings last night.

The Junior Chargers ran their season record to 1-3 with the victory as they built a commanding 21-11 lead at half time that allowed them to coast to the win.

Charles Vanderwater sank 16 points for Centennial with John Spitters collecting 13 and Mark Everard eight. For Centre Hastings it was Kelcar with 19 points and Mocan with eight.

Twice as Good !

The Towers Food City Novices were skating double time Sunday to bang a 6-3 loss on Napanee.

Darrell Colman denied the trimer twice for the winners with Shawn Mulroney getting a goal and an assist. Other goalgetters for the Belleville Novices were Tim Soule, Steve Mofina and David Plane, while Bob Hedge drew two assists. Mike Mofina had three goals for Napanee.

Jockey Club Changing To Non-profit Basis

TORONTO (CP) — The Jockey Club Ltd. confirmed long-standing rumors Monday when shareholders approved reorganization of the company to one of non-profit operations without share capital.

Board chairman E. P. Taylor told a general meeting of shareholders "the return to common shareholders and the growth in the market value of the common shares have both been totally inadequate."

The move in a non-profit organization was chiefly to upgrade racing and provide some tax relief, he said.

For each common share of The Jockey Club Ltd. now outstanding, the holder will be entitled to receive a 16 debenture bearing interest of 19 per cent annually. There are 6,003,784 common shares.

The two classes of preferred shares would be redeemed by the Jockey Club in full by Jan. 1.

Taylor and members of his immediate family control about 2 million common shares. Windfields Farm Ltd., beneficially owns the shares, but it is owned in turn by Cay West S.A., a holding company controlled by the Taylor family.

Jockey Club shares were trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange Monday for $5.25, down one-eighth. Its assets on July 18, 1971, were $47,206,000.

Taylor estimated profit from the Jockey Club's 1971 operations will be $865,000, down more than $1 million from 1970 figures.

PM's Year-round School Plan Described as No Solution

QUEBEC (CP) — Keeping university students at their books on a year-round basis would aggravate unemployment rather than cut it, Education Minister Guy Saint-Pierre said Monday.

The minister said in an interview a 12-month school year would accelerate the rate at which university graduates hit the labor market.

Commenting on Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion Sunday of a 12-month university year to keep students off the summer labor market, Mr. Saint-Pierre said:

"The fundamental problem is not the problem of summer jobs. It's the problem of the arrival of qualified persons on the permanent labor market.

"If we follow up on the suggestion of Mr. Trudeau, in my opinion, we are going to increase the problem."

In an interview with Canadian Contemporary News, broadcast Sunday, Prime Minister Trudeau said the federal government is asking provinces to keep students off the summer labor market by making them attend classes year round.

"If we didn't have the type of school year as we have now which is based on an agricultural society where people attended universities and schools during the winter months and then in the summer they worked on the farm in order to pay for their winter and so on, it's certain that we wouldn't have this bulge of unemployed people looking for work in the summer," he said.

President of Leeds Liberals Asked to Seek PC Nomination

OTTAWA (CP) — Eastern Ontario, like a number of other places in Canada, has always been a bit mixed up politically.

But political affairs are getting zanier than usual, even before any general election call.

For instance, some Conservatives have sponsored the president of the Liberal association in Leeds riding asking him to seek the Conservative nomination and perforce unseat the sitting MP, who is a Conservative.

What's more, the Liberal association president hasn't spurned the offer.

And furthermore, the president of the Conservative association in Leeds already has announced that he will seek his party's nomination.

This makes things a bit trying for Desmond Code, 59, Conservative MP for Leeds.

And he's not kidding—not yet, anyway.

In the 1968 federal election, Mr. Code was elected by four votes: 13,536 to 13,532.

The Liberal loser, John Matheson, a former parliamentary secretary to then prime minister Lester Pearson—Pierre Elliot Trudeau was Mr. Pearson's other parliamentary secretary at that time—was appointed to the bench.

But he is not rated as a Commons debater. In the current session of Parliament, which began Oct. 8, 1970, he has spoken once—for seven minutes in an evening debate after regular business was completed.

He also asked one question—and was ruled out of order.

There has been some pressure on Mr. Code to retire.

Without waiting for any public announcement, Mr. Code on his plate, the president of the Conservative association in Leeds, William Thake, has made known his interest in the party's nomination.

A Gananoque car dealer, Carl Fingrut, is also reported interested in the nomination.

Meanwhile, individual Conservatives have approached Tom Cossitt of Brockville, president of the Leeds Liberal association, to see whether he will seek the Conservative nomination.

Mr. Cossitt has announced he will resign from his post and this presumably will be done at a Jan. 15 executive meeting.

He said in an interview Monday that it is every Liberal's "duty to oppose the Trudeau government to the absolute limit."

Mr. Cossitt, one-time campaign manager for Mr. Matheson, said Prime Minister Trudeau "is steering Canada in a bad direction."

Asked whether he will try to win Leeds riding as a Conservative, Mr. Cossitt said "I have not closed any avenue."

Meanwhile, some Liberals say they would like to have Duncan Fraser of Brockville as their candidate in Leeds.

Mr. Fraser was beaten provincially in 1967 by James Auld, now Ontario works minister. Mr. Thake and Mr. Tingrey worked for Mr. Auld in the recent Ontario election.

Mr. Fraser is the brother of Alastair Fraser, clerk of the Commons.

Meanwhile, in neighboring Lanark-Carleton-Renfrew riding, some Conservatives are trying to make sure that James Baskin, former MP, does not win the Conservative nomination to run against Murray McBride, president Liberal MP.

They prefer Mel Jack, former executive assistant to one-time trade minister George Hees, Conservative MP for Prince Edward-Hastings.

Mr. Jack recently resigned as general manager of the Brewers' Association of Canada, has yet to comment publicly.

Peterborough Motorcyclists Are Convicted of Wounding

COBOURG (CP) — Convicted on the evidence of the victim, who had admitted in court having 32 glasses of beer and 12 ounces of whisky in 12 hours before the incident, two Peterborough motorcycle club members were sentenced Monday to two years each in penitentiary.

Howard Doyle (Pigeon) Berry, 30, and Gordon Phillip (Monk) Matthews, 22, members of the Satan's Choice club, were charged with wounding with intent to cause bodily harm in the shooting Dec. 28, 1970, of John Peter (Swampy) Swales, 29.

Swales was shot twice in the right leg and was in hospital 2½ weeks.

The two were tried before a jury earlier this month. The Crown presented one witness, Swales, who had difficulty recalling precisely the events of the night of the shooting in a hotel in this area 25 miles south of Peterborough.

Defence counsels Gary McNeely and Donald Bell of Peterborough then asked for a directed verdict by Judge J. C. M. Currelly in view of the sketchy evidence presented by the Crown.

However, Judge Currelly ruled that since the jury already had heard certain facts from one witness, it should have the determination of the case.

During his charge to the jury on two occasions he recommended that it would be "dangerous to convict on the evidence heard." But after less than half an hour the jury brought in a verdict of guilty.

Resident of Howe Island Gets Farm Back from Wife

OTTAWA (CP) — Carl Goodfriend regained title to his large and prosperous farm on Howe Island near Kingston as the result of a Supreme Court of Canada judgment Monday.

Mr. Goodfriend signed over the farm to his wife "under circumstances which surely are unusual," said Mr. Justice Wishart Spence in his judgment.

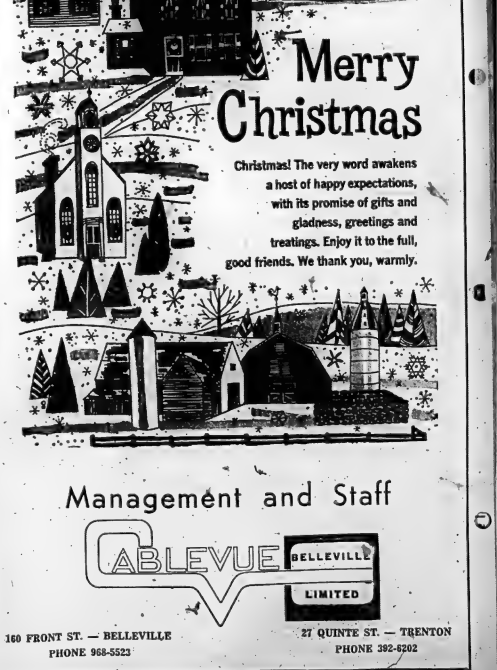
One of these unusual circumstances was the association the Goodfriends formed with another married couple on the island—Vince and Theresa Cox.

"That association developed into a relationship which involved the exchange of spouses from time to time for sexual purposes," noted Judge Spence.

In October, 1966, Mr. Goodfriend was informed by a lawyer that Mr. Cox was threatening to bring suit against him for "alienation of affections."

Although such an action could not be launched under Canadian law, Mrs. Goodfriend visited a lawyer who, she said, advised that the farm property be transferred in her name to protect it in case Mr. Cox was successful in an action.

Two years later the Goodfriends separated and Mr. Goodfriend asked the courts for an order declaring him the true owner of the farm.



A county court judge refused his request but the Ontario Court of Appeal reversed that decision. Mrs. Goodfriend then appealed to the Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Bora Laskin said that "the husband was entitled to say that he was misled by his wife in making the transfer," and that there is no basis in any principle of illegality to lead him into forfeiture of his land."

Judge Spence agreed since there was no proof that any creditor "was defeated, hindered or delayed by the transfer."

ANAF Weekly News Notes

The festive season is here once again and, as one grows older, the faster it seems to roll around. However Yuletide greetings remain ever welcome both to give and receive. So to the readers of the ANAF News, wishes for a most joyous Christmas and a very happy and healthy New Year are extended to you all together with sincere thanks to all who help make this weekly news available to the comrades at Unit 201.

Despite the first real wintry weather, there was a very good crowd at the Happy Hour and Fun Night Christmas party with everybody having a great time to end this year of good entertainment at the Friday social evenings. Owing to the season, the next social evening will be Friday, Jan. 7 1972. Sorry all tickets have been sold for the New Year Ball. The chairman wishes all his Friday nighters the season's best.

The biggest turnout yet this fall was on hand for the Saturday afternoon dartboard party of fun and prizes. Under the capable direction of Dave Feercy the matches move along smoothly and here are the results: No. 1 Winners, Dick Burns and Bill Anderson. Runners up, Erven Schwickerath and Dave Feercy. No. 2 Winners, Jim Woodcock and Dick Burns. Runners up, Doug Bone and Rusty Garvin. No. 3 Winners, Rick Hay and Hank Boyle. Runners up, Tony Rumbelow and Bob Vallen. No. 4 Winners, Bob Brooks and George Bean. Runners up, Dick Thompson and Ace Seley. No. 5 Winners, Chuck Lloyd and Shaker Baker. Runners up Bob Bean and Tony Rumbelow. High three darts; George Bean, 152.

During the afternoon road conditions had become very icy and this cut down on the last Mr. and Mrs. Darts attendance. Nevertheless, with Cde. Dave again running the events, everyone was having a good time with a couple of extra events being added. Dave and Anna Feercy were popular winners of the regular draw with Harry and Joan Vesterfelt being the runners up. In the special Christmas consolation matches, Steve and Bonnie Storms emerged the victors while Mill and Wilma Pulsacski captured the runner up spot. The Christmas pool matches were won by Steve and Bonnie Storms and Harry and Joan Vesterfelt were coolest with the runners up prize. The Storms youngsters finished up their winning ways when the better half, Bonnie won the ladies' high three darts prize with 70. The Vesterfelt rolled an allright too, as Harry threw 140 to capture the men's high three darts.

Once again a short sick list with President Johnny Brown-ing resting comfortably in room 726 and Cde. A. Crawford in room 708, both in the Belleville General Hospital. Cde. Doug Stork is now in 364, in the Kingston Hotel Dieu Hospital. Get well cards at their homes are Cdes. R. Mills and E. Bullock. May they be able to enjoy Christmas and be soon fully recovered in the New Year.

Commons May Have to Sit Extra Hours to Clean Up Business

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition, rebounding in the Commons from a tough battle on the massive government tax bill, showed no signs of giving the Liberals an easy ride Monday on some housekeeping tax measures.

Conservatives and New Democrats laced into a bill to amend some excise taxes and the tax financing of the old age pension fund, despite a government threat to extend Commons sitting hours to clean up items it wants passed before the session ends—about mid-January.

The government poised the extra sitting hours in a written notice on the order paper Monday.

But informants said the government would see what progress is made this week before deciding whether the extra hours were needed.

The minor tax legislation got second reading, moved into the stage of clause-by-clause study and stuck there. Strategists in the office of Allan MacEachen, government House leader, indicated they had expected it to go all the way Monday.

One change in Monday's minor bill was that old-age pensions would be paid out of general government revenues.

In the past, this program of an $80-a-month pension for every Canadian age 65 or over has been paid out of funds earmarked from three specific taxes—a three-per-cent levy from the 12-per-cent sales tax, a four-per-cent levy on personal income taxes and a three-per-cent slice of corporation taxes.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said this could open the door to the government playing fast and loose with the pension. The idea that it should go to everyone might disappear.

With specific amounts of specific taxes earmarked for the fund out of which pensions are paid, every Canadian had the feeling he contributed to his pension, had earned it and was sure it would not be taxed away.

Health Minister John Munro said the old age pension would not be scrapped. Mr. Knowles wasn't satisfied.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson assured him the funding change was just a tidying-up measure. He doubted that most Canadians even realize they pay a federal sales tax.

Mr. Knowles said he wanted assurance on the record that every Canadian is entitled to a government-paid old age pension and that it won't be scrapped.

"We have no intention of changing the universality of the basic old age pension," Mr. Benson said, adding that only Parliament could change what an earlier Parliament had enacted.

Mr. Knowles said he would file this pledge for future reference.

Mr. Benson earlier made his second appearance in a week in front of the Senate banking committee, where the major tax bill was under consideration.

The finance minister said he is sympathetic to some changes already suggested by the Senate committee, which studied a draft of the bill throughout the fall.

He said some of the Senate-suggested changes would be in the bill in a "matter of months."

But he added that a delay in putting the new tax bill into effect by Jan. 1 could leave the country in confusion. There would be legal complications because taxpayers wouldn't know whether the new or old law was in effect.

The committee, which has a Liberal majority compared to the majority in the Senate, approved the bill without amendment. It comes back before the full Senate today for final hand-

Court Ruins Payment for Non-marriage

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A young man who was promised $10,000 by a girl's father if he married somebody else's daughter will only get part of the money, the father's lawyer said Monday.

Jack Alan Wilson, 23, of Royal Oak, Mich., was in court Monday trying to obtain the $10,000. Joseph Wagner, a Los Angeles businessman, promised him the money in a contract more than a year ago if he would agree to stop seeing Sylvia Wagner, marry someone—anyone—else within five years, stay married for at least 9 year, and not talk about the deal, he said.

Wilson lived up to the terms of the contract.

But Circuit Judge William J. Beer was not impressed.

Wagner, a Jew, did not want his daughter to marry outside the faith, lawyers said. Wilson is a Baptist.

Shortly before Wilson was to pick up the money last month —referred to in the contract as a "wedding present"— Wagner filed suit to stop it, claiming through his lawyer that he was "under great mental duress" when he signed.

Beer said he believes a contract not to marry—especially since one of the conditions was that Miss Wagner not be told of it—was probably void. But he said no court in the country would honor any agreement that "prohibits or encourages marriage.

Beer then gave the lawyers one hour to settle the claims out of court.

An hour later the two lawyers and Wilson were back in court saying a settlement had been reached.

"I can't say what the settlement is," said Carl Randell, Wilson's lawyer. "It would ruin the deal. They also part of the settlement."

Alcohol, Obesity and Diabetes Three Causes of Fatty Liver

By G. C. THOTESEON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is a fatty liver? Does it mean the liver is ruined with fat?—Mrs. L.

I heard that orange juice is the only drink which flushes out the liver. Is this correct?

Does an enlarged liver mean liver disease?

If a liver is not enlarged, can it still be damaged?—R.M.

No, a fatty liver is not "ruined with fat." The fat is scattered through the tissues of the organ and reduces its efficiency. Alcohol, obesity and diabetes are three of the principal factors associated with a fatty liver.

Forget about "flushing out the liver." That's an old, decrepit idea based on a misguided idea of what the liver is like. There isn't anything that will "flush out the liver." Nor is there any need to try to.

An enlarged liver means that something is wrong with it, and it may be damaged or congested. That includes a fatty liver.

But a liver can be damaged without showing enlargement. Sometimes a liver badly damaged by cirrhosis may not be enlarged, but actually shrunken.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I hear so much about a pap test. Is this to determine whether one has cancer? Does the doctor use some instrument, and is it painful?—Mrs. E.G.

Main purpose is to detect cancer of the cervix (neck of the uterus or womb) early, but occasionally there are other uses. It isn't painful; all the doctor needs to do is collect some of the mucus found on the cervix, to send to a laboratory.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, 16, drinks six or seven bottles of cola a day. Could this endanger his health? Is cola habit-forming? Could a person become addicted?

He is a very nervous person, gnaws on his hands, can't seem to sit or stand still. Our family doctor asked him to cut down on cola drinks but he hasn't.

He also complains that his stomach hurts. The doctor said he had a nervous stomach. Could so many colas cause this?

He has been drinking this amount for several years now. How can I get him to stop drinking so many? Will it injure his kidneys?—Mrs. L.S.

People don't become addicted to cola drinks, but they contain a goodly amount of caffeine, so they can get the cola habit just as others get the coffee habit.

I don't know of any way you can get your son, at 16, to start controlling his habit. He'll have to do it himself.

I wouldn't worry about his kidneys, but with his nervous traits he would do well to cut down on his caffeine, which is a stimulant and—probably accounts for at least part of his jitteriness. His nervous tension may very likely contribute to his stomach pains.

What the Stars Say

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 22

Your birthday today: This year the Sun moves into Capricorn at 7:38 a.m. EST—in other years the hour is different. Today's natives, both Sagittarius and Capricornians, face a year of personal challenge related more to inner spiritual growth than exterior, material progress. Learning to pray helps can make the difference.

Aries (March 21 - April 19): Friendly people compete for your time and attention. Be gentle in your selections.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Older people, chronic problems, limitations from the long ago shape your opportunity now, may offer a special angle or reason for reminion of your personal burden.

Gemini (May 21-June 19): Today's endless discussions include much praise for you and your exploits, some of which you'd as soon not be reported.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): You many continue being outspoken, but to no improvement. Settle back and let yesterday's comment run its course rather than overdo.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow the good example of your Cancerian brethren and simmer down to await further developments. You have already set many sparks flying.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 21): If you will proceed serenely and at a reasonable pace, older people can fall into step with you and offer priceless aid.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): General co-operation is required on all your serious plans. Continue seeking to convince associates of the merits of your successes.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be required to serve as referee or arbitrator. Despite the challenge to your diplomacy and appreciation of what is proper, you stand to gain from a good job.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Impatience seems inevitable now. Have faith that it's all well worth the waiting. Much yet comes to view.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The last minute for seasonal customs is upon you. If you haven't chosen and bought by now, you may have trouble finding what you want to give.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Taking everything out is natural, but be very selective about your confidante.

Opening lead—jack of clubs.

Declarer must do a certain amount of early jockeying to get the most out of his cards.

He cannot expect to do well, if he confines his thoughts solely to the play of each individual trick by itself. He must also consider the play of the hand as a whole.

Take this hand where it would be easy to go wrong. West leads a third card of clubs and the defenders cash three club tricks. East then returns the six of hearts.

Let's say South wins with the ace and starts to draw trumps by playing a spade to the ace, discovering that West started with all the missing trumps.

South doesn't know it yet, but it is already too late to recover from his error. Regardless of how he now plays the hand, he winds up going down one.

Suppose he plays a diamond to the ace and takes a trump finesse. It works, all right, but the problem of escaping a heart loser remains. South cannot successfully resolve this problem whether he draws trumps at once or does anything else.

When the declarer wins the heart return at trick four, he should first cash the ace of diamonds before leading a trump to the ace. Learning of the 4-0 trump division, he overcomes it by ruffing a diamond, taking trump losers, ruffing another diamond and then cashing the K-J for trumps.

South's heart loser is discarded on dummy's last trump and he scores the last two tricks with the K-Q of hearts.

Cashing the ace of diamonds at trick four before tackling trumps, makes a world of difference in the result. The possibility of West's having four trumps is considered in advance, and preparations are made to deal with it.

All Off Blazing Tanker

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — All crew members aboard a tanker that had been engulfed by flames were reported safe today after an another ship came to it's rescue.

"Everybody's alive, there's no injuries," a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said in relaying reports aboard the fuel of the tanker MV Calypso off the Cuban coast.

The coast guard said the MV Greenport, an American-made vessel of Liberian registry, had taken 34 Calypso crew members aboard and reported "three or six" men still aboard the burning tanker.

The 556-foot-long Calypso is registered in Cyprus and was carrying molasses.

A coast guard spokesman said the Calypso's master radioed a distress call shortly before 10 p.m. EST Monday night that fire had broken out in the engine room and then he ordered four minutes later that "the whole ship is ablaze."

A coast guard search plane was sent to the scene.

Christmas Cards Show Desire for Old Times

TORONTO (CP) — The Christmas cards Canadians are sending this year reflect a yearning for an old-fashioned Christmas, commercial and charity suppliers report.

The international peace theme, a dominant design factor over the last three seasons, remains significant but has levelled off, suppliers say. It has been pushed back by a strong resurgence of old Christmas scenes.

The other demand is for Canadian card designs, made in Canada and illustrated by Canadians.

The change in taste has been attributed to a weariness with the state of the world economy, a wistful retreat to simpler times and the growth of Canadian nationalism.

One of the biggest trends is Canadian content," says W. J. Scott, vice-president, sales, William E. Coutts Co. "This is followed by religious and traditional themes."

Michael Persling, a spokesman for UNICEF, says declining interest in greeting cards has been a goal for the Canadian card, a reproduction of a National Gallery painting called Nativeness and one with Eskimo scenes.

The other demand is for Canadian card designs, made in Canada and illustrated by Canadians.

UNICEF (United Nations Children's Emergency Fund) hopes to gross $1 million in Canada this year for the first time, compared with $877,000 last year.

Final Blow

Whole Country A Grave Says Bangla Desh Chief

DACCA (AP) — "The whole country is a mass grave. Who knows how many millions have been killed?"

The police chief of the new People's Republic of Bangla Desh, describing the slaughter in East Pakistan, said Tuesday that mass graves could be uncovered "in every village."

Others killed before the Pakistan government surrender left without burial on the streets and village paths where they died, he added.

"Jackals, vultures and dogs are at them," said the chief, Inspector-General Abdul Khalique.

The nine months of bloodshed began last March when the Pakistani government dispatched troops from the West to crush East Pakistan's independence movement. Thousands of Bengalis were killed in the crackdown. Resistance by rebel guerrillas also cost the lives of Pakistani soldiers—and led to still more killing in retribution for the guerrilla attacks. Bengalis assert some of the bloodiest anti-rebel retribution came from local volunteer militiamen called razakars.

Those elements were blamed for killing and mutilating about 20 Bengali intellectuals whose shaved bodies were found last week in pits on the outskirts of Dacca. The dead included Nizamuddin Ahmed, who had served as a part-time correspondent for The Associated Press in more peaceful days.

Anywhere between 200,000 and 1.5-million Bengalis may have died in all. The exact number probably never will be known; all casualty figures must be speculative.

But now, Khalique believes, the bloodshed is finally over and peace can return to the tortured region under a Bangla Desh administration.

There has been no evidence of widespread revenge killing by Bengalis since the ceasefire. Officials had feared—and still do—that the Bengalis would take revenge on the estimated two million non-Bengalis and the army, whom most people blame for the long wave of bloodshed.

There have been two public executions—of six persons by rebel Mukti Bahini. Not more than a dozen bodies have been seen in the streets.

This dispatch was filed before the new civilian government of West Pakistan, in an effort at reconciliation with the East, announced the transfer of Sheik Mujib from jail to house arrest.

Heath Convinces Nixon

U.S., Europe Seen as Equals

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuter) — Prime Minister Edward Heath flies back to London today from his summit talks with President Nixon convinced that the future of the Western world lies in Europe, the United States and Japan working economically together.

There was every indication that the British leader had won the U.S. president's support for a new and broader allied strategy to meet the challenges posed by the emergence of China as a potentially-great power and the growing strength of the Soviet Union.

After talking for more than nine hours in almost absolute privacy over a period of two days, Nixon and Heath announced in a joint statement:

"One of the most essential tasks of statesmanship today is to fit the sights beyond the problems of immediate urgency to those major political and economic issues, which in the longer term will determine the shape of the world."

The talks took place against the background of Britain's imminent entry into the European Common Market, and the implications of this for future U.S. relationships with an enlarged European community.

While acknowledging that relationships between Britain and the United States would change, both said that NATO "must remain the cornerstone of the free world."

The impression left among observers was that the fourth Anglo-American summit conference held in Bermuda was a watershed. Their old "special relationship" could now be replaced by a new and more equal partnership between an enlarged, prosperous and strong European community and the United States.

The Nixon-Heath talks also cleared the way for the tackling of the long-term fundamental reform of the 25-year-old international monetary system and the further breaking down of world trade barriers.

Informed British sources said that the lessons of the recent international monetary crisis, which led to the devaluation of the dollar and the realignment of major world currencies, was that the Western world and Japan were inter-dependent in the economic sphere.

Air Canada Slowdown Is Ended

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada ground employees halted their work-to-rule slowdown early today, ending prospects of long delays for thousands of Christmas passengers across the country.

Passengers had queued in long lineups at airport ticket desks during the seven-day slowdown, complaining of delays of as much as five hours.

The Canadian Airline Employees Association ended its slowdown at midnight, confident the airline had approved a 15-per-cent raise over two years.

The halt came as Air Canada was handling its "heaviest-ever passenger crush—expected to reach about 18,000 daily at Toronto International Airport—Canada's busiest—until Friday. The previous record here was 9,800 last July 1.

Gordon Sidworth of Toronto, executive vice-president of the Canadian Air Line Employees Association, said today Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's office had told the union that Canada has agreed to the settlement.

However, the airline would only say it has advised Mr. Mackasey of its position regarding a conciliation board report urging the wage settlement at 15 per cent over two years.

A meeting was to be held between the company and the union in Montreal today and a statement issued when the meeting concludes, a company spokesman said Tuesday night at Montreal.

The union said any slowdown today would be due to weather or Christmas holiday conditions.

Kurt Waldheim

Austrian To Succeed U Thant

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The 26th General Assembly winds up its affairs today after the formality of approving Austrian diplomat Kurt Waldheim as secretary-general of the United Nations for the next five years and approval of a record budget.

The Security Council picked Waldheim for the post on his 53rd birthday Tuesday and swiftly approval of his succession to U Thant was to come in secret balloting this morning.

Waldheim, the new secretary-general, is a career diplomat with 16 years service in the UN. A former ambassador to Canada from 1956 to 1960, he comes from a country whose constitution demands that it stay neutral.

The Security Council picked Austria's UN ambassador over 11 other candidates in three rounds of secret balloting at three private meetings Friday, Monday and Tuesday.

World Hockey Return Sought

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

The Russians, of all people, may be instrumental in helping Canada tear down its hockey iron curtain with the rest of the world.

Gordon Juckes, executive-secretary for the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, told The Intelligencer Tuesday that support from Soviet bloc members of the 29-nation International Ice Hockey Federation could bring an end to Canada's self-imposed world tournament exile by 1973.

Mr. Juckes, in Belleville to send off the Calgary Stampeders' Senior A team heading for Sweden's Ice Bowl tourney, said the CAHA has had two Soviet "overtures" in the past six weeks concerning the possible return of Canadian national teams to world hockey competition.

"The first came as a direct result of Premier Kosygin's visit here," Juckes revealed, adding that the Soviet premier was "very impressed" with a National Hockey League game he attended in Montreal in which the Canadiens beat Vancouver Canucks 9-6.

"And we received an invitation to this year's Izvestia tournament in Moscow," Juckes was told. "There's no doubt we have made considerable yardage in the past 18 months." He referred to the length of the Canadian absence from national team competitions announced

MONTREAL (CP) — Michel Chartrand, president of the Montreal central council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, said Tuesday he would rather spend a month in jail than "spend workers' money," a $1,000 fine. The fine, with the jail penalty for non-payment, was imposed earlier Tuesday by the Quebec Court of Appeal. The court reduced Mr. Chartrand's sentence to the $1,000 fine from a year in prison for grossly abusing a judge in Court of Queen's Bench.

Senate's Report on Poverty Rejected by Welfare Council

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Council of Welfare, whose 21 members are appointed by Health Minister John Munro, today criticized the Senate poverty report recommendations as "less than a first step toward ending poverty in Canada".

The council accepted the Senate poverty committee's definition of "poverty lines"—$2,140 for a single person, $3,750 for a couple and $4,280 for a family of four.

But the council in a news release rejected the committee's recommendation that people be guaranteed an income of only 70 per cent of these levels.

"Such a proposal is to guarantee poverty—even poverty than before, perhaps, but nonetheless poverty."

They also objected to the recommended provision that persons receiving the guaranteed income keep only 50 per cent of any additional money they earn.

"Those with the highest incomes in Canada are not subject to a tax of these dimensions and we see no valid or just reason why the poor should be."

They also rejected recommended restrictions on who could receive the guaranteed income.

"We see no legitimate or justifiable reason for excluding those unmarried and below the age of 60. No Canadian should be forced to suffer poverty whatever his age or marital status."

The council declared that "the poor have a major claim on this steadily increasing wealth of the nation."

"The suggestion that this nation cannot 'afford' such a modest increase in its provision for ensuring its citizens against privation misses the point.

"It is not a question of affording more, but of redistributing the national income more justly."

The 21 council members are chosen from university staff, citizen groups and charitable organizations.

Christmas holidays hit Belleville schools today — which also means a holiday for school crossing guards like 75-year-old Rodney Newton. A&P Not Signed Yet For West End Plaza

Delays continue to plague the abortive Wallbridge Plaza.

Atlantic and Pacific Food Stores, glorious tenant in the proposed mall, has indefinitely postponed the signing date after assuring site owners they would be under contract last Friday.

"We're still waiting and will continue to wait," said Eric Bell, project engineer for Leasehold Construction Corp., the Montreal - based firm which owns the property at the junction of Wallbridge-Loyalist Road and Highway 2.

"It's one excuse after another," said Mr. Bell. "Now it's the Christmas and New Year's rush and they say they can't get people (at the head office) in New York."

"They assure us they will sign," he added.

Bert Kenny, chairman of the Quinte Area Planning Board which hopes to occupy 2,000 feet of office space in the new plaza, said today his organization may review its entire situation at next month's meeting if a construction date has not been announced.

Prince Edward Councillors Back New Home for Aged

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward county councillors generally agreed that a new home for the aged should be built in 1972 to provide better accommodations for senior citizens.

The final county council meeting of 1971 closed Tuesday night with brief remarks from all members summarizing past achievements and urging future gains.

The need for a new home for the aged was echoed constantly in the councillors' addresses and it was suggested several times that construction should start next year.

Picton district councillor Ines Bird noted that county residents were asked to provide funds for a new home and plans were discussed with the Hon. Jamest Auld.

"I've heard nothing about it since," said Mr. Bird.

"We should take firm steps and convince people at higher levels that we mean what we say and they had better mean what they say," he added.

Ameliasburg deputy - reeve Norman Post reinforced Mr. Bird's stand by declaring that if Prince Edward's senior citizens are not treated well all as younger county residents council should step down "and let someone else take over."

He also claimed that questionnaires mailed out to county residents concerning senior citizens accommodations were not explicit enough and, therefore, not answered fully.

A proper report was impossible to obtain under these circumstances.

Athol deputy - reeve Keith Drummell observed that he is "holding up both hands" in favour of a new home and referred to the fact that county residents have been assessed for it.

Athol deputy - reeve Keith MacDonald also urged action on the project and said it was time to "really push" for a new county home with action instead of words.

Hallowell deputy - reeve Norman Post reinforced Mr. Bird's stand by declaring that if Prince Edward's senior citizens are not treated well all as younger county residents

Bedford deputy - reeve Keith Mallory urged caution on the project and said it was time to "really push" for a new county home with action instead of words.

Youngsters Get Involved In Reading Sessions

By HARRY MULRALL
Staff Reporter

There's at least one more story to the children's section of Belleville Public Library than all the brightly-bound books on its shelves — and it's recounted every Saturday.

It's a different story each time, of course — for Saturday mornings is story time at the children's library.

It's a small group that attends the sessions in a corner of the upstairs library — usually 15 to 20 youngsters, compared to a total list of more than 3,500 young book borrowers.

But if it's select it's for an important reason, and, despite its seemingly spontaneity there's a serious intent behind the group's presence.

The storytimers range in age from three to seven years, and the theme of the sessions is to quicken a tot's thoughtfulness on books — and reading generally.

It is hoped that by becoming accustomed to the library, the youngsters in later years will learn to use it — not only for its literary entertainment value but as a resource centre where knowledge is always available.

With the printed word competing with the audio-visuals of the electronic age for a youngster's attention, the project now may have more merit than ever, librarians suggest.

The story-time project, begun years ago, has also changed with the years and, latterly, if anything has grown more sophisticated in its presentation.

Since toiletmacy is a key to such a group, its conduct must rely and reflect on the personality and presence of its leader.

Through the years, the techniques for keeping the story time scene lively and stimulating have varied with those in charge.

This year, it's an aware and imaginative 17-year-old—Michele Coates.

Michele, a Nicholson College student and part-time assistant at the library showed such apparent talent for the job when permitted to do it once a month last year, children's librarian Jean Williams decided to make it a full-time posting.

Michele, who has six younger brothers, apparently established ready rapport with the youngsters and — more significantly — brought some new, sophisticated ideas to bear on the group.

For instance: Action plays a big part in the word game — youngsters are asked to act out their interpretations of selected themes, objects, even colors, thus fostering the mental awareness of the young participants. There's plenty of discussion — in fact, Michele admits, sometimes she's "really talked to them a lot, even more than I read." There are idea exchanges during the stories — some ideas "for three- or four-year-olds are really surprising".

Among Michele's tactics is to balk in the middle of reading and relate the story to some real - life experience which opens up the way for discussions among the youngsters.

"I like it not just to be entertainment," says Michele. "I like them to learn from the stories too. When I do take a theme I like them to expand their knowledge."

At times, drawing enters the picture, and children are asked to sketch out their response to a suggested theme.

Michele says she's delighted at the results thus far and the reactions of the young participants.

She's seen concrete evidence of success.

"We started with one three-year-old youngster in the summer and we taught him to count up to 10 — and, all his colors."

But in an age of livelier communications will the traditional words and pictorial scenes that make up a book still stand up?

Even now, Michele confesses, she's unsure whether other, modern media — like television — will be as important in the future.

There's the odd testimony to this uncertainty in the group.

Lots of times when you pick up a book, they'll say 'I saw that on TV'. They are so aware of the television that I don't know whether reading is going to be that more influential or not."

Nonetheless, she believes such a group as the young storytimers is vitally important by introducing youngsters to both the fun and fund of knowledge available in books.

"This is why . . . when I read them the stories . . . I don't always just read them about a cat or a dog to entertain them . . . I like them to learn from the books as well as being entertained."

As a parent, Denis Newman started his daughter, Paula, in the group when she was three. And although she's now grown out of it, her two-year-old brother, Allen, is a sometimes replacement.

The group left Paula an avid reader and Mr. Newman has no doubts about the importance of books.

"I like to see them starting as young as they can — getting to know books and enjoy them. If they can be stimulated into early reading they've going to have a real desire to want to read."

Television and other media will never take the place of books, says Mr. Newman.

"As much as other media can offer the young people, a lot of their knowledge is going to be gained through books and reading," he adds.

Garden Centre Tenders Opened

Tenders for the city parks board's proposed garden centre on North Park Street have come in slightly higher than the $100,000 estimate.

Four bids on the project were received with tenders ranging from $105,351, the price submitted by Wiegerr de Jong of Stirling, to $110,500 bid by Ivey Dreger Construction of Oakville.

Other bids received were from Miron - Wiggor of Trenton, $106,313, and from Group Building Systems of Burlington at $105,875.

Parks Board chairman Ald. Paul Russell said a meeting of the board will be held Tuesday following which a recommendation for acceptance of one of the tenders will be forwarded to city council.

The new garden centre will replace the present rented quarters on College Street on which the board lease runs out next May.

Youth Faces Robbery Charge

TRENTON (Staff) — An 18-year-old youth faced a charge of attempted armed robbery in provincial court here yesterday following an incident early Tuesday at the residence of Dr. H. Erchinen at 223 Dundas West.

Police report a young man went to the Hutchison home soon after midnight and presented himself at the front door with a gun as the doctor came to answer it. The doctor slammed the door in his face, police say.

About three hours later police apprehended a suspect on Dundas St. West, near Division Street and found a 22-calibre revolver in his possession.

Charged in connection with the incident is Barry Chatten of Brighton.

A Historic Work

In 1878 when H. Belden and Co. of Toronto published their historical atlas of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties people got about by horse and buggy of the type manufactured say by Ashley's Carriage Factory of Foxboro.

Or they might find themselves on a train heading for the Prince Edward County Interior and with a stop at Mountain View. Transportation by paddle boat also was popular so that Captain W. H. Morden of Green Point in Sophiasburg township and his family could have a fine view of the Alexandria as it passed his waterside home, with a church on the hill across the channel and a flourishing little community at the foot of the slope. At the same time the vessel Picton, could be cruising off Glenora, and the Empress of India steaming past Villeneuve House, residence of P. H. Low, Q.C., at Picton. The Shannon meanwhile could be off Northport.

On the farms herds of cattle proclaimed then as now the countries' riches as agricultural communities. Fields of corn too were being cut by horse-drawn reapers. . . .

In Belleville's downtown it is business as usual in such establishments as the dry goods firm of George Ritchie and Co. which boasted a grand staircase leading to the milliner and mantle showroom; at the carriage manufacturing plant of C. S. Stickell and at the drug store of L. W. Yeomans and Co.

At this time Theodore Bahr, late of Prussia, was also manufacturing furniture in Quinsmore; native D. Barlow was pursuing his profession of civil engineer and surveyor, along with many fellow citizens in other occupations who came from the British Isles, as well as native Canadians and not a few from the United States.

The medical profession in Belleville was served then by such as George J. M. D. Potts, an Irishman who had held a number of posts overseas, including service during the Indian mutiny and as surgeon-in-charge of the Convict hospital in Singapore. W. B. Anderson was the principal of the Ontario Business College, described as "the most thorough and best patronized business school in Canada.

All this and more is chronicled in detail in this historical atlas now reproduced for modern readers by Mika Silk Screening Ltd. of Belleville. The firm's principal, Nicholas Mika, is well-known for his books on Belleville, Trenton and other communities, as well as his recent Ontario Heritage Foundation atlas, one of a series being reproduced by the firm, is greatly enhanced not only by the fine drawings of area homes, personalities, rural farms and business establishments but by the detailed maps of communities and townships in the two counties.

Financial Accord

It is strange to look back on the financial accord achieved by the Group of Ten nations. One minute these western lands (hardly lumped together by the above nomenclature) were tossing in a sea of fiscal uncertainty, the next there was agreement born of compromise and the kind of realism that can draw men and countries back from the brink.

We are not accustomed to such a measure of international togetherness these days, but it does not suit the countries concerned. It is generally agreed that Finance Minister Benson came out of the talks with his reputation enhanced which, come to think of it, would not have been difficult considering the battering he and the Government have taken over tax reform. That he did look after Canada's interests, however, in sterling fashion, is conceded. In exchanges with the United States' John Connally Mr. Benson refused to peg our dollar any higher, standing firm for a floating currency which would respond to market fluctuations.

Some items from abroad will cost more in Canada in the wake of the agreement, but overall there is satisfaction at the outcome of the talks. The removal of the controversial 10 per-cent import surcharge by the U.S. put the seal on the events in Washington. More jobs are expected to result in Canada and this among other things is good news here. Best of all there is now financial stability among the western trading nations where before there was uncertainty and the ever-present threat of a trade war.

A Tough Job

Finding another diplomat to fill the exacting demands of the post of Secretary-General of the United Nations still occupies the Security Council. Only three have held the post thus far, all for extended periods: Trygve Lie of Norway (1946-1953), Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden (1953-1961) and the retiring U Thant of Burma who has held the post for two terms or ten years in all.

Saskatchewan Liberals Have A New Leader

By FARMER TESSINGTON
From The Ottawa Bureau of The Intelligencer

OTTAWA — The election of David Gordon Steuart as new leader of the Saskatchewan Liberal party will be welcomed by the many friends and admirers of this friendly, humorous politician.

"Dave" will be the shortest of the leading national politicians in stature, but what he lacks in physical stature he makes up in many other departments.

It's something of a coincidence that a former Saskatchewan premier, T. C. Douglas was also noted for his lack of height and for his keen sense of humor. When Tommy returned to the Commons in 1957 following his resignation as premier he stood up to reply to the messages of welcome voiced by the other party leaders. A Saskatchewan Conservative, present leader of the Conservative party in that province, Ed Nasserden, brought down the House when he quickly called out: "Stand up, Tommy". Even though Mr. Douglas was already on his feet.

But Mr. Douglas was more than equal to the quip. He quickly replied that he had always been taught to believe that the measure of a man's stature was from his shoulders up, not from his shoulders down.

In Dave Steuart, the Saskatchewan Liberals have a man of similar talent, although certainly not of similar physique. It's first met him when I moved to Prince Albert as editor of that city's newspaper, the Daily Herald, and Mr. Steuart was then the mayor. In the years since, I have followed his career with great interest and admiration.

His worth and work for the party in the province over the years was clearly recognized and rewarded by the delegates at the leadership convention. He had been suggested by some as a dark horse candidate, Mr. Steuart, at age 55, was too old to make a success of a new role as leader. But he overcame that carping by winning handily over two younger opponents on the second ballot.

He has quickly made it known that the party will go all out on a new direction in an effort to win back the province from the New Democrats. While a close confidante and loyal supporter of former premier Ross Thatcher, Mr. Steuart did not always share Mr. Thatcher's views or agree with his tactics. He believes the party suffered because Mr. Thatcher's style and wit was sometimes abrasive and he tended to offend people who might have been won over to the Liberal cause with a little sugar in place of vinegar.

Mr. Steuart is no lover of socialism, but is more reasonable to expect he will move the party somewhat more toward the centre than was the case under the former leader, and thus hope to attract more support to the vote support.

But perhaps most significant of all, is his declaration that the first task of the provincial party is to help Saskatchewan's only Liberal member of Parliament, Otto Lang, manpower and immigration minister. Mr. Steuart speaks of attempting to increase the party's representation in the Commons to at least 12.

Mr. Thatcher had an ill-concealed dislike of Mr. Lang, regarding him as an academic who had little knowledge or understanding of farm problems and few skills in the political jungle. Now, the new leader has pledged himself in work toward a close relationship with the federal organization.

The federal people will welcome this as their stock of it a low ebb in the provinces and in the Prairies generally, as the recent disastrous byelection indicates. As the minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Lang—has borne the brunt of criticisms of lost sales and low grain prices and he came under heavy fire over the controversial wheat agreements.

Mr. Thatcher always regarded the federal Liberals as a detriment to his provincial efforts. If Mr. Steuart can come up with a working reconciliation that will benefit both federal and provincial organizations, he will have made a big contribution to liberal fortunes on both levels.

PRISONERS OF WAR

Bangla Desh Faces Uncertain Future

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — The end of the war between India and Pakistan has produced a variety of new and dangerous imponderables.

The future of the emerging state of Bangla Desh is highly unpredictable, particularly after the destruction wrecked by the war, civil strife and natural calamities of the last two years.

Although India has said its army will withdraw from Bangla Desh once its presence is no longer necessary, the fledgling state is certain to require New Delhi's help for many months.

Mrs. Indira Gandhi, her position as Indian prime minister strengthened by the new triumph, can look forward to the beneficial use of her country's refugee burden as millions of East Bengalis stream back to their homeland.

Moreover, Mrs. Gandhi will still have much to worry about from the U.S.-Chinese political affairs of Bangla Desh are concerned.

She always has had trouble with left-wing extremists in the Indian communist Indian region of West Bengal, where there is a similar form of radicalism as in Pakistan's Bangla Desh. A former territory of East Pakistan. The new state will share a common ethnic heritage.

The prime minister thus would have to be headquarters if a new solidarity, rooted in a common Bengali sense of identity, developed between the separatist leftist groups in both regions.

A more immediate peril, however, is the possibility of massacres in Bangla Desh directed against the former natives.

Equally ominous is the possibility of open war with Pakistan following the defeat of President Yahya Khan's forces in the East.

Army strongmen in the past have been toppled from power as a result of the loss of military revenge Yahya Khan has suffered.

Even if the Pakistan chief remains in power, the reduction of his international prestige may tempt the intensify the strains which long have kept West Pakistan from achieving internal harmony.

The West is an uneasy assemblage of regions with fierce price in local traditions. Yahya Khan's defeat could fatally weaken his hold on these disparate areas.

A development of this kind would be certain to result in greater instability and tension in the Indian subcontinent, where a pro-Delhi Russia finds itself vying with Pakistan's ostensible allies, China and the United States.

The U.S. seems anxious to try somehow to keep determined relations with India but the Russians and Chinese continue to denounce one another virulently over the war.

Denturists Receive Recognition

The Globe and Mail

The Royal College of Dental Surgeons has received a considerable distance to meet the challenge presented by the Denturists Society of Ontario. Whether it has met the test enough will almost certainly be determined by the purses of Ontarians seeking partial and complete dentures.

Denturists who have a legal existence in Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia, deal directly with a patient, without any intervention by a dentist. In Ontario registered dental technicians have been doing the same work illegally for many years; but in the past few they have brought the matter to a crisis by bringing it into the open and asking the Ontario Government to give them a legal position. This has been opposed, in this request, by the dental profession, and some of them have been prosecuted.

The crux of the matter is that while denturists charge from $200 to $1,000 for a set of dentures, the dentistry course qualifies them for as little as a quarter or a third of these figures. The denturists have therefore been supplying many of the poor and many, too, of the financially prudent.

The college now proposes to meet this competition with a new kind of clinic staffed by a new kind of technician to be known as a dental prosthetic therapist.

This new therapist will be a registered dental technician who has taken an additional year of training at a course to be established at the George Brown College of Applies Arts and Technology in Toronto. His course will equip him with knowledge of basic anatomy, intra-oral clinical procedure, biology, pathology and sterilization and personal hygiene. He will be qualified to receive patients, take impressions and bite registrations and make partial and complete upper or lower dentures, but still under the supervision of a dentist.

Working through its local dental societies the Ontario Dental Association will arrange to set up denture clinics to serve, ranging exclusively with dentures. Initially these clinics will be established in Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, London, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Sudbury, Peterborough, Sarnia and Belleville.

They will charge an average fee of $180 for a full set of upper and lower dentures, which the Ontario Dental Association compares with the $280 which it its recommended fee schedule, and with what it describes as "the price of $150 to $200 now being charged at illegally operated so-called denturist houses. where unqualified and untrained persons are offering the public a product which is potentially dangerous to their health and well being".

The proposal has great merit. It would give legal definition to the new therapist and the area in which he could properly function. It would provide a course by which he could equip himself. By acknowledging his competence in this work, hitherto reserved for dentists, it would decrease the amount of time dentists spend working below their level of competence and therefore raise the quality education with which the public, in part, has provided them. It would bring down the cost of legal dentures.

Economy Is in Encouraging State

By DON O'HEARN
From the Queen's Park Bureau of The Intelligencer

TORONTO — From time to time Provincial Treasurer D'Arcy McKeough make mildly optimistic statements about the economy.

Speeches which result in headlines are encouraging for 1972 is on mend Davis says.

The first response of many people to these words will be one of mild scorn.

With the economic problems of today, high unemployment, the Common Market threatening exports, farmers consistently getting deeper into trouble, optimism would appear to be missing.

There are two pertinent points about such statements, however.

One is that in themselves they are true.

The other is that they are needed and serve a valuable purpose.

Regarding the first, the facts are that on the standards we have known for decades the economy is encouraging.

The downward trend has been stopped and there is now in a comfortable growth.

The problem is that we are at a point of great change and the standards we have known are becoming irrelevant.

Growth in production doesn't necessarily mean an accompanying increase in jobs any longer. With the accelerated growth of the labor force, particularly with the entry of more and more women, anything we have known in the past wouldn't fill the demand in the job market.

And our increasing reliance on world trade means we must find our way to new economic values, such as concentrating production in those areas in which we are most competitive.

The assumption has to be taken that we will find our way.

The process obviously will be slow, however. Slow, and trying.

And this means that optimism will be important.

For a prevailing spirit of fear could be most harmful to us.

Let consumers become afraid to spend and in lustry afraid to expand and we will go down even by the old standards.

So while from a long-term viewpoint there can be no temptation to cynicism about, statements of optimism sincerely they are best accepted as a worthwhile shot in the arm.

Ulster Horror

The Daily Mail

Even In war, there are degrees of beastiality. And anyone dispassionately running humanity's rule over events in Northern Ireland this past fortnight cannot fail to measure the new depths to which terrorism is sinking . . . Maybe, with many of their own internal troubles the British Army bot on the scent of their secret arsenals, the terrorists are becoming desperate. Maybe this increase in the intensity of terrorism is premeditated and planned. We shall, as yet be sure. But what we can say is that the terrorists are now taking a more terrible gamble than they have ever dared to do before. They are now making murder and savage murder in order to provoke the Protestants to bloody retaliation before the full horror of it all nauseates even the Australian soldiers of the Belfast and Derry ghettos".

Where Does UN Stand in Wake of Pakistani Defeat?

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — There is an old saying that if there was no UN today, one would have to be created tomorrow.

Now there is a new saying: The UN became indispensable before it became possible.

Both appear to be correct.

The United Nations has achieved little in the last 18 years to eliminate the scourge of war. Many diplomats, while admitting that, add that if the world organization could not stop all wars, it probably prevented a Third World War.

The first saying is quoted frequently and with all seriousness.

The second, a self-contradictory statement, is quoted with tongue in cheek. The UN everyone revolving around the war on the Indian subcontinent give it considerable relevancy.

The UN is indispensable. It has established a machine for the multitude of humanitarian assistance programs. It is the way for man to help man. It is the place to meet and talk; for diplomatic parties to negotiate in a neutral atmosphere; for mediation to be attempted. It is the only such place in the world.

But "United Nations" is a misnomer. The nations of the world are not united. National interests always come first. No country gives up sovereignty to a significant degree. The international interests of each country are more important to it than those of the world community.

The Security Council had a hopeless task when it attempted to get a ceasefire in the Indo-Pakistan war. Talk and meetings went on night after night, inside the council chamber and in the hall of useless.

The interest of the Soviet Union was an Indian victory. The interest of China and the United States was Indian defeat, or at least withdrawal. There was no hope of compromise.

Nothing showed more clearly that the big powers run the world.

There was a massive 104-11 vote in the General Assembly calling for a ceasefire and withdrawal of troops less than two weeks ago. It was, in the words of Zulfikar Bhutto, now president of truncated Pakistan, a world referendum.

But the Soviet Union prevented the Security Council from following the lead of the assembly. The Soviets vetoed anything that would prevent India from achieving its objectsquest of East Pakistan.

China and the U.S. would accept nothing less than total withdrawal.

Thus, with big-power sides drawn, nothing could be done. The small countries called in vain for compliance with the Charter provision for respect for the internal sovereignty of a country.

In all, the India-Pakistan war has been a fairly bad time for the UN.

There was without doubt violent abuse of human rights of civilians in East Pakistan by the Yahya Khan regime. But it is probable that nobody will ever know the full extent of the bloodshed in that unhappy area.

But India violated a cardinal principle of international relations: non-interference in the internal affairs of another country.

So the UN was caught in the classic dilemma between law and justice and could not solve both.

In a way, the Security Council has established a precedent—inaction when the big powers are in disagreement, even when thousands are dying.

This is far different from the past. In the Middle East war, the council acted at least call for a ceasefire, even when the super-powers were on opposite sides.

For the next generation and probably longer, the will of a majority in the world will ignored here in time of war.

The world must wait many years before the UN is a political force in world affairs.

Meanwhile, perhaps she misnomer should be dispensed with. The world body might be called a consultative council for a time. At least then, people's hopes would not be shattered as often.

Northern Electric's Freedom Applauded

Science Council Finds Disadvantages In Outsiders Owning Scientific Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Substantial disadvantages are attached to growing foreign ownership of Canadian science-based industries, says a documented study prepared for the Science Council of Canada.

Some of these can be reduced by government intervention to preserve as much autonomy as possible for Canadian-based manufacturing.

Other disadvantages reflect the powerful pull of the huge United States market, which causes even Canadian-owned multi-national companies to shift important activities there.

The study, chief author of which was economist Dr. Arthur J. Cordell, already has been the basis of a council recommendation that the federal government act quickly to rescue Canadian manufacturing or see the country relegated to the role of a resource supplier.

Agreements such as the Canada-U.S. auto pact, currently being reviewed by both countries, helped Canada to earn many export dollars and create many industrial jobs says the study.

But these benefits also mean decisions since vital decisions of design, purchasing, engineering and export were made increasingly in the U.S. This crippled Canadian ability to innovate—to invent new processes and products.

"To lose the power to innovate in a changing environment is to yield control of the future to those who retain that power," says the study.

By contrast, when Northern Electric was released in 1956 from dependence on foreign technology, Canadian design capability, jobs for highly-qualified manpower and export sales mushroomed.

In Northern's case, it was a United States anti-trust decision which cut it off from Western Electric, one of Northern's chief sources of product design and manufacturing information.

Northern became semi-autonomous even though Western held 43 per cent of Nortorp's stock. Its substantial gains in jobs and markets illustrate what a company has by relatively non-foreign sources to develop its technology.

The study stressed the degree of autonomy of Canadian subsidiaries of foreign firms. Those owned by U.S. firms had less autonomy and less freedom of action than those owned by British or European firms.

This difference seemed to be disappearing and pressures were overwhelming to treat North American activities on a continental basis.

The result would be to widen already-present gaps in research and development, technology and innovation among foreign subsidiaries.

The Canadian competitors of subsidiary companies faced two choices: to conduct little or no research, or to maintain a costly research program that put them at a price disadvantage because of greater overhead costs than the research available to competitors.

The study says it is a "significant gap in the innovative chain" that a large percentage of subsidiaries in Canada conduct no effort to innovate and to secure markets abroad through new products or processes.

Increased export markets were assigned by the parent, at times representing substantial export sales for the subsidiary. Most of 50 major Canadian subsidiaries studied in detail felt free to enter foreign markets at will with a product it thought could be produced and competitively exported.

Only after the parent had assigned a market was there research and development and innovation towards building sales.

Where a new product or process was invented by the subsidiary the decisions about complete design, engineering and production would be made by the parent in the interests of the profits of the entire corporation.

That might mean doing these activities in the United States or even in a third country.

Or it might mean entire design and manufacture in Canada, as with the PT6 gas turbine engine of United Aircraft of Canada at Longueuil, Que., a U.S. subsidiary.

The engine was used on Beaver and Twin Otter aircraft, produced by deHavilland aircraft, a British subsidiary. Various versions being used in nonairplane power plants as well.

These decisions by the parent could be influenced by federal and provincial governments through assistance, such as export guarantees or low-interest loans, through active intervention in intra-company negotiations or through "a passive but visible role as antique curator."

"It appears that if strong case may be made for a government-al role in securing increased autonomy for the Canadian operation," says the study.

Negotiation should be aimed at getting for the subsidiary final design, engineering and production process at a specific product or range of products.

Science Council Unimpressed

Auto Pact Mixed Blessing

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government should think twice before negotiating another auto pact with the United States or applying the same agreement to other industries, says a study for the Science Council of Canada.

The study says the 1965 agreement—which established a duty-free North American market for cars, buses and trucks—has limited blessing at best.

On the plus side it meant substantial export earnings and many more industrial jobs, the study says, but this was achieved at the expense of Canadian research, design and managerial abilities.

The study by economist Dr. Arthur J. Cordell says the net effect was to make Canadian auto makers indistinguishable from the California or Ohio branches of the U.S. auto industry.

It takes little imagination to predict the long-term consequences of a series of similar pacts in other industries in Canada."

The auto pact now is being overhauled by negotiators for the two countries.

The Cordell report says future agreements should not include such great gains in earning U.S. dollars.

"Rather, export dollars should be traded off if possible in order to obtain more balanced employment for Canadians, including employment opportunities for Canadian management, scientists and engineers."

By 1970, slightly more than 60 per cent of manufactured products exported by Canada were autos bound for the U.S. And nearly 37 per cent of all Canada's exports were manufactured goods including cars.

But the U.S. dollars earned and the assembly plant jobs created were only two objectives of exporting.

It was just as important to create sophisticated research and design teams, to challenge Canadian management so that entrepreneurial skills are developed and sharpened and to stimulate the whole operation.

Under the pact, management decisions on design, purchasing, much of the engineering and exports were made in auto firm headquarters at Detroit.

In addition, research in the Canadian auto industry "is conspicuous by its absence."

And, while Canada is one of the world's major auto makers, "there is no one design team in Canada that could actually design and put into pilot production a complete automobile".

Youth Free On 20-year Remand

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal justice department will try this week to shorten the 20-year remand of Lawrence Doucette.

But department officials will not say how—just in case Doucette, 32, is free to be dress, disappears before they get to him.

Last month, provincial court Judge Nick Mussallem remanded Doucette for 20 years after the Crown asked for an indefinite term. Doucette appeared in court on a charge of possessing marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

When Judge Mussallem decided the request for an adjournment, the prosecutor asked if he may say the charges—a legal manoeuvre that would wipe out the charge but allow it to be relaid, thus permitting a court hearing at a later date. When the prosecutor admitted under questioning that the charge would be relaid, Judge Mussallem countered by remanding the case for 20 years, saying:

"He now is on his own recognizance on a $50 bond until Nov. 30, 1991 when he will appears in this court."

B. C. judges have repeatedly admonished both prosecution and defence lawyers for seeking adjournments because they were not prepared to proceed when cases were called.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Roughly how many miles per gallon can be expected from a 250 h.p. V-8 engine? Also, do you think that snow tires provide better traction in snow than good conventional tires?

ANSWER: How many miles you'll get per gallon depends on whether you are driving in the city or on the highway. With medium sized cars whether it is a 6 cylinder or medium V-8, you can expect an average of from 14 to 18 miles a gallon in the city and up to 27 miles a gallon on the highway, depending on the wind direction and if there is a lot of downgrade driving in the motorists' favor.

Regarding snow tires, on ice they provide no more traction than do regular tires. But the thick deep treads on snow tires give you better traction on slippery, snowy covered highways than regular tires.

Remember, when slippery roads make traction poor, racing up the engine and spinning the wheels usually does things no better. It can burn out such things as the transmission clutch, universal joints and rear end assembly.

Rather than stepping on the gas pedal, just feed enough gas to get moving and continue feeding slowly until you have gained momentum.

QUESTION: I would like to go to Florida this winter, but at my age, I don't like the idea of the long drive d o w n and back. I do want to have the use of a car while I am down there. Have you any suggestions?

ANSWER: One alternative is to fly down and rent a car when you get there. Members of the Ontario Motor League may obtain Avis rental reduced rates through the Tilden-National Car Rental.

Another suggestion is to ship your car down by train. There is an auto train, carrying both passengers and their cars, operating daily between Lorton, Va., (Washington) and Sanford, Fla. The passengers begin boarding at 7:00 p.m. daily and depart from each terminal at 8:00 p.m., arriving at their destination at 11:00 a.m. the next morning.

One-way fare for an automobile and four occupants is $180 with a $15 additional fare for each additional occupant. Passengers ride in glass domed coaches with fully reclining seats. A double bedroom with TV and room service may also be reserved for a further $40.

Reservation and information may be obtained by writing the Auto-Train Corporation, 1801 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006. But it is reported that space has been fully reserved for both south- and northbound trips through the Christmas holiday season.

At present, because of space limitations, bookings are not being accepted for private units and trailers.

If you decide on this latter choice, your best route to drive to Alexandria is by Route 81 from the Thousand Islands Bridge to Harrisburg, Pa., Route 15, to Frederick, Md., and Routes 70 and 495 from there, a total of 575 miles to Sanford, Fla., is just north of Orlando.

Policeman Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial police are investigating the death early Tuesday of a 30-year-old police detective.

A Civic Hospital spokesman said acting detective Brian Mahoney was admitted Friday night. The spokesman said the injuries were consistent with a beating which included a kick in the stomach.

City police refused comment. Police Chief Gus Wernch of Nepean Township, however, said the incident occurred in a home in his jurisdiction. The home is known to be that of another policeman.

Coroner Dr. J. A. Thomson said he could say nothing about the cause of death until an autopsy had been performed.

Breaks Leg So - - -

Blind Skier Plans Sky Diving

TORONTO (CP) — Blind skier Judy Norrish broke her leg for the second time Tuesday night and was told not to ski again.

Now she'd like to take up sky diving.

"But not until I'm finished working, though," she said in an interview. "My boss thought I was insane when I broke my leg skiing last year. . . . Sky diving would just be too much for him yet to mention my husband."

The pretty 23-year-old legal secretary, who started to ski after losing her sight three years ago doesn't want to discourage other skiers, however, blind or otherwise.

"People need to try everything within their limits at least once — then if it doesn't work you can give it up, just because you're blind doesn't mean you have to stop living.

Mrs. Norrish helped organize a blind skiing club when she decided it was time to stop feeling sorry for herself and resume the active life she led prior to losing her sight.

District Women's Institutes

REDNERSVILLE W.I.

Rednersville W.I. Christmas party was held at Asbury Community Centre on Dec. 16. A delicious meal of fried chicken was provided by the an interesting variety of hot dishes and salads, with a nice array of pies for dessert. At it was a bit later than usual, all had good appetites and thoroughly enjoyed supper.

The meeting was opened by singing Down the Christmas aisle.

The Women's Institute's 75th anniversary luncheon, to be held at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, was discussed. It was hoped that at least one member from each branch would attend. Members agreed that, if possible, president Mrs. W. Cook should go.

Others expressed an interest in going as well. Mrs. E. Cinderdock suggested the possibility of arranging for a chartered bus if enough members from Prince Edward and Hastings counties planned to go.

It was reported that folks who are shut in greatly appreciate visits from the visiting committee each month

Mrs. F. Young and Mrs. W. Palmer visited the County Home at Picton, on Dec. 14, and their gifts were given. They took dishes of food and helped to serve. A good number attended and the afternoon was a success.

It was decided to hold a quilting and pot luck dinner on Jan. 25, at Asbury Community Centre. Members are to bring two dishes of food, and meat and other dishes each one was asked to bring three plates. Silver will be provided by Mrs. E. Palmer. Charge is to be $1.00 for members and $1.50 for others.

For the program Mrs. E. Onderdonk introduced Mrs. Gilles who played a tape of her class singing Christmas carols. She then showed a film strip of Christmas 'Round the world, with a descriptive record. It showed a real variety of customs. This was followed by a film strip of the different Christmas carols in other countries, with its accompanying record. All were asked to join in singing the carols. Mrs. Gilles also gave a talk about some of the methods used for instruction in today's classrooms. It was interesting to have a glimpse of some of the modern teaching methods.

Each one received a nice gift from Santa Claus and all agreed it was an enjoyable evening.

LONSDALE W.I.

A number of business items were discussed at the recent meeting of Lonsdale Women's Institute with 16 members and two guests present. President Mrs. Stafford opened the meeting in the usual manner.

During the business, the secretary's and treasurer's reports were read by Mrs. L. McGuinness. It was decided that the Institute would again sponsor the 4-H Club with Mrs. J. Jarrell and Mrs. B. Walsh as leaders. A training course will be run in Foxboro January 28 and 21. This Women's Institute will mark its 75th anniversary next year and a representative to the celebration which is to be held in Toronto will be chosen at the next meeting. The first euchre party for 1972 will be held January 19.

This program based on the Christmas theme opened with the singing of Christmas carols led by Mrs. B. Freeman. Agnes Farrell and Colleen McGuinness gave a demonstration on selecting materials for baking occasions. Readings were given by Mrs. John Farrell, Mrs. E. Coppell, Mrs. Fred Farrell and Mrs. B. Freeman. At the conclusion Christmas gifts were exchanged.

Mrs. Coppell and Mrs. K. Haight served a Christmas lunch.

Next meeting will be held January 13.

The home was attractively decorated for this festive occasion. The business part of the meeting was opened and presided over by the president, Mrs. Ken Mobley. Many items of business were discussed and dealt with.

It was decided to do some Christmas caroling, especially to members who do not attend regularly.

The business part of the meeting was concluded and the program committee took over. Tables were arranged and progressive euchre was played. Prizes were awarded at the conclusion of the game and also prizes for several games that were played during the course of the evening.

A beautiful lunch was served by the hostesses and members which included among many other delicacies ice cream. A social time was enjoyed by everyone and all were appreciative of the hostesses and program committee who helped to make the evening a success.

Missionary Endeavors Outlined

MARMORA — The Sunday School auditorium was the setting for a recent work meeting of Marmora and Beaver Creek Pres Methodist Women's Missionary Society.

The opening hymn was this year's theme song followed by prayer for the missionary fields of the world and India's in particular.

Mrs. Ronald Brown read a scripture lesson.

The minutes of the November meeting were read. The names of members and their birthdates were then put in a hat and each received their secret prayer partner for the year.

The offering and penny-a-day were taken and some days paid for the year.

Mrs. Ray Bonter had listed a number of missionaries in a separate folder and after with their pictures and addresses. Each was assigned to a piece of colored yarn and as each member pulled a piece of the yarn was learned who was to be her mission-ary prayer-partner for the year. Several poems and other pieces were read.

After this short program the women busied themselves with arrangements for sale of fruit and homemade goodies for each of 20 elderly shut-ins.

Mrs. Alex McFaul was responsible for planning this work meeting. Mrs. Ron Brown was hostess, serving a delicious lunch to those who attended.

MR. AND MRS. LARRY ALBERT BELLWOOD

Bellwood – Gill

Rev. J. A. Dunlop officiated at the double ring wedding ceremony in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church, Belleville, on Saturday, Dec. 11, 1971, when Susan Elaine Gill—daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gill Carrying Place was united in marriage to Larry Albert Bellwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bellwood of Belleville. Traditional wedding music was rendered by organist William McCarton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street length white velvet dress in empire style with long sleeves. A shoulder length veil of silk illusion tulle was gathered to a solitaire white rose headdress. She carried a nosegay of pink roses, white carnations mingled with baby's breath and fern.

Mrs. Peggy Gill, sister-in-law of the bride as matron of honor wore a street length empire styled dress with long sleeves in royal blue velvet with matching wedding ring headdress and veil. She carried a nosegay of white and royal blue poms interspersed with fern and baby's breath.

Mrs. Diana Giguere, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, was identically attired to the matron of honor.

The flower girl Miss Susan Giguere, niece of the bride wore a white velvet dress trimmed with royal blue to match the gowns of the attendants. She carried a miniature nosegay identical to that of the others.

Roy Wilcox of Belleville attended the bridegroom, while Stephen Berry of Toronto was the usher. Robert Giguere nephew of the bride was the ring bearer.

Assisting the bridegroom's mother were a two-piece ensemble in purple crimplene with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

For travelling, the bride chose a white lace hot pants outfit with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Bellwood will reside in Belleville.

Serving the Community

Through the generosity of the Belleville Yarntown Bonnet Fund Centre Inc., the Quinte Branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses was happy to accept the donation of a car on Tuesday afternoon. The keys, licence plates and ownership (with cer in the background) are presented to Miss Valorie Truax, nurse-in-charge of the Quinte Branch, by Ernie Belanger (left), secretary of the BYBF, with the group president, Edward Brandon, assisting.

Yardmen Donate Car to VON

Since its inception in July, 1970 the Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund has aided in numerous charitable endeavors for the good of the community, and the most recent of these is the donation of a car to the Quinte Branch Victorian Order of Nurses.

The Quinte Branch of this service organization is just one of over 80 branches of the VON across Canada. Recently having become involved in a project of expansion, the Quinte branch now requires its professional nursing services to patients of all ages and with a wide variety of illnesses in both homes throughout all of Prince Edward County as well.

Being a non-profit, voluntary agency, the VON is not supported by taxation and is therefore responsible for maintaining its work via other sources. Thus, the VON is obliged to charge a fee, but the organization does not withhold its services if the patient is unable to pay. Other sources of revenue include grants, donations from individuals and firms, and in Belleville, the Quinte VON is a member of United Appeal.

The VON endeavors to help the patient help himself so that he can become as self-sufficient and contributing, individual as possible.

Quinte VON staff consists of four full time and eight relief nurses who are on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week. This is just one of the many services available to the citizens of the community.

A spokesman for the VON expressed pleasure at receiving the donation of a new car from the Belleville Yardmen Fund and felt that this donation would assist greatly in providing more service to an increasing number of citizens.

Master of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Should people shun material success?

NO, although most individuals, if given a choice, would prefer artistic success to material accomplishment. Making money is often downgraded by many people who link that sort of success to man's physical nature, not to his mental prowess. Of course, if someone makes a lot of money in material ventures he can support efforts that are commercial failures but artistic successes.

Is a child selfish who wants his own toy?

PERHAPS if he has been indulged to ever an extended period, a child will become selfish; but he certainly didn't start out that way. He might have been unsure of himself at some early phase; just starting to walk, for instance, he might have been struggling to win the encouragement he should have had. Since he didn't get it, the child might have begun to insist on getting his own way to disguise his sense of being deprived.

Does the 'silent treatment' work in marriage?

NOT as a means of fostering marital harmony at any rate. When a husband, say, makes it a habit to keep mum rather than carry on a running word battle, he thinks he can control his wife's attitude toward him by withdrawing into his wordless shell. All he is doing, however, is cutting off avenues of communication that make it easier to settle the disputes that can crop up from time to time in the happiest of marriages.

Large Crowd Attends Eastern Star Party

On Friday evening, December 17 Belleville Chapter 85, Order of the Eastern Star held a Christmas party in the Masonic Temple on Foster Ave., despite slippery driving conditions about 125 members and visitors attended this joyful annual event.

At the close of the business everyone assembled in the banquet hall for a potluck dinner. Among the head table guests were Mrs. Edna Dobbs, Grand Conductress of the Grand Chapter of Ontario; Mrs. Ethel Stapleton, District Deputy Grand Matron of District No. 12; Rev. J. Leslie Dean, minister of the Tabernacle United Church, and Mrs. Dean. All were warmly welcomed by the Worthy Matron, Miss Jessie Stephenson and the Worthy Patron, Keith Elliott. Grace was said by the chaplain, Mrs. Helen Hay.

After a tasty dinner, served by the special lunch committee, the guest speaker, Mr. Dean was introduced by the Associate Patron, Harold Bankier, who gave an interesting account of Mr. Dean's life and career.

The theme of the guest speaker's address was, the star, especially the message of the Star of the East; which was not only an appropriate Christmas message, but also because both Mr. and Mrs. Dean are members of the Order of the Eastern Star. In his talk he stated that through Christ had come into the world to teach peace and goodwill among all men and though the birth of the Prince of peace is still celebrated, wars and violence are still all over the world.

Mrs. Pearl Johnston, Past Matron and treasurer of the Chapter, thanked the speaker for his inspiring talk and presented him with a gift.

Mrs. Marjorie Gray, Past Matron, played Christmas carols on the piano, and every one joined in singing, led by Rev. Chaplin, Past Patron.

Santa Claus was unable to be present due to weather conditions, but Mrs. Zenka Claus was there, and with her helpers distributed gifts to everyone from a gaily decorated tree.

Drawings were made for a door prize and a basket of apples donated by Allan and Eleanor Gray of Quinte Chapter, Amherstburg, which was won by Miss Joan Stephenson, Wiarton, and Mrs. Ann Combe, also a coffee set, donated by the business girls of the Chapter, and won by Mrs. Wynne Tomlinson, P.M., and secretary of the Chapter.

'Keep Those Letters Coming!'

By DORIS CLARK

"I sat on a box beside a bewhiskered young man who told me he had just de-planed from his trip from Australia. He and his pal had been travelling around the world for a year and, as he said he could just imagine the look on his mother's face when he walked in by the door instead of the didn't even know he was coming.

"Their last 15 weeks had been spent on a 38-hour day, seven-day week job in the Australian desert doing surveying — for the money to come home. He said he wouldn't have missed the experience for the world; but that he wouldn't want to go through it all again.

He had made a few purchases, mostly inexpensive. The one he was proudest of was the nylon skin for which he had paid $138. This, he said, was going in an aunt and uncle who "kept the letters coming". There was nothing in the trip he appreciated so much as that regular mail from home.

Reminded me of the time my sister Sally (who still "keeps the letters coming") had an American five dollar bill wedding with a card at General Delivery in Paris for our nephew, Peter. He was thrilled. He and his pal had awaited expected funds too long in a foreign, friendless spot, and he said they lived on that five dollar bill for two days — mostly bread and cheese. Truly food for the soul.

Do you "keep the letters coming" when your dear one is a long way from home?

• • •

Dear Doris: Please send me your leaflet on the "perfect child" (is that correct). My five-year-old at times writes 12-11-39-9-8-7-6 etc. in a backwards circle, or H G F E D C B A, or every figure backwards, so that it looks like a printer's and a 6 looks like a 9 upside down and backwards. — O. K.

Dear G. K.: Sounds like a "perfect child" to me; one of those learning disabilities which needs special handling. An adjustable child has a mental disorder which features baffling bewilderment and is far sadder and harder to treat.

I can send you my booklet about Children With Learning Disabilities and where to go for definite diagnosis, and treatment. Write in again supplying your name and address, and a large envelope and 20 cents.

Dear Doris: A correspondent asked for the quotation, "People Will Talk". Would the following be the one she means?

"You will get through the world, though the rate will be slow.

If you listen to all that is said as you go.

You'll be worried and fretted if you mind what they say

So take little notice and go on your way — for people will talk!"

My mother wrote this in my autograph album when I left England for Canada in 1919, and I have found it very helpful. — E. P.

Dear E.P.D.: The general idea is the same in all of them, Not a bad message to put in an autograph album!

I find that the complete poem consists of about seven verses. Anybody want them all? They are yours for the usual 20 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. (This is Percale Will Talk).

And my thanks to all the readers who sent them in.

Swinger's Wife's Letter Updated

Dear Ann Landers: The letter signed Swinger's Wife was terrific. Did you hear the loud and again? I am dying to know. Please update your readers.— Wife of a Texas Ramos

Dear Wife: First, I think we ought to refresh the memories of the older readers. Here is a rerun of the letter you are inquiring about:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband reads your column every day. When you print a letter that gives my husband a break he always says, "Hey, look at this one."

I'm subscribing this to him and if I'm lucky enough to see it in the paper I'm going to say, "Hey, look at this one."

Dear Swinger: You are nearly 40. Your children are growing up and they don't know you. You haven't been around home much. You don't know me very well, either. Whenever I try to talk about things that trouble me you shut me off by telling me to "nag." In a few years (sooner than you think) you'll be too tired to swing. The chicks you've been chasing will suddenly not find you the right fort. You'll want to be part of the family. You'll be too late. Your children will be strangers. You did not want to be part of their lives when they needed you and they will not permit you to become part of their lives when you need them.

I used to feel that I had failed you. I blamed myself for not being a better wife. Now I know that no matter what I had done the results would have been the same. You were interested in a better wife—or any wife. So I've built a wife which doesn't threaten you and I'm—Happier Than You Think

Please tell it, Ann, and I'll let you know what happens.— Swinger's Wife

Dear Readers: I received 47 letters from women who wrote to say:

My husband was sure I had written that letter and he wanted to talk about it."

Some of the women said it resulted in the best communication they had had in years. A wife from San Diego reported that her husband had the collect call in his hand and in her presence, telephoned his girl friend and told her he wasn't going to see her anymore.

So it appears the column did a lot of good and I am grateful to Swinger's Wife for having written it. Thank you for asking what happened.

Dear Ann Landers: Several of my friends were discussing the letter from the girl who said she was getting a great deal more pleasure out of her poodles than her two married children. My friends were surprised. I wasn't. I know what goes on with pets in this country and it's disgraceful.

Last summer we travelled a lot. One day when the maid came in to make up our bed the bathroom door was closed. She asked, "Is there a dog in there?" When I said "No" she heaved a sigh of relief and told us that she had been bitten by dogs and scratched by cats-pets of hotel guests who had shut them up in the bathroom and neglected to tell her that they were there. She also described what these animals did to the rugs, bedspreads and furniture. She was disgusting.

We witnessed one scene I'll never forget. A mother and father were swimming in a shallow river with their two small children and the family dog. They were short one life jacket, so the dad kid, about 11, didn't get a jacket. The mutt had one, however.

That same family spent the night in the motel room next to ours and the mutt howled till 4 a.m. My bet is off to all hotel and motel managers who say "No Dogs Allowed".—Barbarville, Ky.

Dear Barb: Make that two bats. Thanks for writing.

Family Cooking

Easy Elegance for Meal Finale

By ALICE DENSHOFF

Holiday parties bring out the call for a most elegant dessert as the finale to a delicious meal. After delectables that are somewhat on the heavy side—desserts, such as plum pudding, pumpkin pie and mince pie—something light and fluffy is usually welcome. Here, then, is a recipe for a dessert that is special enough for even the most discriminating cooks, one that can be made the day before and refrigerated until serving time. And it uses a package pie filling to ease things a bit.

KEY LIME TORTE

½ cup sugar
½ cup shortening
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg yolks
1½ cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
6 egg whites
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup sugar
½ cup slivered almonds
1 package key lime pie filling
½ cup sugar
2 egg yolks
2½ cups water

To prepare the cake, cream sugar, shortening and vanilla until fluffy. Add four egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Sift together next three ingredients and add alternately with milk, beating well. Divide batter evenly and spread in two nine-inch cake pans lined with paper.

Next, for the meringue, beat egg whites until foamy. Add cream of tartar and beat until stiff peaks form. Add sugar by tablespoonfuls, beating well after each addition. Spread meringue on top of unbaked batter in cake pans. Sprinkle with slivered almonds. Bake in 300 degree Fahrenheit oven 1 hour or until meringue is firm and lightly browned. Cool well before removing from pans.

Now prepare pie filling according to package directions. Chill until set. Remove torte from pans. Place one layer, meringue side up, on serving plate; spread with chilled filling. Top with second layer, meringue side up. To do it up right, garnish with dollops of whipped cream, unless all the partakers are calorie-counters who don't want to overdo things.

Makes eight servings of a delicious, nutritious dessert.

There are some fine holiday desserts that are easier because they use a goodie from the local bake goods shop. Here is one such, an impressive, delecta ble:

HOLIDAY ANGEL TORTE

1 large angel food cake
1 jar (1 pound, 2¼ ounces or 1¾ cups) mincemeat
1 package (9-ounces) cream cheese
¾ cup chopped walnut meats
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

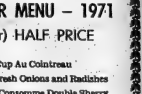
Slice angel food cake into three horizontal uniform layers. Blend mincemeat, cream cheese and nuts. Spread mincemeat mixture over tops of bottom and middle layers. Put layers together. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Before serving, spread cake top with whipped cream. Serves 10 to 12 and is a good party number.

Our commercial chocolates and candies are delicious and mostly, splendid value. But once in a while, especially holiday time, it is fun to run up a batch or two of homemade goodies, especially for personalized little gifts. A package, prettily wrapped and tied with a big red bow is one such idea. For a taste delight, fit for the most angelic of friends and gurush, prepare:

DIVINITY

2 cups sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
½ cup water
Dash of salt
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine first four ingredients in saucepan. Bring to a rolling boil; cook to medium-hard stage (240 degrees Farenheit). Remove from heat. Slowly pour 1/3 of hot mixture over beaten egg whites, beating constantly. Return remaining syrup to heat and cook to very hard-ball stage (265 degrees Farenheit). Pour into egg white mixture, beating constantly. Continue to beat just until mixture holds shape when dropped from spoon. Blend in vanilla. Drop onto greased cookie sheet by teaspoonfuls. If mixture becomes too hard to drop from spoon, add a few drops of hot water and beat until of desired consistency. Yields about two dozen pieces.



KEY LIME TORTE has just the right bit of tang in the filling. Meringue topping adds glamour to this dessert.

Montreal School Bill Debated

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec national assembly settled the question of minority representation on reorganized Montreal Island school boards Tuesday after cutting off a barrage of Parti Quebecois and Creditiste amendments focussing on the linguistic aspects of the legislation.

Denis Hardy, chairman of debate in committee of the whole, said after day-long discussions of three Parti-Quebecois amendment proposals aimed at establishing language priorities in the bill were inadmissible.

Such amendments introduced new principles to the bill, steps which are not allowed during debate before third and final reading, he said.

The bill, which would trim Montreal's 33 Protestant and Roman Catholic school boards to 11 or fewer neutral boards under an island-wide council, has already passed approval in principle.

The decision brought PQ legislature Lader Camille Laurin to the floor charging that Premier Robert Bourassa was not living up to his promises made during the 1970 provincial election campaign that French was the priority language of Quebec.

One of the Parti Quebecois amendments asked that French be made the official language of all the unified Montreal school boards while another revised this somewhat by asking for bilingual boards in the case of school boards with English-speaking majorities.

On the question of minority representation on the boards, the government adopted its own revised article allowing the provincial cabinet to appoint two observers to a school board if electioner did not give minority English or French language groups in the area served at least one representative.

In its original form, the article proposed that the appointed members have voting rights.

After criticisms from various groups during legislative committee hearings, the article was amended changing the status of the government appointees to observers who could discuss but not vote.

Dickens' A Christmas Carol Is Beloved Classic of Season

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Born out of the poverty and strife of an age not far in the past, Charles Dickens' immortal tale of an old man's change of heart has been revered at Christmas time throughout the world. A Christmas Carol . . . what would the Yuletide season be without it . . . was written in an age where poverty was a way of life for most.

Hordes of ragged, dirty children roamed the streets of England, earning a living as best they could, by hook or by crook and mostly the latter. Youngsters, hoping for a penny for a small coin, would rush to sweep the road clean for any lady or gentleman passing by. Others would hold bridles of waiting horses for a penny or less.

By the River Thames, boys called "mudlarks" waded in the muck at low tide, searching for bits of iron or lead to sell. Thousands of these ragged urchins never went to school, never had a decent meal, or even half a chance at life.

They spent their days picking pockets, begging and stealing to take home a few pence to their families living in tumbled down houses and miserable alleys which, if they were only inhabited by rats, might have been considered a luxury.

In the factory towns, children of six and seven years worked at machines from early morning until evening, for meagre pennies. Their mothers worked 12 to 14 hours a day as well, and yet there never was quite enough to eat, and few articles of warm clothing.

Factories were not the only means of livelihood for the workers of industrial England. Coal mines annually claimed hundreds of lives of women and children who toiled in the bowels of the earth.

The streets were filled with colorful figures scratching out a living and selling everything and anything.

These street dwellers were to provide characters for the fledgling author whose works flourished in this age.

There were the costermongers who sold fruit, vegetables and other morsels from their donkey-barrows. Roughly dressed, they were lively men, outfitted in cordovans with pearly buttons. Fond of gambling, singing and fighting, they were wed in their donkeys and bulldogs.

Hordes of street-sellers, offering anything from fly-paper, walking sticks, whips, pipes, snuff and tobacco boxes, to old clothes, combs and spoons, dogs' meat, hot eels, live animals and birds, and the inevitable "fresh violets," piled their wares through the cobbled and dirt streets.

Through the eye of Dickens readers of any of his well-known tales get a clear picture of the human element which existed even in times of abject poverty.

The second child of a family of eight, Charles Dickens was born near Portsmouth, England, on Feb. 7, 1812, the son of a struggling navy pay clerk. His early years were spent in Chatham, where the future author gained some schooling and a good deal of county life.

When he was nine, the family moved to London, setting up house in the poorest of the capital city's suburbs.

In 1824, John Dickens was arrested and thrown into the Marshalsea debtors prison. The family eventually powered all the household effects to survive, but even the books were spared.

As an alternative to starvation, prison became the family house. For two years young Charles worked as a drudge in a tumble-down, rat-infested blacking factory, pasting labels onto bottles of stove polish.

When a small legacy was received, the senior Dickens was able to clear his debts. He obtained employment as a reporter on the Morning Chronicle. Charles was sent to school.

He began studying law in 1827, but gave up this idea to follow in his father's footsteps. He became a newspaper reporter, later a magazine writer and eventually a novelist.

In 1834 he published the first of his Sketches by Boz. Two years later he began the publication of Pickwick Papers. This work brought him immediate popularity and it was followed in 1838 by Oliver Twist, the first of a long succession of novels serialized in newspapers and magazines.

In October of 1843, he went to Manchester to preside at the opening of its literary centre, the Athenaeum. Fond of strolls, Dickens took regular walks through city streets, especially in shabby neighborhoods in search of characters and scenes to be developed in his novels.

As he stood in a darkened shop door in a Manchester street one evening, watching the flow of downtrodden humanity passing by, the first germ of an idea which was to blossom into his Yuletide classic, began to form. The figure of Scrooge . . . the infamous grouch . . . began to materialize.

This greedy old man, whose avarice and bitterness kept him from enjoying the brighter side of life, would stand for all that was unchristian in the industrial world of the mid-Victorian era. Dickens portrayed this miserable wretch as harsh as only his pen could make him.

Scrooge became a "squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old sinner." It was through the conversion of this lost soul that Dickens wished to convert society. The Scrooge who emerged through the trials and tribulations of his worst and yet, best, Christmas eve, would become a symbol of justice and brotherly love.

The story began to take shape in his active mind almost immediately. Upon arrival back in London, Dickens locked himself in his study and put the work to paper. Working at a feverous pace, his excitement turned to vocal laughter as he danced at the Fezziwigs' party and partook of Christmas dinner with the Bob Cratchits.

The famous author wept openly as he forced the trembling Scrooge to see his own despised corpse despoiled by thieves and buried in an isolated graveyard. The Spirit of Christmas Yet to Come spared him not. The wretched miser saw himself for what he was . . . a lonely, unwanted, and unloved old man.

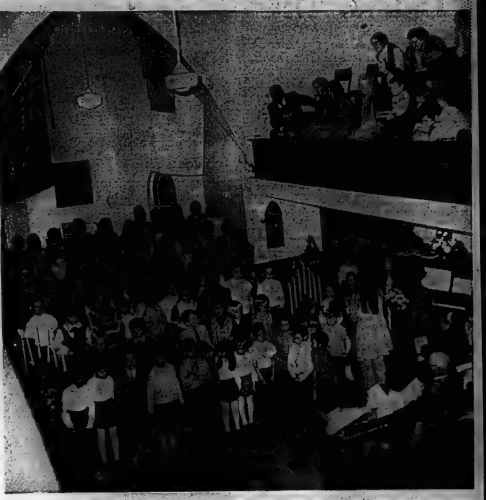
By Christmas Dickens went to the boot-stands several days before Christmas. It was an immediate success. Dickens was well pleased.

He told a friend, "the little Carol is the greatest success. I am told, that this rubs and rascal has ever achieved." But above the praise from literary critics and friends, Dickens valued the opinions and reactions which came from the poor.

Letters poured into his mail pouch for years. They were blotched, scrawled on cheap paper or even from families like the Cratchits, who wanted to express thanks for having given this book to the world. A Christmas Carol held a place of honor on most family bookshelves. It was withdrawn and overdrawn and loved to the whole family at the time of year when peace, joy and brotherhood is personified

Charles Dickens died June 9, 1870, when he was 58 years old and at the height of his creative ability.

His last will and testament, written in 1869, held a simple message:



"I rest my claims to the remembrance of my country upon my published work."

The real author would set no other monument, memorial or testimonial to follow his stirring life. With the simplest of private ceremonies, he was laid to rest in Westminster Abbey, under a plain slab which in the days to follow bore only his name and the dates of his birth and death.

His immortal tale came to life several times as movie producers attempted to capture a visual portrayal from the pages of his well-known story.

One of the most popular productions, released in 1938, starred veteran British actor Alistair Sim, and supporting Cathleen Harri-on. Unfortunately, the excellent black-and-white film was never released in colour. Several times each December, including Mayor J. Russell Scott, CKLB-FM's Uncle Old Ald. Ben Corke Monday questioned the cast side decision, but Alderman Bryan Bridge, as chairman of the traffic committee, has decided and had been prompted on recommendation of technical staff.

The traffic council was to send the bylaw on to the city council at the end of the two objections will order a public hearing.

The Amelisburg community turned out in mass Monday to show their appreciation for the entertainment provided by the children of grades 1 to 6 of Redneersville and Mildred Corke schools. A fitting climax to the all-youth program was public recognition to Mrs. Ian Morch of Redneersville for her contribution to the success of the presentation.

Snowmobile Bylaw Needs Clarification Alderman Says

It's snowmobile time of year again and already discussion of the machines and who should be permitted to drive them has commenced at city council.

Monday Alderman Gerald Joyce, who admits to owning a couple of the machines, said a local snowmobile bylaw was difficult to understand and misdemeanor is probable in the newspaper in a simplified form so that all could understand.

But first the city recreation and arena commission and the parks board will be asked to review the bylaw and come up with a decision whether persons 16 years of age and under should be allowed to operate snowmobiles.

Under provincial law, persons operating snowmobiles on public streets must be 18 years of age and have a driver's licence.

But no such regulation applies in the open country and the city bylaw allows under-16 drivers in parks where the machines are permitted.

Insurance companies sell package policies for snowmobile operation covering all members of the family.

Alderman Joyce, whose insurance firm sells snowmobile coverage, said that normally it was not the under-16 drivers who get involved in accidents.

"We've never paid a claim for an under-16 driver," he said. "Usually it's the Old Man driving stoned at 2 a.m."

Sidewalk Decision To OMB

East Side, West Side — That's the question with respect to which side of proposed Sidney Street sidewalk should be constructed and city council has decided to let the Ontario Municipal Board decide.

Council some weeks ago approved one sidewalk construction of the proposed walk between Dundas and Bridge streets and the construction bylaw was prepared.

But the east side owners — Albert College and Ameriean Optical — objected and the matter was back before council yesterday.

Several council members, including Mayor J. Russell Scott, Ald. Ben Corke and Ald. Ben Corke Monday questioned the east side decision, but Alderman Bryan Bridge, as chairman of the traffic committee, said the decision had been prompted on recommendation of technical staff.

The traffic council was to send the bylaw on to the city council at the end of the two objections will order a public hearing.

Full House for Carol Service

REDNERSVILLE (Staff) — The Christmas story was retold in the presentation here Monday by grades 1 to 6 pupils of Redneersville and Mildred Corke schools.

Adults showed their appreciation as the presentation attracted one of the largest crowds ever assembled in the United Church building.

The children, in splendid voice, entertained with seasonal music and showed acting promise in portraying the legends and customs of Christmas. Everyone joined in when the children concluded the program with carol singing.

The pupils and teachers of both schools recognized Mrs. Ian Morch RR 1 Belleville, for her contribution to the success of the concert. She spent two and a half weeks preparing the children and supervised the proceedings last night.

Trenton Vetoes Station

TRENTON (Staff)—Council moved briefly out of committee of the whole session into its regular session Monday to approve the number of service stations in the town.

Faced with a petition from gas station proprietors, council resolved not to revise the number of retail outlets. Approval of an increase in stations would have permitted construction of a new $250,000 service centre.

Shell Canada had told council it would transform the Dundas East - Byron Street intersection into "the showcase corner of Trenton," if the ceiling on outlets were lifted from the present 11.

A majority of service station owners objected strenuously to an expansion of the number in town and council Monday acceded to their request, balking at change.

The meeting was held by the machi ters' union to discuss changes of labor legislation and new ... and to express some concerns for these recent changes.

In Appreciation

Miss Pam Payne and Mrs. Rea (Betty) Rolston made the presentation of a basket of flowers and carnations to Mrs. Ian Morch on behalf of the pupils and teachers of the two schools taking part.

Jesus Christ Faced Hostility from the Moment of His Birth

This third instalment is a five-part Christmas series about the events associated with the Nativity itself, the birth of that singular see, Jesus.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

He was born in a dusky stable, the son of the wife of a migrant carpenter in a conquered, exploited land, and He lived as a man of the poor always facing official hostility.

But His impact suffuses the world, fired its ideals, its hope. And the present era dawned.

"Emmanuel. His friend, Matthew, said of Him, "God with us."

It was an unparalleled occurrence in human annals, the "Incarnation," believers call it, the divine becoming man.

How it happened, how He could be both infinite and finitely human and what it means have engrossed thinkers ever since.

The "absolute paradox," the brooding Danish philosopher, Soren A. Kierergaard, termed it.

Many of the unlikely conversions have faded, however, in a modern culture dulled to spiritual realities and unprecedented pleasures. Amid it all, the image of Jesus persists unexplained, unreconciled, transcending the old debates.

He reveals that "all of human history is swalled in God's love," says Roman Catholic theologian Edward Schillebeeckx. Through him, "God now stands in our midst in a tangible manifestation in a form so we can truly bump into Him."

This was a prime point of Jesus' mission—to proclaim a mending of the gap between God and man, to draw them nearer, to reconcile and unite, to forge that bond Himself in man's behalf.

The studies go on, progressing and expanding, into the immemorial issues. One of them involves the doctrine that Jesus was born of the Virgin Mary through the power of the Holy Spirit, without a human father.

"Let it be to me according to thy word," Mary said, in that enchanting scene of the angelic announcement and of her willing assent.

Which always is a factor in the divine approach to humanity.

The beauty and power of the story are not questioned among Christians, nor are its profound implications. But what literary method was used in getting them across is an issue of keen feelings in some quarters.

"It is very surprising that the doctrine of the virgin birth should arouse such controversy," says Anglican theologian John Macquarrie, adding that it is not the physiological details but their meaning that is vital to faith.

That meaning, clearly, is that Christ's origin was in God, that divine initiative was behind His advent. To convey this, writers of the gospels in an "appropriate symbol," Macquarrie says, and the basic truth is not in question.

However, many Bible scholars, both Protestant and some Roman Catholics, now question whether the process counts, recorded only in Matthew and Luke, are intended as factual journalism or as rich imagery to convey realities that could not be reduced to prose.

It's not a matter of questioning that "Jesus was God's unique Son," says Catholic Bible scholar Raymond E. Brown.

"Protestant and Catholic theologians firmly agree that Jesus would be no less divine if He had two human parents rather than one and that human fatherhood does not exclude divine fatherhood," he adds.

However, he notes that while most New Testament material is based on the testimony of the disciples who accompanied Jesus, they were on hand to report the infancy stories, and the basis for them remains uncertain.

Also, neither the oldest gospel, Mark, nor the most interpretative gospel, John, mention the virgin birth. Nor do any of 23 other books of the New Testament, including letters of Paul that are earlier than any of the gospels.

Roman Catholic theologian Gregory Baum suggests the infancy narratives may be a common Jewish literary form called "midrash" in which the Virgin Mary stands for a virgin, faithful Israel through whom the redeemer comes to the world.

In any case, he adds, the meaning is clear—that Jesus' entry into the world was "something new" and that, basically He came "not from His human ancestors but from God and Mary."

Early non-biblical writings opposed to Jesus claim His birth was illegitimate, and it is hard to explain where this calumny came from unless there was something unusual about His birth.

Also, there had been no expectation in Judaism of a virgin-born messiah, and the infancy narratives differ strikingly from stories in pagan religions of "supernatural births" to human mothers.

The gist of it is that Jesus is "truly God's gift, and not man's achievement," says Lutheran theologian George W. Forell. "The movement is from God to man and not from the redeemer comes to the world.

In any case, he adds, the meaning is clear—that Jesus' entry into the world was "something new" and that, basically He came "not from His human ancestors but from God and Mary."

Yet, the mystery of Him continues, a mystery first wrapped in the mingled greatness" and "tangled mess" of Bethlehem, that rough, yet tender setting where the harshness and grandeur of life came together.

"It is not only comforting but disturbing, too," says Lutheran scholar Edmund A. Steimle. "It means that God sees possibilities for greatness in our most ordinary of ordinary lives."

And the peasant Jewish girl, Mary, sang of it:

My spirit rejoices in God my Saviour, for He has regarded the low estate of his handmaiden . . . Henceforth all generations will call me blessed; for He who is mighty has done great things for me and holy is His name.

She gave birth to her first born son, wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger.

And an angel voice heralded the "news of great joy . . . for to you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord."

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace among men with whom He is pleased!"

Junior Curlers Get Chance For Ontario Title

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

When you've beaten the number two team, you should be number one.

Things aren't quite that simple for Pete Reston's Belleville rink, but it does provide some indications that the foursome has a good chance for a provincial curling title.

The Belleville team defeated an Ottawa Navy Rink rated number two in the province last season in their recent Zone finals. However, the win by Reston's foursome means only that they will have the chance to prove they're number one at the Ontario Junior Curling Championship beginning in Toronto next Monday.

The Quinte curlers will be among six teams vying for the Ontario Tankard with other zone winners from across the province.

The team has been undefeated in playoffs so far this season winning their divisional championship, then advancing to meet the Division 4 champions from Peterborough. After disposing of Peterborough 12-4 and 11-5 they moved on to best Ottawa Navy 12-8 in a sudden death game for the Zone title.

One thing in the Belleville rink's favor will be their experience as a team. Three of the four members played together last season when they went all the way to the finals of the Ontario School Boy Curling championships, finishing fourth in that event.

Reston, a grade 13 Moira student, has been a member of the Quinte Curling Club for five years and has said four years experience as a skip.

His vice-skip Ross Riley has been curling with Reston for the past four seasons. The first-year Loyalist engineering student has also been a member of the Quinte club for four seasons.

The team's third veteran member is lead Jim Lenzi, another five-year curler. The grade 13 BCI student has been curling with the Reston rink for three years.

The newcomer to the group is Dennis LeBrun, a first-year engineering student at Loyalist College. He has been a member of the CFB Trenton rink for four years, competing on a junior team that placed fourth in Canada two years ago.

Just how important this experience as a unit? "It's very important," notes Reston. "Curling probably requires more team work than most sports.

Junior curling representative Murray Johnson agrees with this point of view. "Curling isn't an individual sport at all. You can have a team with one real hotshot, that will be beaten by another that works well together."

The Reston rink prefers to play a knockout type of game rather than relying heavily on outdrawing the opposition. "We were told last year at the School Boy finals that we were one of the best knock-out teams there," related the skip.

The finals will be a round robin event with each team playing five games. First round winners will remain in contention for the Tankard, while the losers will play off for the Russell Trophy.

Play will begin Monday morning at the Boulevard Curling Club in Toronto and will continue until Wednesday. The Reston rink is scheduled for two games Monday, three Tuesday and a single Wednesday encounter.

'Now I'd Play It Here'

Members of Pete Reston's rink appear to have different ideas about just where the next curling shot should be played. Actually the rink members think pretty much along the same lines with teamwork being one of their strong points in a bid for an Ontario Junior Curling Championship next week. Members of the rink include Pete Reston, skip; Ross Riley, vice-skip; Dennis LeBrun, second and Jim Lovett, lead.

Wilson Settles In Second Spot

Wilson Concrete switched roles with Jim's Pizzeria last night to move in within one point of the Gas House Hockey League leaders.

Wilson's, who have tied three games this season recorded a 2-0 win over Maud Johnson, while Jim's were being held to a 4-4 draw by the Hospital. In other Tuesday games the Inteli and Rollins Lumber battled to a 2-2 tie, while the Teachers polished off Cassidy Electric by an 8-1 score.

Vern Fraser continued his outstanding netminding work for the Concrete team to hang the 2-0 loss on Maud Johnson. The losers had been in second place before the game.

Scoring for Wilson's were Peter Engels and Ron McClocklin, while Dave Millar assisted on both goals.

A two-goal effort by George Jacklin helped carry the Hospital to their 4-4 tie with Jim's. Linesmate Moe Hunter notched a goal and two assists while Bob Vaughan recorded the other goal.

Steve White paced the Pizzamakers with a goal and two assists with the other tallies going to Wayne Brown, Jr., Allan Ray and Carl Boomhower.

Damien Richardson scored both Rollins Lumber goals to pace his team to a 2-2 deadlock with the Inteli. Scoring for the newmen were Dennis Baragar and Ray Sammers, both while the Printers were short-handed.

The Teachers got a pair of goals from Vince Steiner, Pat Asselstine and Tom Nigro in their 8-1 rout of Cassidy's. Bruce Rancicot and Brian MacKenzie added the other goals for the winners. The losers lone tally went to Dave Hicks.

BCI Hoopsters Still Unbeaten

BCI basketball teams continued with a clean Bay of Quinte COSSA slate Tuesday night by sweeping a triple-header from Nicholson Catholic College. It was the fifth straight win for the Collegian squads.

The senior game proved to be a real cliff-hanger with BCI finally edging with a 72-68 win after three minutes of overtime play. The teams had been deadlocked at 62-62 at the end of regulation time.

Wayne Gillies paced the team with 20 points, and along with Keith Watson picked up the key overtime baskets. Peter Scott pumped in 15 Collegian points with Stan Wilkinson adding 14, Watson 10 and Jim Wilson nine. For Nicholson it was centre John Garvin hitting for 23 points and Tim Culshaw adding another 20.

BCI's juniors had an easy time en route to a 48-21 win as Mike Bell hooped 16 points. Larry Wilson 10 and Peter LeBaron nine.

The midget Collegians also had far the better of play in a 51-24 win. Ross Edmonds scored 19 BCI points with Nick Barratt adding eight. For the losers, six players scored four points each.

New PGA Format

NEW YORK (AP) — A revised format and unique doubleheader attraction were announced Tuesday for the second annual United States Professional Match Play golf championship next year.

The twin-headed event, consisting of a 16-man match play tournament and a 72-hole stroke play competition, will take place Aug. 24-27, at the Country Club of North Carolina in Pinehurst, N.C.

Total prize money will be $250,000, with $150,000 for the match play event and $100,000 for the four-day normal tour tournament. The two tournaments will be staged on the same course.

The first Match Play championship will be staged at Pinehurst last year, with 64 players vying in stroke play eliminations.

The 1972 tournament will be at orthodox match play, with the competitor winning the most holes the victor. This is the popular style of play that was used for the U.S. amateur championship and the national PGA before television dictated a change in format.

The inaugural Match Play championship last year, in which players matched full 18-hole cards instead of holes, was criticized in some quarters as not being match play in the purest sense. It was won by dark horse Dewitt Weaver after such stars as Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player bowed in early rounds.

The 72-hole stroke play event will be played Aug. 24-27 with 144 starters, normal for the tour.

Lakers' Streak Longest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

No team in the modern history of professional sports has ever won more games in a row than the National Basketball Association's Los Angeles Lakers have this season.

The amazing Lakers run their NBA record string to 28 victories Tuesday night with a 117-105 victory over Buffalo Braves, but it wasn't as easy as the score makes it sound.

Los Angeles had to come from behind after trailing the Braves by as much as 15 points but Jerry West and Wilt Chamberlain combined for 40 second half points to key the Laker rally.

Elsewhere in the NBA Tuesday night, Chicago Bulls blitzed Detroit Pistons 127-92, Phoenix Suns defeated Philadelphia 76ers 124-119, Houston Rockets took Portland Trail Blazers 112-104, New York Knicks whipped Golden State Warriors 113-87.

In the American Basketball Association it was Kentucky 113, Pittsburgh 111 Utah 106, Dallas 96, and Denver 113, Indiana 108.

The Lakers' 28 victories in a row matches the mark established by baseball's New York Giants in 1916. The team is 22-3 for the season and has not lost since Oct. 31. LA was the first team in NBA history to go through an entire month—November—without a loss. Now they're hoping to make it two months.

LA trailed 50-45 at halftime against the Braves and Buffalo coach Johnny McCarthy said, "we had the game in our hands."

Hornets Give Selves Bon Voyage Gift

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets gave themselves a going-away present Tuesday night before leaving for Europe as they slipped Owen Sound Crescents 4-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action.

The win for the visiting Hornets, who tour Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland early in the new year, increased their edge over second-place Barrie Flyers to eight points in the standings.

The Flyers, however, have four games in hand.

The other contest Tuesday night also saw the visiting club come out on top as Oakville Oaks moved into undisputed possession of fourth place by edging Orillia Terriers 6-5.

Ron Hergott and Bill Whay each tallied twice for Galt.

Dave McComb fired two for the last-place Crescents and Mayo Paquett scored once.

In Orillia, Jim O'Brien was the big gun for the Oaks as he came up with his second three-goal performance in as many nights in the Oaks' come-from-behind victory.

Dick Smith, Pat Adair and Ted Bayliss scored the other Oakville goals as the club erased the 4-1 lead the Terriers built up in the first period. Mike Draper paced the Terriers with two goals, and Grant Moore, Jim Keon and Jon Weeks added the others.

The league is idle until Sunday when Belleville Quintes visits Kingston Aces and Orillia is at Owen Sound and Oakville travels to Woodstock to meet the Royals.

Stars' Blair Follows Imlach Old-age Plan

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Wren Blair decided to forgo plans to win the Stanley Cup with young legs since the Minnesota North Stars fortunes took a sudden upward twist.

Two years ago Blair never would have given a second thought to smacking his Stars with greybeards, but after a season with personnel ranging from such National Hockey League patriarchs as Wayne Connelly and Ted Harris, the loquacious general manager now is a believer in the Punch Imlach doctrine.

Linemates Dean Prentice, 39, Murray Oliver, 34, and Lou Nanne, a youngster at 28, stoked the North Stars to their goals Tuesday night in a 3-2 win over Los Angeles Kings.

The victory carried Minnesota to within five points of West Division-leading Chicago Black Hawks and opened up an almost insurmountable 9-point lead over third-place California Golden Seals.

It was the only game scheduled.

After three mediocre years of trying to develop his 1967 expansion club around young kids, Blair finally broke with tradition in an effort to improve by purchasing outright Murray Oliver from Montreal in February, 1970.

Harris, too, came from Montreal in the June, 1970 draft.

In between, Blair acquired NHL nomad Oliver from Toronto Maple Leafs in what must be considered a steal by the wily little trader from Lindsay, Ont.

In exchange, the Stars gave Toronto defenceman Terry O'Malley, who never did make it in the NHL, and forward Brian Conacher who was reluctant to return to hockey from his television announcer's job in Windsor, Ont.

MURRAY OLIVER

Conacher did come out, of retirement this year, but only after Toronto sold him to Detroit, just across the river from Windsor.

Oliver was no instant sensation in the mid-west, but his playoff performance against Montreal last spring and his play to date in the 1971-72 season have the hostily Blair's bartering.

He has added other aged veterans; Ted Hampson, 35, from California, Doug Mohns, 36, from Chicago, Bert Nevin, 32, from New York and Prentice in a cash deal with Pittsburgh early this season.

"I used to think it was important to build an NHL club around youth," Blair said recently, "good, young, strong legs that could skate all night.

"Then the opportunity arose to take on an older player or two. We saw how Worsley helped our team in the 1970 playoff drive. Harris has been the anchor of our defence. The truth is we've got younger players, good ones, who can't skate with some of these veterans.

"So I don't need any more about a guy's age."

Simple philosophy, mind you, but one that Punch Imlach used successfully in Toronto where he masterminded four championship teams in 10 years.

Martin Prefers Wrist Shot

BOSTON (AP) — One man Boston Bruins will have to look out for Thursday night in their game at Buffalo against the Sabres is rookie forward Richard Martin.

The best goal-scorer I've ever coached," said Buffalo's Punch Imlach.

Martin, 20, has played only 34 games in the National Hockey League. During that period he has registered 21 goals and 16 assists for 37 points with a struggling team, placing him among some distinguished company.

"In this league," Martin says, "I've been found it is better to go with the wrist shot than the slap shot.

"The quick release is very important. You can't get away with the slap shot the way you could in the juniors."

At least the Bruins have been forewarned.

Cowboys Concerned About Weather Offered by Viking Hosts

DALLAS (AP) — Minnesota coach Bud Grant may feel weather is a "state of mind," but it's the talk of this town.

While the mercury hovers near the 60s here as Dallas Cowboys practice for the National Conference playoff game with the Vikings, the newspapers run daily boxes on what it's like in the frozen north.

"Ice Bowl — Minneapolis Monday. High 24. Low 17." So runs a box on the front of the Dallas Times Herald sports page.

Dallas Black Hawks of the Central Hockey League even invited the Cowboys over for a workout on the ice. It was politely refused.

The Cowboys fear a situation similar to 1967 against Green Bay Packers in the National Football League playoff. It was 17 below zero and dropping at kickoff. Dallas lost in the final seconds on a frozen field.

"It was unbelievable that day," said Danny Reeves, a survivor, who now is player-coach. Numerous players got frost bite.

But more important, the conditions hampered Dallas' high-powered offense.

The Cowboys are leading the league in passing-this year. The offense is like a closely-tuned racing car which functions best with a fast track.

"Frozen hands and fingers don't do the passer and the receivers any good," said defensive tackle Bob Lilly.

However, Reeves points out:

"We played Green Bay a heck of a game that day. They were slipping and sliding as much as we were."

Cowboy general manager Tex Schramm says: "Actually the temperature had very little to do with the eventual way the game turned out. I'm sure we could have played better under warmer conditions but maybe the Packers could too."

Coach Tom Landry plans to make the trip north Friday.

"If we have to work out in a new bank we'll work out," Landry says. "Then we'll go out and play the game the next day."

Filion Leads Pack

TORONTO (CP) — Herve Filion, world-champion harness-racing driver from Angers, Que., is the 1971 winner of the Lou Marsh Trophy as the outstanding athlete in Canada.

The trophy honors the memory of the late sports editor of the Toronto Star. Filion was chosen by a selection committee under chairman Harry (Red) Foster and comprising sports editors Jim Proudfoot, The Star; Jim Vipond, The Globe and Mail; George Gross, the Toronto Sun, and Bruce Levett, The Canadian Press, and Star columnist Milt Dunnell.

Runners-up were Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, for the last five years a 20-game winner in baseball's National League with Chicago Cubs; Phil Esposito, National Hockey League scoring champion from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Gary Cowan of Kitchener, winner of the United States amateur golf championship.

Filion is only the fourth professional athlete to win the Lou Marsh award since its inception in 1936. Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins of the NHL won in 1970 and Russ Jackson of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League took it in 1969. The only other pro athlete ever to make the roll was football quarterback Joe Krol of Toronto Argonauts in 1948.

Filion holds the career record for most victories, coming home first 3,451 times. He had 534 victories this year, another world mark, as his earnings total of more than $1,770,000 for one season.

Sports on All Fronts

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Next year's Wimbledon men's singles winner will get a prize of $13,000 and will be able to keep it all himself. The women's champion will receive $5,780.

The All-England Tennis Club, announcing the Wimbledon prize structure for 1972, said Tuesday the 10% travelling expenses will be deducted from the prizes this time. This is the result of the ban on the World Championship Tennis professionals.

Last year WCT demanded 25 per cent of all prize money won by its players. So to be fair to everybody the All-England Club handed over 25 per cent of prizes to the national associations sponsoring other players.

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Muhammad Ali had his first serious workout Tuesday for last Dec. 25 fight against Juergen Blin of West Germany.

Still overweight but talking less than usual, Ali sweated away before 1,000 fans—at $3.75 a head including 300 school children paying half price.

LES CONTAMINES, France (Reuter) — Switzerland's Marie-Therese Nadig won the women's giant slalom in the Eur—ean Cup ski meeting in this Alpine resort Tuesday.

Miss Nadig recorded a time of one minute 23.60 seconds to beat Michele Jacot of France by 0.15 of a second.

Judy Crawford of Toronto, winner of the special slalom Monday, finished 18th in Tuesday's event run in fine weather and good snow conditions on the 1,317-metre course with 43 gates and a 320-metre drop.

But Miss Crawford took second place in the combined placings behind Spain's Conchita Puig, who was second Monday and 11th Tuesday.

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite a strong second-half season at the gate and wagering windows, figures released by Blue Bonnets Raceway Tuesday show a decline in both departments from last season.

Only the per capita betting figure showed an increase. It was $38.32 this year compared with $37.86 in 1970.

Does Bud Grant Flip Three Coins?

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — How does Bud Grant really select the starting quarterback for Minnesota Vikings?

Grant, the Vikings' successful coach who has a five-year National Football League regular season record of 46-31-3, sticks to his system of not naming his quarterback until the Friday before each game. And he comes up with either Gary Cuozzo, Bob Lee or Norm Snead.

You can never be sure which.

There are few facts made public as to how Grant arrives at his weekly selection, leading to suggestions that perhaps he has the three flip coins for the job . . . or draw straws . . . or past-pass-and-kick.

Whatever Grant does, it has been good for the Vikings. They soared to an 11-3 regular season record—no team was better this NFL season—and qualified to meet Dallas at 1 p.m. EST Saturday in a National Conference semi-final playoff.

"Seems like the thing to do, Grant replies when asked for his reasoning.

"All three of our quarterbacks start out on an equal basis in practice. Wait until Friday," Grant answers on who will start the next game.

Things are no different for the Dallas game. Grant will reveal his starting quarterback on Christmas Eve.

"But Frels it's the best way to operate, said Cuozzo. "We all want to play and we all get along fine. We don't have any problems among ourselves. Whoever gets the nod, plays. It's worked so far."

All three quarterbacks are sent out to operate what Grant says must be an offence without a lot of frills, an offence that avoids the mistakes and then caushes in when the other one makes the breaks.

Lee does not stay in the pocket as much as Cuozzo and Snead. He'll scramble out of danger to throw and he'll roll out.

Snead has seen the least action of the three. His best moment this year came when he relieved Cuozzo against New York Giants. He ambled out on to the Yankee Stadium field, paused to seemingly hitch up his belt and then potted out a 17 10 victory by firing a 35-yard touchdown pass to Bob Grim.

Cuozzo, who is nearing completion on his studies to become an orthodontist, goes Sead his work precisely rarely coming up with the big surprise play. He is the most predictable of the three.

Midweek speculation suggests Lee would have the early lead to start against the cowboys after passing for 271 yards and two touchdowns against Chicago. But Cuozzo and Sonad have experience against Dallas. And Cuozzo has more playoff experience.

Only Bud Grant knows for sure and he won't say until Friday.

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — John Mazur, who coached New England Patriots this season to their best record since 1966, was given a new one-year contract Tuesday.

Mazur, 46, former quarterback under Frank Leahy at Notre Dame, led the Patriots this year to a 6-8 record after the team won only two games in the previous season.

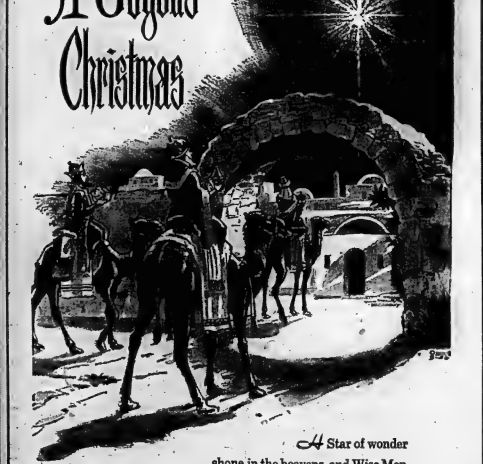
NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore Colts issued an official statement Tuesday defending their integrity and revealing that their upset defeat by new England Patriots cost many players and coaches bonuses promised if the club had won the Eastern Division Title in the American Football Conference.



Citing stories suggesting the Colts may have lost to the Patriots because they preferred to meet Cleveland Browns rather than Kansas City Chiefs in a first-round playoff game, general manager Don Klosterman issued a statement

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Details of a trade which enabled Green Bay Packers to return veteran quarterback Zeke Bratkowski to their roster for the just-completed pro football season were revealed Tuesday by the Packers.

The Packers said they gave up a third-round draft choice to Minnesota Vikings, who had obtained playing rights to Bratkowski three years ago.

Bratkowski, 40, decided to return to the active playing ranks this season.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♥	Pass	3NT	Pass
7♥

Opening lead — kind of diamonds.

Here is a typical hand that illustrates the high effectiveness of the grand slam force convention. North's jump to five notrump directed South to bid seven hearts with two of the three top trump honors, and South duly obliged.

However, while the grand slam was a really excellent contract, it turned out that South had to play the hand extremely well, or he would have gone down. He realized at once that making the contract would be no problem at all if the spades were divided normally—that is, 3-3 or 4-2—and he consequently directed all his energies toward coping with a 5-1 division.

After winning the diamond lead with the ace, he drew five rounds of trumps, producing this position:

Declarer then played another trump, discarding a club from dummy, and East found that he could not afford to part with a spade, for South would then be able to make all the tricks by ruffing a spade in his hand. So East discarded the jack of clubs instead, hoping his partner had the queen.

South thereupon cashed the A-K-Q of spades, discarding two diamonds from his hand, and then played the ace of clubs, hoping to find East by now with the unguarded king. When the monarch duly appeared, South found himself exceptionally well rewarded for the careful steps he had taken to guard against the 5-1 spade break.

Driver Jailed For Four Years

Mr. Justice E. G. Moorhouse of the Ontario Supreme Court was told that Roberts sped away after the accident that left Robert Charles Allan, 30, of Toronto dead. His car was found abandoned south of Toronto the day after the accident.

Scrooge Just Being Natural

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ebenezer Scrooge, Christmas's famous sourpuss, may have been acting quite normally as he stamped about casting "Bah, humbugs" to the world.

At least that's the way several San Francisco psychiatrists see the Charles Dickens' grouch.

To Dr. Robert E. Cahan, Scrooge's humbugs may have been a sign of sanity in a world of frustration.

"There's no doubt," Cahan said Tuesday, "that Scrooge has become progressively more popular as people find out that Santa Claus has let them down."

He continued: "Santa Claus isn't possibly fulfil all those childhood hopes and dreams that make us less prepared for adult frustration."

Dr. Robert Wald said he views old Scrooge as a nonconformist and independent thinker who refused to be happy just because everybody else was running around weak in good will.

"Scrooge's greatest crime was that he lived before his time," said Wald. "He had the attitudes before Christmas Eve that everyone has afterward when their great expectations collide with reality."

It was only the threat of ultimately death, terrible aloneness and ghastly graveyards that coerced Scrooge on the Christmas Carol into adopting the required merry and forgiving attitude.

That, said Wald, was unfair.

"Actually, everyone owes Scrooge a debt of gratitude. All we have to do is smile a little, and compared with Scrooge, we're great people. Scrooge just takes the heat off us."

Dr. Earl Burgess, another psychiatrist, told reporters that muttering a hearty "Bah, humbug" takes the edge off our holiday frustrations.

"Getting angry when you're depressed is good for you. It's far better to get angry and behave like Scrooge than, say to jump off the Golden Gate Bridge."

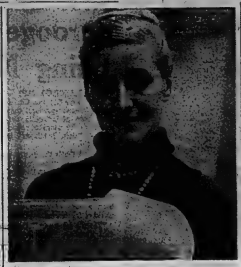
New Youth Bill Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee recommended Tuesday that the government scrap its controversial young offenders bill and draft a new one.

The committee, in a report tabled in the Commons by chairman Paul Gervais, (Liberal-Berthier), said the new bill should incorporate as many points raised by critics as the government deems advisable.

A steady stream of witnesses has appeared before the committee since last April, taking the young offenders bill to task as being legalistic, unclear and harsh in places.



The proposed legislation would have replaced the Juvenile Delinquents Act of 1929. But now it appears almost certain to be withdrawn for an extensive overhaul.

One consistent criticism was that unless more federal money is pumped into facilities a diagnose and treat errant youth, to amount of legislation will solve the problems.

Dollar Falls

TORONTO (CP) — The value of the Canadian dollar declined Tuesday on domestic currency markets to a closing value of slightly more than one-tenth of a cent above par with the United States dollar.

The closing value was down almost one-half cent from its value in U.S. dollar terms on Friday, before the Group of Ten finance ministers agreed to a realignment of currencies.

Cardinal Quits as Indians' President

EDMONTON (CP) — Harold Cardinal, one of Canada's most vocal Indian spokesmen, resigned Tuesday as president of the Indian Association of Alberta "to become involved in the day-to-day problems of the reserves."

The 26-year-old leader of 28,000 Alberta Indians announced his decision at a news conference where his successor, Clarence McHugh, 64, was introduced.

Mr. Cardinal said he was resigning because his relationship with Indian affairs Minister Jean Chretien had deteriorated "to the point where our personalities were becoming the issue."

He said as long as he remained president, the association would be denied the chance of another hearing before the Commons Indian affairs committee to clear up "accusations" made last month about the organization's accounting.

The "personal animosity" between Mr. Cardinal and Mr. Chretien began in 1969 when the federal government published its white paper on Indian policy, advocating removal of the Indians' special status and the turning over of reserve lands to band councils under the jurisdiction of provincial governments.

Mr. Cardinal and Alberta Indian chiefs replied with their own "red paper" which led to the federal proposal being shelved.

Last November, Mr. Cardinal charged that Mr. Chretien had delayed payment of funds to the association to force an end to the protests. Mr. Chretien said he withheld the funds because $130,000 of $330,000 allocated to the association had not been accounted for.

Last week, Mr. Cardinal produced a copy of what he said was a federal audit report dated July, 1971, in which the money was accounted for, and said Mr. Chretien had misinformed the committee.

A further hearing, requested by Mr. Cardinal, was refused by the Commons committee. With his resignation, Mr. Cardinal said he hoped the association would be allowed to clear its name and reputation without the government losing "its political face."

Mr. Cardinal, his bespectacled round face topped by a conservative hair style giving him the appearance of a high-school student, became president of the association in 1968.

In his 1969, he wrote the Unjust Society, a book considered required reading for those, white or red, who want to understand the viewpoint of Canada's 258,000 Indians.

Mail Truck Hijacked At Montreal Airport

MONTREAL (CP) — A mail truck was hijacked at Montreal International Airport late Tuesday by five men.

Suburban Dorval police said the truck was carrying $3 bags of mail, some of it registered, but they did not know if any money was stolen.

The truck was making a regular run between 11 p.m. and 11:45 p.m. when two cars cut it off on the access road from the airport.

Police said a couple witnessed the hijacking and were forced to join the convoy of two cars and the truck to the Decarie Expressway interchange where they managed to get away.

Police said the truck was found about three hours later in St. Jacques, about 30 miles north of Montreal in the Laurentian foothills. The driver was not harmed.

$950,000 Missing

Detectives Hunt More Robbers

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto detectives were "tearing places apart" Tuesday in their search for more suspects in Windsor's million-dollar bank holdup Saturday.

By Tuesday, five persons were in custody in connection with the holdup and police here, in Windsor and in neighboring Mississauga were looking for up to six more people who may have been involved in the Royal Bank of Canada robbery.

They are also looking for about $950,000 of the stolen money.

At first, police believed that a steamer trunk recovered in a hotel room held more than $1-million of the loot.

"We have located what would appear to be over a million dollars in cash," said police chief Harold Adamson.

But later, when the money was counted by members of the bank's Windsor main branch staff, it was found to total $945,000.

"It's certainly the highest cash recovery we've ever made, but it's still far short," said a disappointed Supt. Adolphus Payne.

As police continued their lightning raids Inspector Maurice Richardson of the holdup squad said: "We're really tearing places apart."

Explaining some of the arrests, Insp. Richardson said that about 10 p.m. Monday about 10 Metro policemen burst into a second-floor room in a hotel off Highway 27.

"We had been keeping certain people under surveillance for a day or so," the inspector said.

The tip came from the police intelligence bureau some time after the well-planned, 12-minute holdup during which members of the staff were handcuffed together while robbers dressed as janitors cleaned out the vault.

Insp. Richardson said the surveillance had been done by the intelligence squad and the "mobile trackers" a rarely-publicized group of detectives who roam the province and are connected by a special radio band.

At the same time Monday night, Mississauga police recovered $11,000 in a raid on a Mississauga apartment and arrested two women.

Artist's Sketch of Frozen Food Processing Plant

Construction Started on New Plant

TRENTON (Staff) — Miron-Wiggers Construction Ltd. of Trenton began construction yesterday of the new factory for Robin Hood Multifoods Corp. in the town's expanding north industrial park.

Frank Miron, of the firm, indicated today his company's contract for the building of the new frozen food plant was signed last Friday for $380,000. Total cost will exceed $1 million. Robin Hood officials say they want to have the plant in operation by the summer of 1972.

Town council here a week ago resolved to sell Robin Hood a seven acre site on Sidney St. near Moore Business Forms.

The plant will produce an extensive line of frozen prepared foods for the consumer market under the Stouffer's brand name and will employ 35 in its initial year of operation.

A licensing agreement signed last year with Stouffer Foods Inc. of Solon, Ohio, allows Multifoods to produce and market Stouffer's prepared frozen foods in Canada. Multifoods' consumer products division will continue to test-market the products in London, Ont., and will be responsible for manufacturing and marketing the line in Canada.

This investment marks the company's entry into the growing frozen food business, said Logan R. Brown, president of Robin Hood Multifoods. Already popular in the United States, the Stouffer line consists of main course dishes ranging from short ribs of beef and lobster newberg to macaroni and cheese and pizza pies.

Mr. Brown said his company chose a site in Ontario for its new plant because that province represents over half of the Canadian frozen prepared food market.

The plant will be built on a seven-acre site north of Trenton near the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway.

Mr. Brown said entry into the frozen food market will accelerate diversification of the 80-year-old food company. With a large flour milling business as its base, multifoods in recent years added pickles, packaged dessert products, poultry meat, eggs and animal feeds to its product line. Non-flour products now account for 40 per cent of its sales which last year reached $104 million.

The company changed its name in 1970 from Robin Hood Flour Mills to Robin Hood Multifoods to reflect these changes, he said.

Pakistan President Says Sheik to Be Released

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto says he will release Sheik Mujibur Rahman, the East Pakistani political leader, from prison but will keep him under house arrest.

Bhutto said the change from imprisonment to house arrest was a step in seeking a political settlement with Pakistan's last eastern province which became the separate state of Bangla Desh as a result of the two week war between India and Pakistan.

India says Mujib's release and return to the East will be key requirements in any peace negotiations.

The new president has pledged to regain the eastern wing of the country and underlined his intentions earlier Tuesday by naming an East Pakistani, Nurul Amin, as his vice-president.

Bhutto told reporters at a reception he will go to Peking before entering talks with India about a post-war settlement. China backed Pakistan in the war.

He also said he would not consume the National Assembly until a settlement with India is reached.

Sheik Mujib's Awami League won a majority in the assembly elections a year ago, but then President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan nullified its victory when he ordered his troops in East Pakistan to crush the league's independence movement. Sheik Mujib was arrested March 25, and brought to West Pakistan where he recently stood trial for "crimes against Pakistan."

Bhutto appointed three new civilian state governors in West Pakistan today and retired four military governors, bringing to 10 the number of generals purged since he took office Monday.

The civilians also will be chief martial law administrators for their provinces.

Bhutto also announced he soon will give up his title as chief martial law administrator. But he reserved four cabinet portfolios for himself—defence, foreign affairs, interior and interprovincial affairs.

Bhutto also announced he would not draw his $14,000-a-year salary as head of state. The first civilian president of Pakistan for 13 years, he is the son of a rich landowning family.

He ordered that all death sentences in civilian courts be commuted and directed that cases pending in military courts against students, laborers and peasants be withdrawn.

Arthur Wishart Appointed Compensation Body Head

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis announced Tuesday the appointment of Arthur Wishart as chairman of the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, a position Mr. Wishart established in 1967 when he was attorney-general of Ontario.

Members of the board include Belleville industrialist Fred Mikkelsen. Coincidentally, appointed by Mr. Wishart to the board in May, 1968.

"In a sense, it's a tribute to the board that the premier regards the work of the board as sufficiently important to appoint a man of Mr. Wishart's prestige to the chairmanship," said Mr. Deacon today.

"Mr. Wishart extended the personal invitation to me to sit on the board and I'm very pleased he's now returning as our chairman", he added.

Mr. Wishart, 64, will succeed Chief Judge Colin Bennett who has been chairman of the board since it was set up. The board, originally called the Law Enforcement Compensation Board was established to compensate victims of crime.

Mr. Wishart had been Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Sault Ste. Marie since the 1963 election. He did not seek re-election last October.

When he retired from the legislature, he was minister of financial and commercial affairs.

Mr. Davis said in his announcement that the compensation board will pay crime victims more than $400,000 this year.

Former Mr. Wishart ended his legislature term, he has been on assignment for Provincial Secretary John Yaremko.

He was assigned to investigate a recent takeover of Dean's Breweries, a company that supplies beer to communities in Northern Ontario, by Canadian Breweries Ltd. Employees feared they might lose their jobs and that the beer would be made in Southern Ontario.

Mr. Wishart's report is expected early in the new year.

He served in the legislature for about seven months before being appointed attorney-general of former premier John Robarts.

United Nations Accepts Inevitable

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Security Council bowed to the inevitable Tuesday night by negatively accepting the admonishment of Pakistan.

It did this by demanding strict observance of a durable ceasefire on the Indian subcontinent and cessation of all hostilities that must remain in effect until withdrawals of troops take place as soon as practicable."

But it made no reference to handing East Pakistan, now controlled by India and called the new state of Bangla Desh, back to the sovereignty of Pakistan.

The vote was 13-0-2 with the Soviet Union and Poland abstaining.

Indian Foreign minister Swaran Singh told the council that Indian troops will withdraw from East Pakistan as soon as it is assured that the lives of West Pakistanis are safe.

But he said Pakistan troops no longer have any right to be in Bangla Desh and any attempt of Pakistani troops to re-enter the area would jeopardise peace.

"This is a reality that cannot be ignored," he said.

At the same time, he said India is willing to withdraw from West Pakistan but he added that it wants to negotiate some changes in the ceasefire line in disputed Kashmir to make them more stable and viable.

Negotiations Delayed For Peace

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India is expected to watch developments in Pakistan, perhaps as long as two months, before making any decision on peace negotiations, officials said today.

They spoke as the UN Security Council passed a resolution Tuesday night calling for both sides to maintain "a durable ceasefire and cessation of all hostilities in all areas of conflict."

New Delhi officials said Pakistan's new civilian leader, President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, is keeping open all his options in drawing up future policy towards the Delhi government.

In the last two weeks—at the United Nations and in his speech to the country Monday night—Bhutto had spoken variously of war with India, a need for Kashmir, a call for a hands-off policy in respect of his own country, and a proclamation of building a new Pakistan, the officials noted.

All this was seen in New Delhi as part of an attempt to build up evidence during the next few weeks which he could use as a basis for his stand against India following the crushing defeat in East Pakistan, now recognized by the Delhi government as Bangla Desh.

Officials in Delhi were at a loss to find a definite theme in the president's speech Monday, in which he promised to restore democracy and pledged that East Pakistan would be retained.

If Bhutto had wanted to restore morale in his own country, they asked, why had he spoken of wishing he were not alive to witness present developments? If he wanted to whip up frenzy among the people, then it was hard to understand his frequent appeals for the need for them to help him.

Also, the officials aid, they found it curious that Bhutto should have felt it necessary to proclaim his sincerity on at least half a dozen occasions in his hour-long speech.

From Bhutto, who has often spoken of a "1,000 years war against India," the speech was seen as less vehemently anti-Indian than might have been expected.

Senate Passes Tax Bill and Diefenbaker Calls It Hara-kiri

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate flashed through the 738-page tax bill after three days of debate Tuesday, and ran smack into reports of its own death.

In the Commons—where the bill was debated for 80 days and only escaped under the guillotine rule Friday—former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker called the Senate performance "political hara-kiri."

Senator Gratian O'Leary (PC—Ontario) told the Senate it was being run into the ground by a servile Liberal majority doing the bidding of the government.

That majority quelled the opposition 43 to 4, assuring the bill's royal assent and enactment by the scheduled Jan. 1 implementation date.

Siding with the Liberals against four Conservatives were former Alberta premier Ernest Manning, a Social Crediter, Edward Lawson (Ind.—British Columbia) and Conservative Louis Beaubien (Quebec).

Standing in the 103-seat Senate: 10 Liberals, 56 Conservatives 18, Ind., Liberal 1, Social Credit 1, Independent 7, vacant 13.

The bill would reduce personal income taxes for more than five million taxpayers, introduce a capital gains tax and reorganize the corporate tax system among other things.

Senate Government Leader Paul Martin—backed by Finance Minister E. J. Benson in the Senate banking committee on Monday—had urged passage in time to prevent taxpayer confusion and legal problems that could have been created in the new year if the bill were not in force.

But prompt enactment meant not adding any amendments that would need later Commons approval.

The Senate had already recommended changes drafted by the banking committee during its three months of study of the bill during the fall, when the legislation was in the Commons.

Mr. Benson told the committee Monday he would give careful consideration to the proposals when he drafts "amendments to the tax bill in the next few months.

Senator O'Leary said that was not sufficient.

"He is committed to nothing," he said of Mr. Benson, adding that he was "suspicious of promises" of Liberal cabinet ministers."

He and Senator Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario) were defeated in attempts to add amendments to the bill in committee Monday.

That issue—whether to meet the Jan. 1 implementation date and be satisfied that the government would heed its recommendations, or to make amendments that would cause delay—took as much time in the Senate debate as the content of the bill itself.

It led to an unusually bitter dispute as the debate began last Friday, continued in a special Saturday sitting and ended this week.

Urging a prompt vote—for the same reasons given to the bill —Senator Manning said the public interest would not be served by further discussion.

Changes could be better made in Mr. Benson's proposed amending bill, he said.

Senator Carl Goldenberg (Liberal—Quebec), former constitutional adviser to Prime Minister Trudeau, questioned the right of the Senate to amend a tax bill if it wanted to.

That right was not established, he said.

Senator Beaubien agreed that passage would serve the country better than delay despite the imperfections in the bill.

He expressed confidence that the Senate would take account of the Senate's recommendations in his coming amendments.

Senator Lawson accused Senator Connolly of "arrogantly" ignoring both the merits of the bill and the work the banking committee had done studying the bill.

He attacked editorials that he said accused the Senate of timber-stamping the legislation.

As the Senate debate ended Tommy Douglas, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), long a proponent of abolition of the upper chamber, offered a motion to do away with the Senate.

He did not get the unanimous consent required to debate the motion although some Liberals applauded the idea.

Eugene Whelan (L—Essex) told reporters that if ever the Senate showed itself obsolete, it has been in the last few days.

He said he would willingly fight an election on the issue of Senate abolition.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the Commons that "with few exceptions the Liberal members of the Senate have become Liberal lobby fodder."

"What has happened in the last two days has done more harm to the Senate than everything that has been done in the last 50 years."

Mr. Knowles said the chamber had proved itself "utterly useless."

"They have shown they are ready to knuckle under," he added, "I see no hope of reform."

Dead Subway Driver Flouted Rules

MONTREAL (CP) — Operator Gerard Macarone, 39, killed in a fire following a collision with another train during a subway system Dec. 9, was suspended on four occasions for disregarding safety regulations, a fire commissioner's inquiry into the accident was told Tuesday.

Robert Leduc, an assistant superintendent with the Montreal Urban Community Transportation Commission, said Mr. Macarone's breaking of safety regulations occurred "more than the average."

Mr. Macarone had two years' experience at the time of the accident, Mr. Leduc told the inquiry into the cause of the multi-million dollar fire.

Mr. Macarone was trapped in the cab of the train he was driving after it collided with a stationary train in a shunting area at the northern terminus of the subway's No. 2 line.

Before the fatal accident, Mr. Macarone had appeared before the transportation commission six times in connection with infractions of safety regulations, Mr. Leduc said.

"could have caused an accident similar to the one that occurred Dec. 9."

He was told he would have to improve." Mr. Leduc said, added the offences led to four one-day suspensions and two warnings.

Cotton in Pill Vial Filler, There's No Need to Retain It

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it necessary to keep cotton in bottles with pills if the pills don't have a tendency to get damp?

If there are no specific directions, should a pill be taken with or without water, before or after a meal, or what time of day is best?

Is there any general rule as to how long a pill remains effective? Months? Years?

It is time that it is dangerous to keep pills in plastic bottles because of a chemical used to keep the plastic pliable—D.E.P.

The cotton is just a filler, to keep the pills from rattling around, chipping, or breaking, so no, it is not necessary for you to retain the cotton. It isn't a matter of moisture. It is just necessary to keep something dry, a capsule of a hydroscopic substance is put in the bottle to absorb moisture.

When and how to take a pill? It depends on what the medication is for and whether it tends to be irritating. Sedatives for the stomach would be taken before a meal, antacids after. Drugs with a tendency to irritate the stomach would be taken immediately after a meal.

If there are no specific instructions, ask yourself about whether to take with or without water. It seldom matters, except a sip of water may make swallowing easier.

Scheduling medicines around mealtime is usually mostly a matter of helping the patient remember how many to take—three times a day is remembered easiest with the three meals.

Whether a medication is taken day or night depends on what the medication is for. If it is a simple example, you wouldn't take a sleeping pill with breakfast. Unless you work nights.

Most drugs remain potent for two to four years, except that some, such as liquid antibiotics, deteriorate rapidly, and should be discarded as soon as the course of treatment is ended.

Generally speaking, it's best to get rid of most medications as soon as the need for them is over, but for some reason people are reluctant to do so, which results in neighborly medication that can do some harm. Like giving a friend some of her medicine "because your trouble sounds just like what I had."

No harm in using plastic bottles. They are in very common use.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We have a retarded daughter, a mongoloid, now 16. I read once that mongoloid children are sterile. Our daughter has started to have menstrual periods, and my question is whether it is true that such children are sterile? —Mrs. D.P.

In mongolism, there is a general underfunction of the endocrine glands—pituitary, thyroid, sex tests—. There also can be abnormal structural anomalies of be reproductive organs as underdeveloped ovaries or testes.

In those girls who mature in these capacities, pregnancy is possible, but many produce normal babies, others may produce mongoloid babies.

Fertility is low in both the male and female, but the answer to your question has to be equivocal: pregnancy may or may not be possible, depending on the individual case. Menstruation alone, however, does not necessarily imply fertility.

Note to H.D.: It is possible to have shingles more than once. Some as 5 percent do have some other diseases twice—but it is unusual, and I can't say that I have ever personally observed an instance of it.

What the Stars Say

THURSDAY, DEC. 23

Your birthday today: The sensation is similar to having the brakes suddenly released—and you're off to a flying start on all material fronts. While you're pulling together prize winning combinations, remember to nourish your soul with prayer and regular meditation. Today's natives are serious, original thinkers.

Aries (March 21 - April 19): This is about the end of non-stimsocial work for a while, and little seasonally significant transactions remain to be done. Expect let-down and distractions.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Whatever your proposal, it tends to draw an initial refusal from conservative thinkers. Temporize a bit.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You should be adept enough to pull your share of a disagreement out and go your way in peace.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Time to complete details of your schemes runs out, soon. Begin early enough to make the rounds to search for the little items yet needed.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Start before resistance forms in your path, or prepare some diplomatic pressure moves to counter objections. You have quite a lot of ground to cover.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Whatever you can look over in person tends to come through all right; what is in the hands of helpers, agents, friends may go astray or need special care.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good question skillfully posed precludes a hundred troublesome details later. Be alert, as well as tactful.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sudden decisions are almost certain to bring down side effects you hadn't expected. Timely corrective measures tend to make situations worse.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay on the surface, live and let live. There's much good fun in sharing sports and hobbies if you can find the time for them. It should be a pretty interesting day.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Real friendship exists where you'd least suspect. Today you may find some expression of its existence and prospects.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Reconciliation, improvement in family circumstances are featured. Gather friends and relatives about for a festive party.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing goes quite as planned, but neither does anything go very far off the track—unless you want it to. Realistically count your resources.

MPs Find Their Christmas Vacation May Prove Very Brief

OTTAWA (CP) — If you think you're caught in the Christmas rush, try being a member of Parliament.

They found out late Tuesday that unless they pass an act to establish national farm marketing boards by Thursday, they may be sitting again right after Christmas.

An "oh" went through the Commons as Government House Leader Allan MacEachen listed the business for today: Tax law bills and the controversial marketing board bill.

Most members had hoped to leave for their home constituencies by Friday at the latest and special flights have been prepared. But another blockade of the farm bill could keep them here through the holiday period. Government sources said that if the farm bill does not pass by Thursday "we will be back here Monday."

Ironically, the news came as one of the most productive days Parliament has had since last September.

The Senate passed the massive tax bill, provisions of which come into effect Jan. 1 and it likely will get royal assent Thursday.

The Commons passed Excise Tax Act changes resulting from Finance Minister E. J. Benson's June budget, and the Senate, in evening session, carried them as well.

Also passed by the Commons was an amendment to the Copyright Act to prevent record manufacturers from levying a tariff on broadcasters for each record played on the air. This already has had Senate approval.

Debate on Tariff Act changes that also date back to June began in the Commons late Tuesday and was expected to conclude today, the bill then going to the Senate.

Another tax bill, a result of Mr. Benson's Oct. 14 mini-budget would then be brought forward for Commons and Senate debate.

The government farm marketing bill is the surprise.

Western Conservatives fought in a standstill earlier this year during 58 rough days in committee and several weeks in the House.

The opposition was led by Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), an Alberta rancher, who objected to cattle being included.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson was negotiating with opposition MPs to work out an acceptable version of the bill, which would enable the federal government to establish marketing boards for virtually all farm products.

Sources said the negotiations centred on products that might be eliminated from an amended bill for Christmas.

Tire Firms Fight for Studs

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian tire manufacturers planned to continue their campaign for relaxation of the Ontario law on studded tires today by making available copies of a United States report which says studded tires are safer.

The study, conducted by Cornell University researchers, found that cars with studded tires were in fewer accidents and that mishaps involving cars with studs were less serious.

An industry spokesman said Tuesday night the report will be used in a new bid to persuade Queens Park to conduct a cost-benefit analysis on the studs.

The ban on studded tires was imposed following provincial studies which indicated that studs were of little value as safety devices but caused severe damage to road surfaces.

Last week a judge at Red Lake, Ont., faced with guilty pleas from 27 people for breaking the ban, was sympathetic but urged the motorists to take the studs out.

He said he would come back in two weeks and people who removed the studs would be treated differently from those who did not.

"I'd have loved to have had studded tires, yesterday," said Judge J. V. Pregeau at the trial after he had travelled from Kenora to the town, 200 miles northeast of Winnipeg, over a road he said was "pretty slippery."

Area residents contended the ban is not suitable for conditions around the mining town, where roads become packed with snow.

PICTORIAL HISTORY OF THE DOUKHOBORS — Koozma Tarasoff

The Doukhobor story has been lavishly presented by writers who have stressed the eccentricities—the nude parades and arsonism of a minority. Now Mr. Tarasoff looks at the group with the eyes of an insider combined with the perspective of a practising anthropologist. With a time span covering some 250 years, Doukhobor history is traced, their beliefs examined, and their handicraft illustrated. The book includes hundreds of photographs, some poetry, and drawings by William Perehudoff.

LOUIS — Max Jones and John Chilton

Louis Armstrong was an internationally famous entertainer, loved the world over. Millions of words have been written about him. But what was he really like? What was the secret of his genius, of his genius? Coming from the toughest of New Orlean's black ghettoes, his musical ability brought American jazz to maturity and spread it around the globe. The authors here trace his career through a half century of popular music history.

TO LIVE WITHIN — Lizelle Reymond

She spent five years in a hermitage learning a life philosophy centred on total voluntary self-discipline, patience and serenity, designed not to cope with problems but to "dwell within them". She writes in detail of the spiritual teachings, her day-to-day impressions and the people who affected her life.

DEEP OCEANS — edited by Peter J. Herring and Malcolm R. Clarke

In skilfully illustrated book, almost the entire field of man's oceanic exploration is covered.

BRENDAN — Ulick O'Connor

Pakistan's Nobility Loses Titles, Grants

Richest Families' Passports Seized

RAWALPINDI (Reuter) — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto stripped Pakistan's nobility of their titles and allowances of public funds today in another move against the wealthy.

The president, in power for four days since he took over from former president Yahya Khan, already has impounded the passports of the country's 22 richest families and dismissed the military governors of West Pakistan's four provinces.

His decision today abolished the allowances and privileges of the nawabs, chiefs and rulers of the country's former states.

All civil and military titles were withdrawn from the former rulers, who also lose special privileges for importing certain goods into Pakistan.

The move against the 22 families was symbolic rather than real for in an edict issued two nights ago the 42-year-old president had banned foreign travel of all Pakistanis anyway.

But the new instruction conveyed to the public the impression that he intended to crack down on that elite group of Pakistanis who possess the bulk of the country's wealth and to prevent them shifting their riches to foreign banks.

Bhutto himself is a rich landowner and has said he will not draw the hefty presidential salary of 65,000 rupees ($14,300).

Bhutto also announced that new money was being printed — so quickly in fact that the notes will bear the signature of the state bank governor whom he already has dismissed.

Earlier in he day, Bhutto freed detained East Pakistani leader Sheik Mujibur Rahman, 51, from the West Pakistan prison he has been in for the last nine months and placed him under house arrest instead. It was not disclosed where Sheik Mujib now is confined.

Regarding the possibility of Sheik Mujib—brought to West Pakistan and tried for "crimes against Pakistan"—being freed completely, Bhutto was quoted by Pakistan radio as saying the views of the people of Pakistan would have to be taken into account first.

Bhutto also announced he would be going to Peking soon.

Radio Pakistan said Bhutto continued his shakeup of Pakistan's defeated armed forces today, retiring the commander-in-chief of the navy and eight other admirals, commodores and generals.

Vice-Admiral Mustfait Hasan Gardezi was also removed the navy took a severe beating in the two-week war with India, it was replaced by Commodore Hafiz Ahmad.

Bhutto retired the navy chiefs of staff, two rear-admirals and two senior commodores. In addition, he retired three more army major-generals, bringing to 14 the number of generals having left for their Earlsot home at Bellevue Hill, a Sydney suburb.

Police Commissioner J. M. Davis said the man was first spotted by a patrolling officer. The intruder failed to stop when challenged and a shot was fired at the policeman who fired two shots in return.

Earlier reports, which were unconfirmed, said a man wounded in an exchange of fire had been admitted to a Canberra hospital.

Today's official statement said the intruder was "believed wounded by a police bullet," and a manhunt has started.

Hope Tries To See POW

"Ho! Ho! Ho!"

VIENTIANE (AP) — Bob Hope flew to Laos today and in a surprise visit to the North Vietnamese embassy was believed to have asked permission to visit U.S. prisoners of war in Hanoi.

Hope refused to say what he discussed with the North Vietnamese, but an aide said it was obvious that the American POWs were a topic.

Asked whether the North Vietnamese had responded to any requests he made, Hope replied: "There is no way to know."

Hope spent 85 minutes with First Secretary Nguyen Van Thao and said his visit was "friendly and cordial."

Hope's press aide, Bill Faith, refused to say whether the 68-year-old entertainer carried a message to the North Vietnamese from his friend, President Nixon.

A U.S. Army plane brought Hope and Faith to Vietiane from Bangkok, Thailand, the comedian's headquarters for his annual Christmas visit to U.S. servicemen in Southeast Asia.

Sixth Arrest Made In Robbery Probe

TORONTO (CP) — The number of suspects arrested in connection with the million-dollar bank robbery in Windsor Saturday climbed to six Wednesday but police say they are still not satisfied.

Superintendent Adolphus Payne said that both Toronto and Windsor detectives are looking for "several more men."

They also are seeking $978,699 of the loot that is still missing from the $1,128,000 robbery of the Royal Bank of Canada's Windsor main branch.

Earlier, Deputy Police Chief Bernard Simmons said two men well known to Toronto police may have been two of the four men who robbed the bank after $790,000 in receipts from Windsor Raceway were delivered by armored car.

The latest arrest came Wednesday when police charged Donald Patrick DeRosie, 36, of Toronto with conspiracy to commit armed robbery. No more money was recovered in the arrest.

Convicts Ask Rocky Be Charged

NEW YORK (AP) — Convicts at Attica state prison have filed a federal court suit asking that Gov. Nelson Rockefeller and state officials be tried on murder and other charges for their handling of the Attica rebellion last September.

The suit was filed Wednesday in U.S. district court by lawyers of the Center for Constitutional Rights, a non-profit legal aid group.

The suit asked that the state be compelled to try Rockefeller and the officials for murder, manslaughter, assault and larceny. It also requested that federal charges be brought for depriving the Attica prisoners of their civil rights.

Thirty-two convicts and 11 hostages were killed during the rebellion, most of them when authorities stormed Attica Sept. 13 to quell the five-day disturbance.

Beer Bottle Bomb Left for McMahon

CANBERRA, Australia (Reuter) — Australian police hunted today for a man they believed was wounded in an exchange of pistol shots after throwing a gasoline bomb into a doorway of the prime minister's residence here.

The bomb—a beer bottle filled with gas—failed to explode.

The incident happened early today, a few hours after Prime Minister William McMahon had announced a 2.25-per-cent devaluation of the Australian dollar.

Neither McMahon nor his wife, Sonia, was at the Canberra residence at the time.

IRA Seizes Ballyshannon

Violence Crosses Border To Little Town in Eire

BALLYSHANNON (CP) — Irish troops battled mobs of rock-throwing youngsters today as Northern Ireland's violence spilled over into the Irish Republic.

Prime Minister Jack Lynch's Dublin government sent its troops into the little republican town of Ballyshannon after rioters threatened to overwhelm 200 police and release three leaders of the outlawed Irish Republican Army who had been arrested.

The president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political affiliate, called the arrest of the three men "a blatant act of collaboration with the British," who have been urging Lynch to crack down on the guerrillas battling British forces in Northern Ireland.

Ballyshannon is a small port and market town in County Donegal, on Ireland's northwest coast at a point where the republic narrows to a five-mile strip between Northern Ireland and the Atlantic. It is a base for IRA men fighting to unite Northern Ireland with the republic.

Wednesday, the police raided the homes of IRA men throughout Donegal searching for arms. They arrested three men, among them Joe O'Neill, a leader of the IRA's militant provisional faction, and took them to Ballyshannon, where they were held on charges of illegal possession of firearms.

The IRA in retaliation took over the town, forcing stores to close at the height of the Christmas rush and blocking the main road to the south with a barricade of trucks and cars. Crowds besieged the police depot, threatening to overwhelm the 14-man force barricaded inside with the captives.

The IRA withdrew after five hours, and the government sent in police reinforcements. But mob violence broke out during the night and continued until the army moved in and dispersed the crowds. Three was no shooting, and no serious injuries were reported.

The action by Irish troops against the IRA follows a recent toughening in the attitude of Irish Premier Lynch towards the IRA.

Sault Boy Receives Kidney

TORONTO (CP) — A 12-year-old Sault Ste Marie boy whose mother died of a kidney disease received a kidney of a seven-year-old Port Perry, Ont. boy Wednesday night.

Gary Gilbert was flown here Wednesday to the Hospital for Sick Children after Allan Rowald Bray died of injuries from a Monday night traffic accident in his hometown 20 miles north of Oshawa.

In Sault Ste. Marie, the family doctor of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Rheaume, Gary's foster parents, confirmed the operation.

The doctor said Gary is one of nine children left by his mother. All are in foster homes in the Algoma district.

Gary's kidneys were removed a year ago. He was given artificial kidneys and spent six hours twice a week on a dialysis machine.

Labor Used To Promote Strife: PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday there are dangers in labour that threaten to provoke class warfare.

In his annual pre-Christmas news conference, he suggested in answer to questions that unidentified elements are trying to take over the organized labor movement to promote social upheaval.

"A great many people are using the Quebec labor movement to polarize the struggle and foster class warfare," he said.

He added that he hopes the move will not succeed, because peaceful struggle for better working conditions is preferable to attempts to "politicize the labor movement."

War Measures Act Studied Months Before Quebec Use

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says the federal cabinet had measures under study "in the event . . . of insurrection" five months before the 1970 Quebec crisis erupted in October with the kidnapping of British diplomat James Cross.

The Ottawa report, by correspondent George Bain, says an interdepartmental committee was set up May 7, 1970, on the recommendation of the cabinet committee on priorities and planning. The interdepartmental committee met several times during the summer and autumn, "but did not produce a report for the cabinet committee on priorities and planning until Nov. 20—just over a month after the government proclaimed a state of apprehended insurrection to exist and invoked the War Measures Act," Bain writes.

The report refers to "unpublished cabinet documents" which are described in The Globe and Mail's headline as "cabinet leak."

What they revealed, says Bain, is that "the question of using the War Measures Act in some circumstances of domestic unrest had been considered in a general way long before the events which led to its being proclaimed at 4 o'clock in the morning of Oct. 16."

Before the interdepartmental committee was set up, the priorities committee had discussed "what the justice department called a preliminary analysis of circumstances in which demands for social change might be accompanied by criminal behavior, with or without violence."

OSD Girl Gets VIP Flight

By HARRY MULRALL
Staff Reporter

The spirit of Christmas, it seems, even reaches the corridors of political power.

As a result, a little girl who might otherwise have spent the holiday hapless in an isolated bed, is now more than 1,000 miles away — happily helping her family prepare for a rejoicing Christmas.

It happened this way:

Tuesday, the Ontario School for the Deaf was a hive of excitement as its 320 resident students readied to return to various proprincicial hometown points for the holiday.

Amid the day's bustle, school authorities learned that chicken pox had been confirmed in one of the girl's quartet — six - year - old Rhonda Pollard, whose home is Stratton, a community on Highway 11, 200 miles west of Thunder Bay.

Rhonda was automatically confined to the lamord's infirmary, where it seemed she might have to spend Christmas Day in isolation, says school superintendent Dr. J. G. Demeza.

But, when the news reached Stratton, Linda's dismayed parents were determined to have her home. So much so, Mr. Pollard, a lumber worker, was ready to drive the more - than - 1,000 - mile wintry distance to personally pick up his little girl and return her home for Christmas with the family.

OSD officials were perplexed. It was a long round trip, obviously, for the anxious parent; but, perhaps more than 1,000 miles away — Rhonda, suffering the highly-contagious infection.

Then, says Dr. Demeza, the OSD's doctor, Belleville physician Dr. John Steck, had an inspiration.

Was it possible that the provincial government — with its multiplicity of transport resources — could help out?

He decided it was worth a try — and contacted a fellow physician: Dr. Richard Potter, who is Minister Without Portfolio in the provincial cabinet.

Dr. Potter came back with a solution.

There was a Dept. of Lands and Forests aircraft leaving Toronto's Island Airport Wednesday for the north, with Mines Minister Leo Bernier and Lands and Forests Minister Rene Brunelle aboard, heading home for Christmas.

If Rhonda was at the rendezvous in time, along with a nurse, there'd be a seat for her all the way to Thunder Bay — little more than 200 miles east of Stratton — a short enough drive away for distance-oriented northerners.

School officials moved quickly. Will Dr. Demeza and OSD nursing supervisor Margaret McQueen, Rhonda was driven to the airport yesterday morning, meeting the deadline.

With Mrs. McQueen and the cabinet ministers, Rhonda took off for Christmas — the plane first landing at Kapuskasing to drop off Mr. Bernelle, then Thunder Bay — where the Pollards were waiting for their daughter.

"The parents, of course, were overwhelmed to have their little girl home for Christmas — and we were absolutely thrilled to be able to do that," said Mrs. McQueen.

Dr. Demeza described it as a "very happy ending" to what otherwise might have been major disappointment for a little girl and her family.

"I think everybody was happy to get the little one home for Christmas," he added.

The crew of the Lands and Forests plane — after the finish of the 1,600-mile round trip ended in late-night darkness, bypassed Toronto and flew Mrs. McQueen almost all the way home. The plane landed at Trenton a few minutes after midnight.

All's Quiet In Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — "We might as well forget about next week altogether," said one town official this morning.

Municipal employees at the town offices, the public works department and the public utilities commission all went home at noon today to begin their Christmas holidays. Police and fire services continue as usual.

Trenton deputy clerk Arden Royce said today a standby staff of public works employees would be on call over the weekend in case community streets need to be cleared or an emergency situation arises. The PUC will also stand by.

The town's employees resume work Tuesday morning, finishing the following Friday at noon for the New Year's break that ends Tuesday January 4.

One major set of arrangements face town and PUC staffs between the Christmas and New Year's holidays. A bid will be prepared by which Trenton will seek to have construction of new water mains and sewers in the north industrial park, built on a previously vinicial winter works program.

Town council itself, scheduled to meet in regular session December 27, has decided not to hold this meeting, nor is one expected later in the week.

The deputy clerk indicated today he expects the next council meeting to be held January 10, but this will depend on whether Belleville city council meets in the first week of the new year. A committee - of - the - whole meeting will be held here January 3.

Sharing Program Had Good Year

Belleville's Christmas Sharing Program is moving towards the successful conclusion of a "gratifying year".

Mrs. Sekna Bochenek, committee chairman, says all needy families will be taken care of by Christmas Eve, with about 275 on the list for assistance this year.

"Public response has been overwhelming," she says.

"What really pleases me is that individual families are taking on other individual families to sponsor," says Mrs. Bochenek.

Two secondary schools, Centennial and Quinte, between them took on 82 families.

Tuesday during their spare periods, students packed the boxes at Quinte and senior students and teachers delivered them that afternoon. Quinte first agreed to take on 25 families, but so many donations came in from the students that they requested 12 more names.

A senior student, Neil Sine, took carollers out on city streets for three nights and raised $86 for turkeys. Proceeds from the Christmas Carnival on Wednesday afternoon, the last day of school, are earmarked for the hamper expenses.

But the Sharing Program office continued to receive requests for hampers almost until deadline.

Mrs. Bochnek stressed that her committee cannot assist a family unless it has been referred through one of the helping agencies. The program acts only as a clearing house to match donors and recipients and prevent duplication.

Referral agencies are the provincial Social and Family Services, Hastings County Social Services, Family and Children's Services, Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit, Victorian Order of Nurses, the ministerial association or individual churches, school principals, the Salvation Army, the Firefighter's Association and the Veterans' Poppy Fund.

"We are happy to assist anyone who needs help, but we cannot act unless the recipient has contacted one of the agencies and been referred," says Mrs. Bochenek.

The recipients Mrs. Bochnek finds it hardest to get donors to take on are individuals or two - member families.

"Most of the singles are elderly people," she says. "A hamper is the thing they appreciate most because, in many cases, it is the only gift they get."

Money from donations to the sharing program is used to purchase hampers for these people. They are made up at Food City and delivered by volunteers.

Strange Looking Sleigh

Although it doesn't resemble the traditional sleigh seen at Christmas time, this truck is being loaded with part of the Belleville Firefighters' Association collection of Christmas toys for needy children. Some 1,200 youngsters will receive gifts as a result of donations by families, community organizations and private clubs. Each child listed by the 350 families involved will receive a gift especially for him or her.

Ottawa Case Moved Here

Hastings County Crown Attorney John Pringle has taken over the case of a young Ottawa detective who died early Tuesday morning of peritonitis.

The investigation into the death of Det. Brian Maloney, 30, could result in laying of charges, said Ottawa Police Chief Gus Wersch, whose force is investigating the incident.

The detective arrived home about 8 a.m. Friday complaining of stomach pains. He was reported to have visited a home in City View, an Ottawa suburb, after completing his shift Friday and before returning home.

An autopsy Tuesday indicated Det. Maloney died of peritonitis, resulting from a tear in the tissue carrying blood to the intestines, said Coroner J. A. Thompson.

A Criminal Investigation Branch officer is now on his way to Belleville with the results of an investigation carried out over the last two days by Ontario Provincial Police and two Nepean township police detectives.

"After I have considered all the information I will make a decision on whether or not to lay charges or if I may send back for more information", said the Hastings Crown Attorney.

"I'm coming in on this completely cold — I don't even know the names of the people involved yet," said Mr. Pringle.

He said he was called by telephone Tuesday and asked to take over the case.

In Ottawa, Carleton County Crown Attorney John Cassells said he has stepped out of the case "because it may involve a police officer or a local police force."

Detective Maloney's father, former policeman Hilary Maloney, claimed Tuesday after the death that his son "had his bowels busted" by assailants. He said his son arrived home dirty and covered in blood Friday.

"There are two killers on the loose," he said "and if the authorities do not do something, I will."

At the request of the Carleton County Crown Attorney, the Ottawa police and the Nepean Police department, Inspector Archie Ferguson of the Criminal Investigation Branch of the OPP took over investigation of the case yesterday.

SEASON'S GREETINGS!

City firemen, sparked by calls to Mayor J. Russell Scott last night, were kept busy for approximately six hours searching for a mysterious odor described by city police as "not unlike a natural gas smell". The source, a petroleum product such as that stored in these oil drums, came from the Dussek Brothers plant on Station Street. The gas proved harmless.

Escaping Gas Caused Smell

Belleville residents in the East Hill district deluged city police, the city fire department and the mayor's residence over a period of six hours last night, complaining of a natural gas odor pervading the air.

Officials were hard pressed to discover the source of the gaseous smell. It was eventually narrowed down to the Dussek Brothers plant at 229 Station Street.

Plant manager Robert Walton stated this morning, the gas is "totally and utterly harmless".

The odor was created by residual traces of a petroleum base product. Mr. Walton said under high pressure in a vacuum, gases from this product can escape if cracks occur.

Another plant official at the plant this morning said this process, including escape of gases, has been occurring for several years.

The manager informed The Intelligencer he has given orders to discontinue "distillation of this product".

The company's major customers will be informed of this decision as soon as possible.

The decision will also force the company to make a major review of its position.

"This may mean major modifications of equipment," Mr. Walton said.

"I don't know at this time if this will be economical or not."

An official of the Ontario Water Resources Commission is meeting with plant officials today.

Nature Trail Project Officially Under Way

The Quinte Hastings Recreational Trail, a 100 mile system of hiking paths running from Lake Ontario to Algonquin Park, now is a reality.

Agreement was signed in Belleville Wednesday by project chairman Reginald Loader and two district officers have opened to provide public information.

Conceived by the regional Manpower department to help alleviate local unemployment, the trail will provide jobs for 60 persons now out of work and cost the federal government $135,925.

Authorization for the grant, which comes under Ottawa's Winter Works Program, was given December 10 by Otto Lang, minister of Manpower and Immigration.

In addition to the headquarters at 14 Bridge St. West, Belleville, an office has also opened in Picton. The Prince Edward County branch already boasts three researchers who are studying existing facilities and services.

Two more offices in Bancroft and either Madoc or Marmora are scheduled to open within the next few days.

Also present at the signing were H. W. Kirsh, manager of the Canada Manpower centre, J. R. Stively, Manpower secretary - treasurer, and W. G. Harvey, project administrator.

Fire Wipes Out Highway 7 Home

Christmas dreams burned to the ground for a Madoc family in the early hours of this morning.

Clarke Huffman, owner of the Whispering Pines Restaurant of Madoc on Highway 7, stood with firemen through the entire blaze.

The alarm came at midnight and by 2 a.m. the fire was under control.

Mr. Huffman and his family of four lived in a recently built second - storey level of the building and made their escape from the residence only moments before flames engulfed the floor.

"I have never seen a fire start so quickly and bring such speedy devastation to a property," said Mr. Huffman after making sure his family was safe.

None of the three Huffman children was injured as a result of the two-alarm blaze, which brought plumpers from both Madoc and Marmora fire departments.

Because of the intense heat, firefighters could not enter the building to determine the cause. Mr. Huffman said a large boom heralded the fire and officials speculate "the boiler for heating will probably end up being the cause."

The only reported casualty in the incident was a recently purchased family pet dog.

Mark, 8, eldest of the Huffman children, tried to run back into the building to retrieve the pet but was stopped by firemen.

The other children are Kevin, 6, and Kerri-Lee, four months.

Oblivious to firemen's efforts, the blaze ate its way through the $100,000 building.

"Insurance will cover the mortgage, but that's all," said Mr. Huffman.

In the same building was a service garage, left largely untouched.

Spokesman for the fire crew said "a cement block wall kept the fire from spreading into the garage, and by spraying the pumps, a gasoline explosion was avoided."

The family spent the remainder of the night in a friend's home.

Mr. Huffman told The Intelligencer he intends to rebuild the restaurant and start all over again.

In the meantime he is making plans to service the motel rooms (in separate building, undamaged by fire) and use one of them for family accommodation.

Parole Comes Easy

Remember the kidnapping of Mary Nelles in September 1969. The daughter of a millionaire, Mrs. Nelles, then 26, was held in a Muskoka cottage for $200,000 ransom which her husband left at a designated spot. Mrs. Nelles was found unharmed two days later and the money was also recovered.

Six young bachelors, one a former policeman, were arrested in the case and later convicted and jailed for periods of five to 15 years. Today, incredibly, six are free or will be before long under Canada's increasingly permissive system of parole. It is getting so that a man can commit almost any crime, including murder, and be assured of serving only a fraction of the maximum sentence provided by statute and designed, in the beginning at least, as a deterrent commensurate with the gravity of the offence.

Normally, one-third of a sentence must be served before a prisoner becomes eligible for parole. This would have been 40 months to four years for the Nelles kidnappers. But two were released last July after serving 20 months of 10-year and 12-year sentences. Another was released in November after serving two years of a 12-year sentence. Three others are due to be released within the next 12 months.

The chairman of the Parole Board, George Street, who for reasons that need not be explained has acquired the nickname "Easy Street") has explained the board's reasoning to a Senate inquiry. This was no ordinary case of kidnapping," he said. This was a stupid prank' I don't think the victim was ever in danger."

Some "prank" indeed! No mention of the near Mrs. Nelles must have endured, or the anguish of her husband and family while she was held captive. No regard by the parole board for the old-fashioned need to teach wrongdoers, whatever their background, a lesson and deter others from disregarding the law and the rights of others. Oh no. The six all come from middle-class families, says Mr. Street, will have jobs on parole and will have friends and relatives to help them.

Kidnapping is a very serious offence. We do not believe this episode back in 1969 was a mere prank. The law should be upheld in this as in any other case. But it is not being upheld and the parole board, together with the courts which in many instances fail to mete out tougher sentences, must take the responsibility.

Fire Tragedy

The death of five children in a fire which destroyed their home near Bath is one of those winter tragedies which occur with alarming frequency in Canada.

They occur mostly in older homes equipped with space heaters and it is all the more unfortunate in this instance by reason of the fact that the family always took care not to allow the burner to overheat. However, the eldest son, who escaped along with his parents, said he noticed oil spilled around the heater after he awoke amid intense heat.

It is too late to save the five Galloway youngsters, but the tragedy does serve to focus warning attention on winter fire hazards, with regard to heating equipment, overly dry Christmas trees together with lights, faulty wiring and so on.

Christmas Cards

Christmas cards Canadians are sending this year reflect a yearning for an old-fashioned Christmas. That is the word from commercial and charity suppliers. But the fact is, this is no new phenomenon. We are all familiar with the scenes of pioneer days, the farmyard environment and the rural fact generally. We enjoy too those leisurely winter outings, children and parents skating on a pond, the animals that are usually part of the picture too, the wooded hills in the snow, the grandeur of the Canadian winter landscape at large. Also Canadian cities as they were a century or more ago — all are represented in Christmas card art and Christmas is the richer for it.

Working Girls -

It is gratifying to note the success of four Ontario School for the Deaf graduates as key punch operators at the Unemployment Insurance Commission computer centre in Belleville. It is a mark of the young women's competence as well as their ability to overcome handicaps. A tribute also to the fine work that is being accomplished by the staff of OSD. Canada Manpower and the UIC are also to be commended for recognizing the girls' ability and affording them this opportunity to join the work force.

Welfare as A Way of Life

Demonstration 'Grants' Set Taxpayer Back $7,500,000

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The federal government as plans for punishment is pays for it.

It has been laying out $7,500,000 this year to organized welfare groups for what its own bureaucrats quite accurately describe as "demonstration grants."

The idea, as the Welfare Department itself phrases it, was to "enable welfare recipients to take collective action to secure a voice in policy decisions."

Trouble was that too many welfare groups took "demonstration" to mean not what it has become in these recent years, a form of protest increasingly activist, sometimes violent.

And so this is what they did, demonstrate.

So often, so many places and so militantly they provoked what the government calls a "welfare backlash".

In the words of Welfare Minister John Munro who put it in writing in a letter to his Hamilton East constituency, this is: "confrontation tactics" turned off the taxpayers who have to foot the reckoning bill including the $7,500,000 for those "demonstration grants".

What "confrontations?"

For starters there were welfare sit-ins in Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton "marches" on Ottawa, where Mr. Munro met "unelected and self-styled welfare militant who intruded in a wastebasket within splashing distance of the minister to show" what no activist he was.

There have been unceasing "demands" for welfare, with no strings on how dispensed, with all cities.

There have been increasing welfare frauds.

And there has been a growing acceptance of welfare as a way of life as more and more employable young people have decided, as one of them announced at the Ottawa "confrontation," it "is more bucks working".

The backlash has been building up a long time and Mr. Munro has been feeling it in letters and phone calls from taxpayers, face to face when he visits Hamilton, and where it counts most in the Liberal parliamentary caucus, and cabinet.

He has been told to his face, as he has been repeated and now, to "get the hell out of welfare".

John Munro used to be a "welfare pusher".

Welfare was becoming so industry in itself.

The Canadian Welfare Council to which the department contributes an annual $90,000 plus grants for conferences and such things, in recent times has doubled in size, adding two new floors and twice the parking space.

The bill — exclusive of assistance to the blind and disabled — for welfare tops $440,000,000.

So John Munro, having under the sting and cut of the "welfare backlash" is not so much the "pusher" these days.

He has served notice to organized welfare groups that to use "demonstration grants" for demonstrating will be to lose them.

And to put point of that $7-,000,000 in grants where his mouth is, he has committed $25,000 demonstration allowance of the Hamilton Welfare Rights Organization in his own riding.

But it is only a retreat.

Not a surrender.

For now John Munro is kicking off a campaign to sell welfare in the taxpayers as a good and worthy thing.

There is just a touch of self-preservation in the motive, for the "welfare backlash" was reaching the point, where, even in our perhaps expectant — in Hamilton if not threatening to erode the 3,800-odd votes by which he won the last election.

So he is making a national pitch based on the statistics that of all welfare recipients only 13 per cent are free-loaders — "bums," as his critics call them — who could work but will not.

His Welfare Department's big "information" drive is trying to blitz the country with radio and television time so that "only 13 percent" these.

And he hopes to enlist in his welfare sell a string of "community-minded, socially conscious" public speakers.

But he still has to face the issue which, if taking his statistics at face value, is obviously not one of there being "only 13 percent—just how many" that many "will-not-work bums" on welfare?

For that is one in every eight.

Busy Times Ahead for Legislature Bodies

By DON O'HEARN
From the Queen's Park Bureau of The Intelligencer

TORONTO — Premier Davis obviously is going to do his best to keep his members busy.

It was a bit of a surprise when at the closing of the session Mr. Davis announced the appointment of three select committees: One on company law, one on foreign ownership and the third on possible more use of educational building facilities.

Two of these committees had been expected. The premier had said he would be appointing a group to study the task forces findings on foreign ownership. And the committee on company law is a continuing group, picking up from another group which disappeared with the dissolution of the last legislature.

But the education study arrived more or less out of the premier's absence.

And one can take from it an indication that under the Davis regime we probably will see a lot of select committees.

This will be partly for their work. But just as much so to keep the members occupied, to give them something to do.

In this Mr. Davis is recognizing early the problem of most leaders of a government, and particularly one that is top-heavy.

This problem is that one of their serious concerns is to keep their supporters happy. They can only do so many members into their cabinet. There are only a relatively few commission and board jobs to pass around. And those members who aren't placed can feel very unimportant.

These committees, however, are not to be dismissed as just make-work projects.

They do normally produce good results. They aren't the ultimate in study groups. You can't take a group of butchers, bakers and candle stick makers, your average group of elected representatives and expect them to come up with a new theory of relativity.

But through approaching the particular problem they are reviewing from a down-to-earth viewpoint they can end up with some good recommendations.

We have, for example, had those school buildings all through the progress usually only being used part time.

And from the work of this particular committee they will undoubtedly be of more service to their communities.

Japanese Discover Banff

Kingston Whig - Standard

Canadians are often told to look at Japan if they want an example of a small, overcrowded country which has been able not only to survive today but after the last war but also to prosper by using its own money, resources and talent.

The Japanese have succeeded in making their country one of the three or four greatest industrial countries in the world. A measure of their enterprise may be seen in the fact that one of their automobile companies, which produces Toyota cars, is now the fourth-largest in the world, ranking just under the American Big Three.

This has not been done at the expense of the Japanese people. They are prospering too. Their workers, under a benevolently paternalistic industrial system, are prospering by any standards. This means, of course, that the Japanese "beautiful people" — as we are now the vogue — are also prosperous.

Canada is experiencing this prosperity in Banff this winter. The Banff ski areas have been discovered by the Japanese and it is expected that at least 3,000 skiers from Japan will move in on Banff for the season. This is about twice as many as are expected this winter from Ontario and Quebec.

One more thing. The Japanese have done all this without selling themselves out through foreign ownership of their resources and industries. Is there perhaps something in it as we might learn from the Japanese success story?

Ali Bhutto Takes Over Reins of Power in Pakistan

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — The problems are currently piled high on the Indian subcontinent, even higher than usual following a war that has transformed the political face of that teeming, poverty-ridden region.

Pakistan has lost a region containing what had been more than half its population, all as a result of the devastating blow unleashed by Indian military forces.

Such an upheaval for most nations the size of Pakistan would be considered catastrophic and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the newly installed president, insists his country will wreak revenge against India.

But the 43-year-old Bhutto, a highly accomplished politician, has enormous problems on his home front in West Pakistan.

Thus, the statements made by many foreign observers to be expressing a ritualistic — but not necessarily a seriously-intended — threat.

However, the Indians themselves have no cause for complacency.

For one, a predictable eruption of civil strife has occurred in Eastern centres such as Dacca since the surrender of Pakistani government forces.

And the movement of East Pakistan refugees from India back to their homeland has yet to begin on a mass scale.

And the poverty-plagued Indians find themselves burdened with 10 million Pakistani prisoners of war.

For the moment, however, more of the world's attention is focused on West Pakistan, the rump state over which Bhutto at last holds sway.

For years, the Oxford-educated Bhutto has awaited the moment when he would be able to take power.

At the elections where he received an overwhelming endorsement in the West — as did Mujibur Rahman, the Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, in the East — he emerged clearly as a man of destiny in the events that led to the regime of Yahya Khan collapsed.

Now this collapse has taken place and for the first time in history the remains of Pakistan has a civilian in command.

And Bhutto has an enormous task ahead in organizing his government as well as an implementing the left-wing reforms which he — ironically as the new leader of the Bhutto family — has repeatedly pledged to enact.

Bhutto himself has described the job as one of total reconstruction.

How he will grapple with this challenge while compensating for Pakistan's Eastern defeat and handling relations with India, the world's other superpowers should keep the country at the centre of the international stage.

Prime Minister Still A Power in the Land

Montreal Gazette

Those looking for hints about what the issues will be in the next federal election, apart from Prime Minister Trudeau in his short speech to Liberal party members, found few.

The issue will be Mr. Trudeau and his conception of government. Mr. Trudeau will be the issue perhaps even more than he was in the 1968 election.

Listening to his political partisan speech and watching the manner of his delivery, quickly brought to mind again the almost inexplicable reason why he was chosen leader of his party in 1968 and then voted into power.

There was much to quarrel with in the content of his speech. His explanation of the government's decision to rush through with revisions of the Income Tax Act was facile and unconvincing, for example.

But his candid approach to the whole question of governing is still refreshing. In effect, he said: "You wanted stable government — you got it. You wanted initiatives tackled — you got it. You wanted redistribution of wealth — you got it. You wanted the presence of a strong team of French-speaking Canadians in Ottawa — you got it.

"Government isn't perfect and we aren't perfect. But thats the way it is. If you don't like us, vote us out."

There are fewer Canadians who, even if disliked in the Pacific surrendered to the Japanese invaders.

Farley Mowat and the Canada Council

Montreal Star

Good old Farley Mowat — kill a whale, skewer him with a ready, taking on that well-known sitting duck, the Canada Council! There are few more terrible sights than a disgruntled writer in full cry, and Farley's taste for vituperation is only slightly less than his talent for prose. No doubt the Council will roll with the verbal punches even though he refuses to endorse the list of them with real working artists and writers and their "creative critics," whoever they may be. Artists are expected to bite the hand that feeds them now and again: Farley, however, snarls and gnaws away like a shaggy dog worrying a recalcitrant bone.

Does he really believe that any self-respecting artist would wish to waste his gift, time and energy in some bureaucratic way? Does he really think that any committee composed exclusively of "creative" persons would be anything less than a shambles? Writers are a notoriously fractious group at the best of times, and they could hardly be expected to agree on the time of day, let alone on anything so financial largesse.

No one, least of all the Canada Council itself, pretends that all is for the best in the best of all artistic worlds, but by and large they've done a remarkably astute and generous job in the nearly 13 years since they were established by the Parliament. And surely Farley could find better advice for younger writers than his choice of inhibition, suicide or a job with IBM. Incidentally, why used book from this man?

Back to the old typewriter, Farley!

Christmas For Pagans Says Priest

NEW YORK (AP) — Give Christmas back to the pagans. That's the suggestion of a Roman Catholic clergyman, who says the holiday has become a "grotesque counterfeit" of its intended message.

A lot of people partly agree with him, but most of them don't go along with his idea of switching the date.

The suggestion was put forth in an article in the U.S. Catholic, a Chicago monthly. Rev. Peter J. Riga says the Christmas season has been perverted so grossly" that it has become a "threat to mental and emotional well-being."

"The modern commercial pagans have destroyed not only the religious basis of this feast, but also the human warmth and merriness that grew up around it," he writes.

As Christians we should have the courage to leave this lifeless carcass to the forces of commercialism and to choose another date on which to celebrate the true meaning of Christmas."

A sampling of readers showed that most of them agree the holiday has been seriously blighted by materialism, but 75 per cent of them definitely don't want it shifted to another date.

"There are too many good things that happen," said Ed Echefers, Wallingford, Conn.

Rev. Francis A. Zielinski, Plymouth, Mich., said he agreed that "Christmas is fakey, phoney, commercialized and unhealthy" but the idea of another date for it "still have about the same effect as a direct assault on motherhood or banning hot dogs. . . ."

"Scrooge, though probably for different reasons, said much the same thing," commented James A. Dunn, Sharon, Mass. "We can strive to change what is wrong . . . but if we don't succeed we can still enjoy what is enduring and good in it."

Father Riga noted that the Dec. 25 date for Christmas was not set by early Christians, but was adopted in the fourth century by Julius I to offset the observance to the pagan Roman celebration of "sol Invictus," the sun god.

Since the exact date of Jesus' birth isn't known, Father Riga suggested that Christmas be transferred to the date observed by Eastern Orthodoxy, Jan. 6, Epiphany, marking the manifestation of the Christ child to the Magi.

It is time to "come out of the land of Egypt from which the ancestors of wares and materialism have taken over . . . and leave Dec. 25 to the pagans," he says.

He says the proper religious message of Christmas, which is the gift of God's love for men and his visible revelation in history through Jesus Christ, has "long since died an ignominious death."

Christmas should celebrate "the triumph of selfless and unstinting love of our brothers," especially the poor.

Stirling Personals

Sixty-five members of the Stirling Senior Citizens' Club enjoyed a turkey Christmas dinner on Thursday at St. John's Anglican Parish Hall at the noon hour. Rev. Charles E. Staples gave the invocation and before leaving president Fred Heasman thanked the caterers for the tasty dinner.

Later in the Masonic Temple, Mrs. C. Pitman and Mrs. G. Clarke, leaders and the members of the Stirling Guide Company entertained with music, plays and games. At the close each member received a leather book mark.

The group served doughnuts and coffee for the social hour and a sale of articles provided a box of home made fudge.

A large crowd attended the amateur variety stage show sponsored by the Juvenile hockey team held in the local arena followed by an old time dance in the community hall. Master of ceremonies for the event was Lyle Couch of Peterborough. Talent for the show came from all of the surrounding area. Those assisting to plan the event were Jack and Dorothy McCaughen and the coach of the team Everett Doxtator.

Jesus, the Unknown One, Is An Enigma to His Followers

This is the fourth article in a five-part series about the Incarnation, dealing with the identity of that friend of man and partner of God, Jesus of Nazareth.

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

You're walking along the road and you meet a different sort of person than you've ever known before, the Unknown One. And so, quite naturally, you wonder: "Who are you?"

This is the inescapable and inevitable question about Jesus, the extraordinary. One who joined the human procession on that night of nights at the first Christmas.

There is a strangeness about Him, an otherness, and yet also an allikeness, a deep-down fellowship. Both provoke the asking:

"Who are You? Are You God Himself?"

And the answers have proliferated through the ages, and still do, filling millions of volumes, an endless scrutinizing of Him, now and in the past, probing, sifting, examining, analyzing, theorizing over the mystery of the man, Jesus.

The "New Being," the influential American philosopher Paul Tillich called Him. Switzerland's great Karl Barth termed Him "God's man and man's God." Other designations abound:

"The 'Man-for-others." The "Great Sign." The "Suffering Servant." "God's in-breaking in history." The "Son of Man . . . Son of God . . . the Messiah . . . Teacher . . . Lord . . . prophet . . . the Living Word of God."

But with all the descriptions, none say it all; none lifts the veil entirely. Even His disciples never fully understood Him. "Who is this man . . ?" they would whisper among themselves at some baffling interlude.

When the Roman governor, Pilate, pressed Him to identify Himself, Jesus stood silent. At His birth, and throughout His ministry, there was this lofty distance about Him, yet also the tenderness, the majesty and the humility.

Unlike other religions, which are based mainly on disciplines, ethical systems and metaphysical abstractions, Christianity alone focuses primarily on a person, on Jesus Christ.

Yet, among believers and non-believers, He continues to evoke questions, speculation, wondering and fascination.

"The mystery of Christ's presence somehow touches all men," says Roman Catholic theologian Bernard J. Cooke.

Atheists often voice admiration for Him. Albert Camus said He was so humane "that I think pretty well of Him, my friend." Soviet poet Evgeny Yevtushenko says, "Not that I am a follower of Christ, but I like His manner."

Although it is almost universal for people, whatever their religion, to appreciate Jesus as a great human being, a masterful teacher and leader, wise, courageous and kind, still very few adore them, balking at the rest.

But this other thing is what mystifies, disturbs and challenges. It is His cool, audacious, complete identification with God Himself. This is His difference, His utter uniqueness.

And He asserts it calmly, steadily, in His acts, His attitudes and His words, without apology or boast. "I seek not

Second Storey On Museum

PICTON (Staff) — Representatives from the department of public records and archives have suggested Prince Edward county councilors should consider installation of a second floor in the county museum to double the existing space.

The museum, formerly the Old Anglican Church, has been under a renovation program during the past year.

Members of the property and equity committee met this month with Mrs. Pauline Hall and Mr. V. N. Symons from the department of records and archives to discuss the type of museum and physical character of the building when renovations are completed.

Committee chairman Roy Brooks commented that the representatives seemed to offer many ideas without suggesting sources of funds to promote them. An annual grant of $600 to $800 is made, however, by the provincial government.

They were very pleased with our progress so far," said warden Allan Anderson.

"We agree that they have a lot of advice but they didn't tell us how to get the money for it," he added.

Mr. Anderson observed that in the years to come council must decide how quickly it wishes to complete the museum.

My own will but the will of Him who sent Me." He said. And it is not just the sayings but His behavior that attest to it.

"The relationship of Jesus to God is that of a personal communion so profound as to constitute an essential union," says United Church theologian Daniel Day Williams. Or, as Protestant scholar William Ernest Hocking put it:

"Christ is the human face of God."

Winter Works Program Set

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora and Lake will spend the week incentive money on cutting brush, removing dead elm trees and erecting new fencing.

Under the provincial-municipal work incentive program, the township has been allocated $1,675 for labor during the winter.

Council decided on a pay rate of $2 an hour and will obtain a list of prospective workers' names from welfare and unemployment insurance offices in Belleville, Reeve John Wilkes said that if the $2 an hour rate does not result in wages equal to the welfare and unemployment insurance the worker has been receiving, the difference is made up by the two departments.

Reeve Wilkes also reported that the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority plans to ask the Ontario and federal governments for money under the winter work programs for the clearing of land around Allen's Mills in Rawdon Township. This area is being developed for recreational use.

Industrial Park Services Needed

PICTON (Staff) — If Prince Edward County plans to attract industries to provide employment and permit young residents to discover opportunities locally "something more than a bare field" must be available.

This observation was offered to county council last night by George Vincent, chairman of the industrial and development committee as he read a monthly report demanding a firm budget figure by the end of January for a county industrial park.

The committee report, approved by council, contained a motion asking industrial commissioner James Duggan to hold further talks with the PUC and the town of Picton regarding services to be provided Edward's industrial development program.

"I'm sure that our members left this meeting with a firm realization of what we are trying to do," noted Mr. Vincent.

People used to cite the biblical miracles as evidence of Jesus' divinity, but this tendency has waned in a day when nature itself yields a tide of miracles and wonders.

Other, subtler qualities distinguished Him. One was the unheard-of way He prefixed His statements with an "Amen," meaning "so be it" or "so it is," usually added to close a prayer, but Jesus absolutely affirms it beforehand.

"Verily, I say to you," is generally is translated or "Truly, I say to you," but it means, "Amen, I say to you," bluntly claiming God's seal on it. Jesus uses it continuously and it is such a novel reversal that the different gospel writers couldn't all have made it up.

Welfare Load 'Much Higher'

PICTON (Staff) — The December case load of welfare recipients is "much higher" this year than it was in 1970 according to Prince Edward welfare administrator Nevada Lagroix.

Mrs. Lagroix explained to county councillors, last night that figures have risen because of the length of time required for unemployment insurance to become effective.

"The very shortest time" between application for unemployment insurance and receipt of the first cheque is five weeks.

Mrs. Lagroix said that application forms are returned for minor errors and additional delay is often caused in this way.

Unlike the prophets of old who reported or interpreted the will of a distant, ineffable God, Jesus unprecedentedly called Him "My Abba," translated "Father," but it actually more resembles the modern "daddy" or "papa."

It was the intimate expression of a son used only in the privacy of a Jewish family of that day, conveying the utmost tenderness, closeness and solidarity. It had never been used in Judaism to refer to the all-powerful, Holy God.

But it came regularly, spontaneously to the lips of Jesus, and He told His followers to use it. Little wonder that He shocked people, took them aback, gave them pause. "Who is this man . . . By what authority . . ?"

Matthew quotes Him: "No one knows the Son except the Father, and no one knows the Father except the Son." In John's gospel, He says: "He who believes believes not in Me but Him who sent Me . . . What I say, I say as the Father has bidden Me . . . I and the Father are One."

And He kept repeating a disturbing paradox—that the person who seeks his own life loses it and the one who loses his life for others lives. Odd, illogical, but the truth of this man who dominated each situation, disarming objections, upsetting norms of society, bothering people but gripping them.

Whether or not Jesus ever directly claimed such titles as "Son of God," "Messiah," "Christ" or "Lord," Bible scholars, in differentiating between what they consider genuine sayings and interpolations, are doubtful.

"Very likely He did not," says Roman Catholic Avery Dulles.

As Anglican Bishop John A. T. Robinson puts it: "Jesus never claims to be God, personally; yet He always claims to bring God, completely."

Because of His powerful impact, including the towering event of all, His Resurrection, the apostles at last simply could apprehend Him in no other way than as the very presence of God.

They hadn't been able to explain why they followed Him in the first place and were repeatedly confused and uncertain about His mission, but they saw a beauty and power in His life that made them want it, which captivated them, held them and finally awoke their realization.

"You are the Christ, the Son of the living God," Peter blurted. And Thomas, his doubts shattered by the incredible but real, confessed, "My Lord and my God."

Recent theology and the emphasis of the churches has dwelt mainly on Jesus' humanity, and He was, indeed, an enthralling, loving and keenly discerning man, entirely human, altogether manly, and many people see Him only in that category.

Great Majority of Canadians Will Find Tax Reductions Are Only Small Change

OTTAWA (CP) — When Canadians see the cash results of the new federal tax law on their paysiips in the new year, most will have cause to wonder what all the political fuss has been about.

The great majority of the country's eight million taxpayers—virtually all of the 8.8 million who make a living as employees of somebody else—will count the changes strictly in small change.

The legislation, which prompted protracted Commons debate and long study by a Senate committee before passage Tuesday, was sweating only routine royal assent to become law.

The federal revenue department still is preparing its payroll tax-deduction guides for 1972, but indications are that changes for most taxpayers will be minimal.

Further, what many may gain on the tax swing, they will lose on the roundabout of other federal or provincial measures.

An advance next month on the tax front will be effect in part among 1.2 million Canadians who will be newly enrolled in the unemployment insurance program and required to pay into that.

In the legislative offing is a revision of family allowances that will reduce those for families in middle-and upper-income ranges.

Examples:

—A single Ontario resident earning $6,000 a year with standard tax-deduction claims will be roughly $6 cents a week better off under the tax law, with weekly take-home pay of $91.54 instead of the average $90.74 this year.

—A married Albertan with two school-age children, standard deductions and a salary of $10,000 a year will take home about $154.59 a week under the new regime compared with an average $153.38 this year.

Even government estimates of benefits when the tax bill was published last June were relatively small.

They ranged between savings of $5 a year for a single person at $8,000 to a tax cut of $1,116 for a married man at $100,000. Some would pay more—up to $78 extra a year for a single person with $11,000 in annual income.

Other factors have watered the picture since June, notably the Oct. 14 announcement of a three-per-cent reduction in basic federal tax—not off the full federal and provincial—which is to be carried into the new system.

On the basis of the 1970 law, that would result in a saving of less than 30 cents a week for the $6,000-a-year bachelor, under a dollar a week for the $10,500 annually family man.

The $10,000 man will start paying 54 cents a week in unemployment insurance in the new year. The $6,000 man is already paying about twice that.

Unemployment insurance deductions will be newly-deductible from income in calculating income tax.

But payments made on behalf of an employee for medical care insurance by his boss—but not those by his provincial government—will have to be added to income, raising the tax take.

Residents of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia stand to lose from the medical-care ruling.

In those three provinces, it is common for employers to pay part of the medical care premiums. In the others, most or all of the costs are financed by government out of general revenue.

The practical impact will vary widely.

But for many in Ontario, Alberta and B.C., a break on deducting unemployment insurance payments for tax purposes would be wiped out by the medical-care rule.

Thus, an employee paying the top rate of unemployment insurance will be able to deduct $70.20 from annual income before calculating tax.

But, if that employee is a family man and his employer pays half the medical care premiums, he will have to add to his taxable income up to $122 in Ontario, $75 in B.C. and $89 in Alberta.

Adding to regional differences, shifts in provincial tax systems would vary the impact of the new tax law on different pay packets.

Under federal-provincial tax-sharing agreements, Ottawa collects and turns over a set share of the income tax taken under its calculations to a provinces but Quebec, which collects its own.

All but British Columbia, Ontario and Nova Scotia annou flop-rates provinces in the agree ment have special arrange ments whereby Ottawa collect for them more than the stand ard proportion earmarked fo provincial treasuries.

With technical changes in the tax-sharing agreement neces sary under the new law, th provinces may decide that now is the best time to take a bigge slice.

The various ups and downs of tax and welfare programs, how ever, are likely to leave th middle majority of Canadia taxpayers roughly where the now are financially.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

ANDRE MERCIER WATCH MAKER
10 VICTORIA AVE.

OUR COUNTRY, CANADA.

Christmas.

Watch a child's face on Christmas morning and feelings you had almost forgotten come flooding back.

The sheer wonder of being alive. The simple pleasure of sharing our love and affection with one another.

For when Canadian snows lie deep and the winds blow chill it's sometimes easy to forget.

Yet in the midst of winter comes Christmas—a shining, brilliant jewel that brightens the winter dark and brings us together once again. A reminder that in this hardy, northern land our greatest strength lies in our unity, our togetherness.

So, as we share our Christmas with one another, let us also remember the joy of being a part of this vast adventure called Canada.

Canada, our country. A community of people, cultures and ideals holding to a common pride.

Together it is ours to keep and to build.

Seagram's V.O. Made in Canada...and proud of it.

Politics Remain A Male Domain

By DEBORAH RANKIN
AP Staff Press Writer

Women have had the right to vote and run for office in many countries for more than half a century but politics remain largely a male domain. Social change and women's lib have had little effect in increasing the number of female legislators.

There are 131 members of the states of the United Nations. Only three of these have women heading the government—Prime Ministers Indira Gandhi of India, Golda Meir of Israel and Sirimavo Bandaranaike of Ceylon. Leading countries have women as heads of state, as in Britain and the Netherlands, but they don't run the government.

It's unusual for a woman to be elevated to cabinet rank and even rarer for one to be named to a top-level judiciary post.

Nowhere does female political representation come close to matching the dominance of their sex in terms of population.

The closest approach seems to be the Soviet Union, where women account for about 39 per cent of elective posts and almost 54 per cent of the population. But the real decisions are made behind the closed doors of the Kremlin, a male bastion.

By Chinese account, 17 per cent of the 3,037 deputies in the last National People's Congress were women. But parliamentary government is not an urgent affair in Peking —the last congress adjourned nearly seven years ago. And as in the Soviet Union, decisions are made by the Communist hierarchy.

Women make a strong showing in other Communist countries such as North Vietnam, where they constitute about one-fourth of the parliament. Women's political muscle is paltry by comparison in independent and Western countries, where female legislative representation averages about five per cent at best.

Despite the push for more political activity by women, the number of female legislators has declined in at least a half-dozen countries.

An Associated Press survey shows women have only token representation in the legislative bodies of many powerful countries.

Canada has one woman in the 265-man House of Commons and six in the 162-member Senate, which is appointed.

The United States has 11 women in the 435-member House of Representatives and one woman senator among 99 male colleagues. This is a drop from 1962 when there were 19 female legislators, half of whom had succeeded their husbands.

In Britain 26 women sit in the 630-member House of Commons; the 1,493-seat House of Lords includes 38 women peers.

West German women occupy 6.8 per cent of legislative seats, a 2.1-per cent drop since 1919 when Germany's parliament was established.

In France, where women won the vote in 1944, seven of the 487 seats in the National Assembly and five of the 291 places in the Senate are held by females.

Sweden's women make up 14 per cent of the one-chamber parliament. They occupy 41 of 350 seats.

The Netherlands counts 13 women among the 150-member House of Representatives and two women in the 75-seat Senate.

The Australian House of Representatives is all-male but the 59-member Senate includes two women.

Japan reports 13 women in the 252-member Senate and seven in the 491-seat House of Representatives.

India has 21 women in the House of the People, whose 518 members are directly elected, and 18 women in the House of the States, whose 240 members are elected by state assemblies. There has been no increase since Mrs. Gandhi took office in 1966 and a drop since 1962 when 54 women sat in the parliament.

In Israel, eight women won admission to the 120-seat parliament in the 1969 balloting that put Mrs. Meir in office. Three fewer than were elected in 1965.

In Chile, where wives cannot own property or open a bank account without their husband's permission, women make up five per cent of parliament.

Mexico's 211-member House of Representatives has 11 women; two of the 59 senators are female.

Turkish women hold less than 1.5 per cent of the seats in their parliament, a decline from the 4.1 per cent share they had in 1935, the first year they cast ballots.

In Ceylon, where adult suffrage has been in effect since 1935, the number of women legislators has doubled since the parliament was formed in 1947. Six of its 157 members are women.

Women's political life has existed to some extent in British since the early middle ages. Female peers with titles in their own right have sat as equals with male peers for centuries in the House of Lords. Women's suffrage arrived in 1918 and the first woman took her seat in the House of Commons the following year.

Two women serve in Britain's present Conservative government: Margaret Thatcher, secretary of education and science, and Lady Tweedsmuir, secretary of state for Scotland.

The Spanish parliament, the Cortes, has 554 members but only 1967 are elected. Five women are in the Cortes.

Female suffrage came to Sweden in 1919 and five women were admitted to parliament in the next election. Ingrid Gerde Widenar became the first woman to serve on the high court three years ago, when she was elected a Supreme Court judge.

Alva Myrdal, chief Swedish delegate to the Geneva disarmament conference, is one of the country's two female cabinet members, as minister of church affairs. Camilla Odhnoff is consultative minister for family affairs.

Australian women have voted since the country's federation in 1901 but the first female senator and representative weren't elected until 1943.

It took women in South Africa 18 years after gaining suffrage in 1930 to elect a female legislator to parliament. Currently one of the 34 senators is a woman, and two are in the 170-seat House of Assembly.

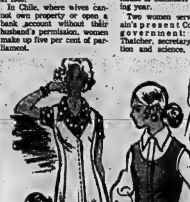
In the Soviet Union, where women have had voting rights since the 1917 revolution, the sole female cabinet member is Ekaterina A. Furtseva, minister of culture and widow of the late premier Nikita Khrushchev, she was once a member of the Politburo but was dropped in a political reshuffle after he fell from power. One female judge sits on the 20-member Soviet Supreme Court.

Women have been in India's legislative bodies since colonial days but it was not until 1952 that voting qualifications based on property and education—not sex—were removed.

Christian Tansu de Tamargo serves with four male judges on the Supreme Court in Mexico, where women won the franchise in 1953.

Dr. Turkan Akyol became Turkey's first woman cabinet member this year, minister of health. A non-political member of the government of premier Nihat Erim, she has won praise for promoting birth control and public health programs.

Women in South Vietnam have had the vote since elections were inaugurated after the Second World War. There is one woman in the 53-seat Senate and five female deputies recently were elected to the 159-member lower house.



In North Vietnam, 125 deputies in the 420-member parliament are women.

Twenty-three sit in the 660-seat Indonesian House of Representatives but most hold their positions mainly because of the political strength of their husbands. In Egypt, where women won full political rights in 1956, six were in the 360-member parliament dissolved in September.

Argentine women gained suffrage in 1947. There has been no Congress since the ruling military regime did away with national legislative bodies in 1966.

Even at the highest levels a woman's entry into politics usually is through relatives' ties. Mrs. Gandhi holds the post once filled by her father, Jawaharlal Nehru. Ceylon's Mrs. Bandaranaike became the first female prime minister in 1960 when she succeeded her assassinated husband.

Sam Turcotte, a baker and pastry cook at the Officers' Mess, CFB Trenton, adds finishing touches to his latest masterpiece, a replica of a church made of sugar cubes and white icing. It will be used as a centrepiece at the Christmas party at the Officers' Mess.

Dazzling Sugar Cube Replica of Church Created by Baker for New Year's Party

This season several hostesses have excelled themselves in dreaming up ingenious and imaginative decorations for their parties as well as in providing the utmost in food and entertainment. But few party table centrepieces can claim to surpass the magnificent creation which will hold the place of honor at the New Year's Eve party at the Officers' Mess, Trenton air force base.

Created by Sam Turcotte of 50 Grove Street, a baker and pastry cook at the officers' Mess, the unique centrepiece is a replica of a church made of dazzling white sugar cubes held together by royal icing. Complete with a bell, steeple and red stained glass windows, the church is 20 inches high from the base to the steeple and is 11 inches long by 16 inches wide. No detail has been overlooked including a town door in front with steps leading into a path and arches at all the windows. Standing on a white "snow covered" base (made of royal icing) it is completely hollow inside and fitted with an electric bulb which exudes a warm red glow through the glass windows when lit up.

Mr. Turcotte who has been making fancy cakes and pastries for 37 years took seven days to build his sugar cube church. Achievements of the past include a seven-cook boat made of bread (which was later filled with lobsters and used for the last New Year's eve party), candy houses, and baskets made of braided dough complete with handles.

The bread boat was such a hit at last year's party he was asked to do an "encore" this year. Another time he made what he describes as a lobster band. After covering miniature cardboard chairs with royal icing, he put a lobster on each, holding a musical instrument, also made of royal icing. One lobster sat at a white royal icing piano!

However, his wife considers the church his masterpiece and his biggest achievement to date. Besides his hands, and an infinite amount of patience, the only equipment he used was a boiling pot and a cutter to cut the glass for the windows.

Having covered the base with icing, he made the sides with sugar cubes, leaving spaces for the windows and then built the roof separately, fixing the roof in place when it dried 24 hours later.

"Just like building a house" said Mr. Turcotte. At present the centrepiece which Mr. [illegible] last for years if protected from [illegible] it will be transported to Trenton by truck as the structure is so tall that putting it through a car door might damage the steeple.

[illegible] be learned his trade, Mr. Turcotte replied [illegible] largely self-taught, [illegible] as a pastry cook and baker in the navy and the railroad before accepting his present position in the air force.

Rich Christmas Food Tough On Dieters

TORONTO (CP) — Christmas can be a tough time for people who are trying to lose weight.

By way of encouragement, Adelaide Daniels of Weight Watchers has devised a dinner menu that comes as close to the real thing as a dieter dares.

The turkey itself, roasted without dressing, can be basted with a mixture of diced vegetables such as celery, green peppers, mushrooms, cooked tender to chicken bouillon.

A vegetable-and-fruit stuffing can take the place of heavier varieties. It calls for: 1 package (12 oz.) frozen chopped broccoli, 1 package (10 oz.) frozen cauliflower, ½ cup chopped celery, ¼ cup chopped green pepper, 4 teaspoons dehydrated onion flakes, 2 medium apples peeled, cored and diced, ½ cup water and 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning.

You cook broccoli and cauliflower according to package directions, allowing an extra 2 or 3 minutes cooking time. Drain and put in a mixing bowl. Add remaining ingredients and mix with an electric or hand mixer. Turn into a baking dish, 9 by 9 by 2 inches, and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

With it she suggests serving baked mushrooms and asparagus puree or green beans and, instead of potatoes, fluffy whipped turnips.

Peel and dice 1 pound of yellow turnips, add ¼ teaspoon butter flavoring, salt and pepper. Cook turnips until tender. Drain, add remaining ingredients and whip until light and fluffy.

For dessert, instead of the traditional mince pie or plum pudding, serve a squash pie with a whipped topping.

The pie calls for: two 10-ounce packages frozen summer squash, 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, ¼ cup boiling water, ¼ teaspoon pumpkin pie spice, 1-3 cup instant non-fat milk powder, ½ teaspoon vanilla, artificial sweetening to equal 10 teaspoons sugar or to taste.

Cook squash. Pour cold water into blender and sprinkle gelatin over it to soften. Add hot water and blend. Add squash and remaining ingredients and blend until smooth. Pour into individual foil tart pans or custard cups. Place in shallow baking dish, add hot water to a depth of ½ inch and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

For the topping, use: ½ cup chilled evaporated skimmed milk, ¼ teaspoon vanilla, artificial sweetener if you wish, ¼ teaspoon lemon juice.

Combine all ingredients in chilled mixing bowl. Whip until stiff peaks form. Serve at once.

Successful Living

Punctuality Is the Courtesy of Kings

By DORIS CLARK

Stella is a charming, vivacious young woman. But all her friends agree that her habit of being late is a nuisance.

Plan to go to a sale with Stella, and you can be sure that all the bargains will be gone by the time you get there! Plan to go to a show with her, and you can count on being too late to get a good seat.

Stella laughingly admits she is always on the "run" trying with her doctor and dentist because she never gets to an appointment on time. She tells humorously how on a bus tour to Europe, she missed the bus and was stranded for a whole day in a village where no one spoke English.

It isn't funny. Stella is already forming similar bad habits in her young children. They are forever dashing into their places at school at the last minute — or later.

Don't be a last-minute-Ine!
— Dpt Turcotte

Dear Doris: I had to settle a complicated estate within my own family. It was a headache, because searching for personal documents of the deceased and trying to read his mind about things was well-nigh impossible. This prompted me to draw up a form that could be used for setting down this kind of information while the donor is still alive and well able to do so.

The AEC Estate Guide (Personal Record) is the result. On it a person indicates such things as location of will, insurance policies, securities, bonds, records. There is a spot for indicating a quick list of assets and liabilities, listing bank accounts. Another part embodies what the survivor is going to want to know about brief personal matters.

The helpful AEC Estate Guide of mine has been a blessing to many bereaved people. A E C.

Dear A E C: It's a dandy folder. Our readers would be interested in this quote from your previous letter:

"A lady wrote me that, she had to go to England to take care of things about her father's estate. She found a copy of my Guide, which he had filled out in 1964. She took it along with 'the to-the-inner and she said he had great praise for my Guide."

Anybody would find it helpful. Any reader may have a copy by sending in 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Ask for AEC Estate Guide.

Dear Doris: For a long time now I have been trying to get the words to a French Canadian poem that was published shortly after the Dionne Quintuplets were born. I own verse of which goes:

PAPA DIONNE

"He feels just like He's ordered him One nice bean' for lunch And den de waitress Bring him quick Do whole banana bunch!"

— Sentimentals

Dear Sentimentals: These lovely little Quints created a tremendous stir, didn't they? I wonder if Papa Dionne really felt? He already had six mouths to feed, didn't he? And in a socio-conservative part of Northern Ontario. Anybody else know this rhyme?

Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope.

Time now I've been trying to get the word to a friend

Place Mats Are Suggested

EDMONTON (CP) — The Edmonton Homemakers' Retired and Semi-Retired suggests a number of "easy-to-make" things for the person who cooks for herself and eats alone.

"A place mat is the first suggestion of one member.

"If you use a place mat on the table and nice china and silverware even bread and butter tastes good.

The members were attending a forum discussing the "single-easy as pie" cuisine with Edmonton as moderator. And each shared his or her favorite suggestions to improve lonely meals.

"Irish stew," expounded one man. "There's the answer. Just put everything into a pot and let it cook."

"An electric frying pan!" was another suggestion from the most important list. "Put meat and vegetables all in at once and there's only one pan to wash."

Several members extolled the merits of the one pot meal. It was generally agreed that making too many dishes from one person's meal was a discouraging task.

As well, members were enthusiastic about prepared and semi-prepared convenience foods. They don't want them all the time, but they appreciate not being able to make the exact amount, with instant potatoes, was mentioned.

One member complained that she had a problem with trying to prepare rare-but juicy roast beef when she had to cook it with such a small amount for one. Miss Summers suggested cooking it while it was still frozen.

"You'll get it rare in the mid die for sure."

The Experts Say

Goose Is Often Holiday Fare

TORONTO (CP) — In countries where North American is not ubiquitous, goose is often traditional holiday fare.

Chef Wolfgang Teltz says practically that it is eaten in cold countries because it is a red meat, well coated in fat and helps maintain body heat in winter.

However you may feel about that, with the farmers set at 70-cell, his recipe for goose a la Mecklenbourgoise with red cabbage and potato dumplings would make a scrumptious change of pace for a holiday dinner.

Mr. Teltz is executive chef at Sutton Place Hotel, and he says he goes home at Christmas to eat this traditional German meal for his family.

A fruit dressing for a 12 pound goose to serve six people calls for: 2 loaves of white bread stale, 2 ounces of apples diced and sauteed, 8 ounces prunes diced, 4 ounces raisins, the goose liver diced and 2 cloves, 1 bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste.

The third part of the main meal is potato dumplings. They call for: 8 medium sized potatoes, 1½ tablespoons butter, 1 slice cubed toasted bread, 2 quarts water, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 egg beaten, 2-3 cup sifted flour, ¼ cup cornstarch.

Place the potatoes and boil until tender. Drain well and mash over low heat until dry. Mash well and set aside until cool.

Melt butter in a skillet and brown the bread cubes. Set aside.

Add egg, salt and pepper to taste to mashed potatoes, then work until fluffy. Add cornstarch and half the flour. Mix. Add remaining flour to make a soft dough. Break of pieces of the dough and shape into balls about 1½ inch diameter. Poke a bread cube into each potato ball.

Drop the dumplings into the boiled salted water, cooking as many as will lie uncrowded one layer deep. Cook with a boiling water. They will rise to the surface. Remove with a slotted spoon. Serve with melted butter.

Ann Landers

Marula Pips Not Available

Dear Ann Landers: I read in the papers about the young South African fellow who accidentally swallowed two women nine times in rapid succession. At his trial he said he had covered of himself after eating several pieces of fruit from the marula tree. According to the defence lawyer, marula pips have been used as an aphrodisiac for centuries.

Will you tell me where marula fruit can be purchased in the United States? If a person can't send away for it, I know I would be write to? Also, please tell me how many women you have not been let in on this secret? I thought we were an advanced civilization. Thank you. — Still Hoping

Dear Still: Marula pips are not available in the U.S. Apparently the consultants on aphrodisiacs, this "passion fruit" that has some aphrodisiac property as powdered reindeer penis and rhinoceros horn. There is no scientific evidence to support the claims of sexual stimulation. In plain English — forget it.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother used to say fools have parties and wise people enjoy them. I am beginning to realize how right she was. I've spent 20 years entertaining clods who never returned an invitation or sent a thank you note.

I was always the one who gave the good-way party or had the welcome to Houston party. I was the one who made social contacts for the rest of the family and the widowed. I was the nut who had a dinner so old acquaintances could renew their friendship and I never heard from a single one of them until the next year when they started calling to ask if I was going to give another one. I don't know how many times I introduced interesting couples in my home and the next think I knew they were divorcing each other and leaving us out.

Here is my problem:

My husband loves to have people around. He is happiest when we are entertaining. For example, if I call him at his office and say I'd like to have dinner in town and go to the theatre, he always inquires, "Did you invite anybody else?" When I say to him, "No—just us — he isn't interested and says, "Let's skip it."

What should I do, Ann Landers? Have you any other advice. It's time for another party. — Cheap

Dear Cheap: Th first thing you ought to do is examine your motives. Why do you give parties? If it's so you'll be invited back, quit, because it's not working. If, on the other hand, you entertain because your husband is happiest when people are around, I say that's a good enough reason. So, continue to be the hostess with the mostest and stop thinking of yourself as a champ.

Church Groups

CHRIST CHURCH GUILD

Christ Church Guild of the Anglican Church Women met recently in the form of a potluck dinner on December 14 at which time the Christmas theme was used and all of the members were invited.

Canon R. B. Wright gave an interesting Christmas message and a humorous reading was given by Mrs. Gordon.

During the business a new slate of officers was brought in and these include: president, Mrs. L. Gordon; vice-president, Mrs. F. Seeley; secretary, Mrs. Gwen Wright; treasurer, Mrs. Ellen Vesterfelt.

The meeting closed and Mrs. Beeby moved a vote of thanks to the executive.

Miller of Your Mind

by JOHN CONNELL

Does a wife fix her hair for her husband?

CERTAINLY, although it might take some convincing to prove that is a husband who watches his wife protect her new hairdo at night with the darndest looking get-ups. Yet, basically, she is getting her hair fixed for her husband. After all, when they go out together, she doesn't want anyone to think that her husband knew so little that he would ever marry a woman who couldn't take care of herself, now would she?

Are leaders happier than their followers?

IT'S A TOSS-UP: the leaders, though they may be driven by compulsions, find satisfaction in being able to lead; the followers would as a rule just obey. In between are the "middle-management" people who are perhaps unhappy with their lot. The leaders rarely think enough of them to delegate authority and responsibility, and those under them don't have enough confidence in them to accept them as anything more than "dunkies."

Is it harder to choose a career today?

IN ONE IMPORTANT aspect, choosing a career is harder today than it was in Father's day. Freedom, of course, can be that disturbance. Now no young people want to think of pensions before they start working. Yet many folks offer such leading pension plans that a young person starting out believes he is cheated right the first crack out of the box or else forfeit vested pension rights if he ever switches careers.

MPs Bickering Over Vacation For Christmas

OTTAWA (CP) — With their eyes turned to a dispute over their own Christmas vacation, MPs moved unenthusiastically Wednesday through two budget bills that would rearrange some tariffs and implement tax cuts announced months ago.

The Commons—and moments later the Senate—passed a bill putting into effect certain tariff adjustments announced by Finance Minister E. J. Benson in his June 18 budget.

Still in second-reading stage is its measure proposed Oct. 14 to cut personal income taxes by three per cent and corporate taxes by seven per cent. Those reductions have been in effect since July 1.

Meanwhile, representatives from all parties were dickering on whether to take just the weekend off for Christmas, or rise until Feb.-16.

The government wants the Commons to pass a long-dictated farm products marketing bill by tonight, then rise until February.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson has acceded to a Conservative proposal to exempt cattle from the bill, which would authorize establishment of inter-provincial marketing boards for various farm goods.

In the 14 months the bill has been before the Commons, this has been a major Conservative point of debate.

But the New Democrats were insisting Wednesday that cattle stay in the bill.

The government says the Commons will sit until the tax cuts and the marketing bill are passed.

In the midst of the argument, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield Wednesday attacked the government for proposing a recess until Feb. 18.

Either that meant the government has nothing to offer in the way of policy, he said in a statement, or that it plans to introduce policies without bringing them before Parliament.

Mr. Stanfield made special note of the possibility that the government might announce a policy on foreign ownership during the recess.

"In that case, Parliament must reconvene," he said.

He also complained that the recess would bar the opposition from pressing the government on policies to offset threatened high prices and unemployment.

In debate on the tax cuts, Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) said the bill exposes the soul of the Liberal party. Major benefits would go to the corporations and their wealthy investors, not employees.

He said the biggest cuts should have gone to the people in the $4,000-to-$7,000 income bracket—the people who have to spend their money. That would have been a better stimulant for the economy.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax East Hants) agreed.

There is enough salt here to rest up millions of fried eggs, but this heaping bucketful is headed for the highways. The Canada Safety Council says auto accidents involving property damage increase over 30 per cent in winter months when driving conditions are least favorable. Public works officials will rely upon salt and snowplows to maintain some 30,000 miles of Canadian streets and highways in bare pavement conditions this winter. (CP Photo)

PM Says 'If I Run' Giving Liberals Shock

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal organizers may be in a mess fashioning fit after three little words by Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday.

The words were "if I run," meaning in the next general election as Liberal leader.

Mr. Trudeau was asked at a news conference whether Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield can beat him in the next election.

He replied:

"I suppose he can. Anybody can beat me in the next election—if I run. But, you know, this is a completely hypothetical question. Can anyone beat me? I suppose so. I can beat them, too."

A reporter approached him privately after the news conference and asked him to clarify his words "if I run."

The prime minister repeated that the matter was hypothetical, that he did not wish to demoralize his party but that "anything is possible."

Mr. Trudeau, who seldom if ever rules out any possibility, seemed to be allowing for the chance, however remote, that somebody else might lead the Liberals in the next election.

He said he has not given any consideration to quitting politics—and several of his aides present at the news conference did not look even slightly worried about such a possibility.

But the words "if I run" were as the record for nervous or distraught Liberals to ponder.

The prime minister, as he had made known beforehand, had no announcements. But he commented on several subjects from the economy to relations with the U.S. to the Quebec situation.

Despite several questions on the subject, he declined to say whether the next election will be held in 1972 or 1973.

He said he does not know whether he will have time to the next month to consider major cabinet changes.

He would see Energy Minister J. J. Greene within a week or so for a decision on his cabinet future. Mr. Greene—has been recovering in London, Ont., from a stroke suffered in Japan in September.

The Commons, when it adjourns, will not reconvene until Feb. 18 and Mr. Trudeau said the cabinet will use this time to prepare legislation for the next session.

It is supposed to be the pre-election session, but Mr. Trudeau would not be drawn out on electoral timing.

He said bills which will die when the current session expires—it began Oct. 2, 1972—will be taken back in cabinet for reassessment and possible redrafting. These include the competition bill.

The prime minister said foreign ownership policy will be announced in January at the earliest and probably not until the second half of February.

In a slightly different context, he said Canadians will probably tell the government it is anti-American once this policy is announced.

On trading negotiations with the U.S., Mr. Trudeau said the government is trying to make the best possible deal "without offending them or misusing their friendship."

The U.S. was justified in some of its demands during these negotiations—for instance, a demand that Canada's tourists to the U.S. be given higher allowances for goods bought in the U.S.

This was not to say, Mr. Trudeau added, that the government would give in to this demand.

Senators Unite To Blast Critics

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal and Conservative Senators Wednesday blasted New Democrat MP Stanley Knowles, television networks and the press for alleged distortion of Senate deliberations on the tax bill.

Sarto Fournier (L—Quebec) said the Senate should study the offending television film clips and newspaper texts "and take action if necessary."

John Connolly (L—Ont.) raised the issue on a question of privilege, referring in statements by Mr. Knowles broadcast Tuesday on the 11 p.m. CTV news. Mr. Knowles had said the Senate spent only a few hours debating the bill.

Mr. Connolly also quoted CTV's Bruce Phillips as saying the Senate spent only four days on the bill, compared with 50 days spent in Commons debate.

"This morning, on the front page of the Montreal Gazette, a correspondent by the name of Tierney—and God forgive an Irishman for doing a thing as irresponsible as this—writes that the Senate dealt with the hefty 750-page tax bill in just three days."

Mr. Tierney is an Ottawa reporter for Southam News Services.

Mr. Connolly said it is not accurate reporting to ignore the fact a Senate committee spent three months studying the tax bill and listening to 129 witnesses before the bill was formally before the Senate. The Senate itself spent "practically all of last week" discussing the committee's report, then spent a day on the tax bill. The bill was disgusted in committee Monday and passed by the Senate Tuesday.

He said journalists and "some politicians" overlook the parliamentary rule that the Senate cannot amend money bills. This ban also applies to tax bills, he said.

"The political commentators of this country, and at times politicians themselves, show a very immature attitude toward the established institutions of our bicameral system. They exhibit a lack of sophistication which causes them to be impervious to an understanding of the work of this chamber."

Allister Grosart (PC—Ontario) said "it is a matter of great regret" that television and press reports have created the impression the Senate did not give proper attention to the tax bill.

"I am an old newspaperman and I do not remember a single occasion in the reporting of any story at any time over a period of years when all the facts on either side, on a pro and con basis, were presented."

Mr. Grosart worked for the Toronto Star from 1928 to 1934 and for the Toronto Globe and Mail in the late 1930s.

Bad Year for Pulp

The Canadian pulp and paper industry has just gone through a bad year and the outlook for 1972 does not appear bright. The industry was hit hard by the floating of the Canadian dollar, slack demand on the major world markets, high cost of labor and transportation and taxes. The aerial photo shows the Bowater Mill at Corner Brook, Nfld., one of the many newsprint operations across the country that have been hurt by the declining demand and fierce competition on the world markets. Bosses and Union Hate New Postal Newsletter

OTTAWA (CP) — How would you feel if your boss started paying for a monthly publication to be read by those who work under you and which printed their criticisms of your performance?

Or, how would you react if, as a union leader, that same house organ started to ask your members how they really felt?

Well, that's Communication 71—the latest experiment in dialogue between the post office and its 47,000 workers.

As a department newspaper, Communication 71 probably has been matched by the federal public service for the last 18 months.

It featured on the front page of the December issue, for example, is a staff-written story relating nothing but criticism by postal employees in the Atlantic provinces of their working conditions.

Many of the workers quoted prefaced their remarks with "It doesn't matter what I say, you won't print it anyway."

Their observations printed in the article convey a strong impression that they feel the department is more interested in spending money on new labor-saving devices than on decent lunch rooms for employees.

It also leaves James McCall, president of the 15,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers, cold.

Communication 71, he said in an interview is a clever exercise in "subliminal brainwashing."

He said it was an attempt to undermine the union by persuading the workers management was listening to their complaints and plans to do some thing to meet them.

Furthermore, the newspaper "gets the emotions flying" just at a time when the union is beginning to obtain valid results from consultation proceeding with management.

At their convention in June, union delegates expressed strong resentment at the exposure of developing Communication 71.

They not only passed a resolution to boycott the newspaper, but also barred editor Grant Johnston from their proceedings.

Mr. Johnston, 30, is less concerned about the hostility of the union, however, than about pressure from above for greater management control over the content of the newspaper.

"I'm paid by management but I'm not going to be management's editor on this paper," he said in an interview. "This is not a management tool."

Crowd at Fire Ignored Plea to Give Alarm

TORONTO (CP) — The died of carbon monoxide poisoning in the fire.

The boys' mother Joyce, 29, testified that she asked people to call the fire department but they did nothing.

Finally, another brother Robert, 11, and a neighbor named in the alarm.

The jury recommended that highly flammable building material such as styrofoam should be specially marked by the manufacturer.

It also recommended that city fittings on gas meters that are not fireproof be encased in fire-proof shields.

Mosquitoes Off for Finland, Bunny or No Bunny

OTTAWA (CP) — A squad of Ottawa mosquitoes Monday heads for Finland to take on the aging power of J. P. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

"I think this is a showdown situation," said Gordon Juckes, executive secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Wednesday.

The mosquitoes are Ottawa East Voyageurs, a team of nine- and 10-year-old hockey players entered on fulfilling a four-game exhibition tour of Finland starting Jan. 3.

This was planned, with approval of the CAHA and the Finnish federation, as long ago as September when Juckes raised the question in Prague at an annual meeting of the IIHF with Ahearne in the chair.

Since then Finland has officially invited the Voyageurs, the CAHA has approved the tour, plans have been prepared, tickets purchased and bon-voyed.

But Wednesday Voyageur organizers were informed by telegram from Carl Lindblad, Finnish federation president, that Ahearne had threatened to pull the 1974 world hockey championships out of Finland if the Voyageurs so much as hold one practise in Finland with a Finnish team.

Both Lindblad and Ahearne were in Moscow at an IIHF meeting and neither since has been available for further comment.

But at meeting Wednesday, Voyageur parents and organizers of the tour, told they could reach Finland and find no team for their hops to play, decided to go ahead nevertheless.

"The parents all picked up their tickets tonight and we're taking our equipment with us," said spokesmen Pete Belanger after the meeting.

"If the Finns are afraid of Mr. Ahearne, then I guess we'll just play by ourselves—or sightsee. If they're not afraid, they'll play the games as scheduled.

"We'll see when we get there."

He said the team had received telegrams of support from Helsinki and from another federation saying several European organizations were concerned about Ahearne's attitude.

Belanger said the Finns, the Swedish federation and others had asked Ahearne to explain why he was taking this action and had been told, by him: "I don't have to tell you why."

His reported reason is that the CAHA did not follow proper procedures in arranging the tour.

But Juckes said Wednesday the only procedure involving Ahearne is for him to be kept informed of arrangements made and approved by legally established international federations.

IIHF rules, said Juckes, require only that the international president be kept informed and Ahearne has no power to either approve or disapprove of a tour. Neither has he the right to withdraw international championships from any country in which they are sanctioned by the IIHF board of directors.

Juckes said Finland was granted the 1974 championships at the Prague meeting in September by the IIHF general meeting and only another similar meeting can withdraw them.

"I don't think any international president has the authority to do what he is trying to do," Juckes said.

"When all federations involved are in agreement on a tour, the international president is overstepping his authority to a great degree in attempting to coerce a federation into his sort of action.

"I hope Finland puts up a fight on this."

Juckes still was upset at a similar crown against a team from Aurora, Ont., in October in connection with a tour of Sweden. Ahearne backed down that time after a strong Swedish protest.

He also expressed similar opinions regarding a current tour of the Netherlands by a team from Glendon College, York University, that has been forced to cancel its first game and hopes to be able to play Dec. 26.

The Netherlands federation is reported to be awaiting official sanction from Ahearne, but Juckes Wednesday said again that the tour had the sanction of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, the CAHA and the Netherlands federation and as far as he is concerned Ahearne has no jurisdiction in the matter.

"My opinion is he doesn't have official right (regarding tours)," Juckes said.

"He is simply a repository, if you want, of agreements in case of problems."

Dryden Deserves Oscar For Supporting Roles

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ken Dryden takes his supporting roles seriously.

When the lanky 24-year-old isn't minding the goals for Montreal Canadiens—of the National Hockey League, he's backstopping Nader's Raiders in the fight against pollution and betterment of consumer products.

Toronto Maple Leafs would have wished the latter role on the young law student Wednesday night after his game-saving acrobatics carried Montreal Canadiens past the visitors 4-2 and ran their home-ice unbeaten string to 15 games.

The victory moved Canadiens two points ahead of idle Boston Bruins in their battle for second in the National Hockey League's West Division.

Division-leading New York Rangers remained their three-point margin on Montreal, struggling past Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3 while Chicago Black Hawks used Bobby Hull's three goals to rout California's Golden Seals 4-1.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Kings won their second straight—a team high this season—2-1 over St. Louis Blues and Detroit Red Wings romped 3-0 over Vancouver Canucks.

Canadiens have lost only four games this year with Dryden, a leading candidate for rookie honors, in goal.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman, normally reluctant to praise of individuals, doesn't hesitate to rate towards the Toronto-born former all-America goalie at Cornell University when asked what makes the team click, even when it's going bad.

Twice the 6-foot-4 210-pounder, Dryden stopped trick Dave Keon on breakaways, the first time with Leafs ahead 1-0, the second while Toronto held a 2-1 advantage in the second period.

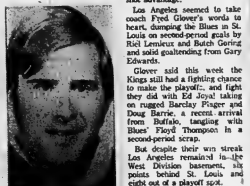
The Canadiens, who had been dominated in the first period by the aggressive Leafs, suddenly took inspiration from Dryden's play.

Henri Richard banked in the first Montreal goal at 2:55 of the second period off Leaf defenceman Jim McKenzy's leg. Frank Mahovlich, who scored while Montreal had a man in the penalty box, and Claude Larose put the Canadiens ahead to stay by 3:50.

Dryden said later his biggest advantage is that he never tries to anticipate the mosquito-like acey player on a breakaway situation.

"When a netminder starts anticipating moves, he can get into big trouble," said the Montreal goalie, adding that he was confident both times Keon was in alone.

Jean Ratelle's dogged play served to sharpen the Rangers and run their unbeaten streak at home to 16 games, but only after Pittsburgh had rallied from a two-goal deficit on Syl Apps goal at 7:32 of the third period to tie the score.



Pittsburgh's rookie goaltender, Jim Rutherford, had stymied New York shooters—he saved 38 of 42 shots—until Ratelle set the stage for Rod Gilbert's winner by drawing three defenders into a corner.

When you start attracting people that way, you know somebody's free," recalled Ratelle later in the dressingroom.

"I just waited for somebody to holler for the puck."

The yell came, from captain Vic Hadfield who blistered Ratelle's pass to Gilbert who drilled it past an unprotected Rutherford.

The goal gave the Ranger line 63 for the season and 113 points, tops in both departments for a unit in the NHL. and Ratelle, who picked up an earlier goal, moved into a tie for the points lead with Boston's Phil Esposito each has 56 points.

KEN DRYDEN

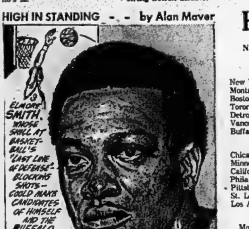
Chicago's Bobby Hull scored the first three goals at Oakland, giving him 34—second to Esposito's 25.

The Hawks bolstered their position atop the West Division, moving seven points up on the fading Minnesota North Stars. A second-period slugfest between Chicago defenceman Keith Magnuson and rugged Seals rookie Ivan Boldirev livened up an otherwise mild-hitting game in which the Hawks held a 28-25 shot advantage.



Los Angeles seemed to take coach Fred Glover's words to heart, dumping the Blues in St. Louis on second-period goals by Rick Lemieux and Butch Goring and solid goaltending from Gary Edwards.

Glover said this week the Kings still had a fighting chance to make the playoffs, and fight they did with Ed Joyal taking on rugged Barclay Plager and Doug Barrie, a recent arrival from Buffalo, tangling with Blues' Floyd Thompson in a second-period scrap.

But despite their win streak Los Angeles remained in the West Division basement, six points behind St. Louis and eight out of a playoff spot.

Bill Collins' two goals aborted Al Smith's first shutout of the season as the Red Wings limited visiting Vancouver shooters to just 20 shots on goal.

The Canucks enjoyed lengthy two-man advantages twice in the game, for 2 minutes in one first period and for 1:47 in the second period but were unable to cash in against a surprisingly strong Detroit defence.

Hockey Briefs

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboro defenceman Marty Howe has been sidelined by a fractured clavicle he suffered in an exhibition hockey game in Detroit, Marlies manager Tom Smythe said Wednesday. Howe, 19, son of retired National Hockey League great Gordie Howe, is in his first season with the Marlboros in the Metro Hockey Association Junior A Series.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The American Hockey League announced Wednesday that defenceman Jim Kellam of Tidewater Wings, Norfolk, Va., has been given a Monday suspension without pay and a $250 fine for a stick swinging incident during a game in Norfolk Sunday. The league office said Kellam abused and attempted to injure the referee by throwing his stick, which hit the referee.

BARRIE (CP) — Barrie Flyers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series announced Wednesday night the signing of right winger Frank Hincks, 29-year-old former pro with Cincinnati of the old Central professional hockey league. A 23-goal scorer last year at Oakville, Hincks was dropped by the Oaks earlier this month. The Flyers also announced they had dropped Nick Holmes, another right winger, from their club.

Debbies in Dead Heat

Sports writers and broadcasters couldn't decide between two young ladies named Debbie, with the result that Miss Van Kiekebelt (left) of Toronto and Miss Bill of Haney, B.C., today are co-holders of the title of Canada's top woman athlete of 1971. It was the first tie in the 37-year history of the poll, conducted by the Canadian Press among writers and broadcasters across the country.

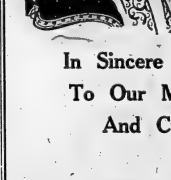
Wilt Recalls Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Lakers have set a modern professional sports record with 27 consecutive victories, but Wilt Chamberlain doesn't really think they have accomplished anything yet.



"I played with the Harlem Globetrotters when they won 66 in a row," Chamberlain joked after the Lakers had defeated Baltimore Bullets 127-125 Wednesday night and raised their National Basketball Association record to a fabulous 23-1.

"We could care less about records," Chamberlain said seriously. "Our main concern now is that we finish with a better record than Milwaukee. That would mean something."

It would mean that the Lakers would have the home court advantage if the two teams meet in a seventh game of the Western Division playoffs.

The Lakers currently are making a runaway of the Pacific Division race, while Milwaukee is well ahead in the Midwest Division.

However, the Bucks' record slipped to 20-5 as Boston Celtics ended their nine-game winning streak with a 104-98 victory Wednesday night.

NFL Playoff Pairings Look Letter-perfect

NEW YORK (AP) — If defense is a criteria, then the weekend's National Football Conference playoffs are perfect matchups and the American Football Conference playoffs are near-perfect.

The NFC pairings send Minnesota Vikings, the top defensive team, against Dallas Cowboys, the defensive runner-up, and Washington Redskins, the conference's No. 3 defensive unit, against San Francisco 49ers, fourth in total defense.

In the AFC, it will be Baltimore Colts, the defensive leader, against Cleveland Browns, No. 9, and Miami Dolphins, the second-best defensive club, against Kansas City Chiefs, third in defense.

Final league statistics released today show that the Vikings led in defense for the third straight year, yielding only 3,406 yards, an average of 243.3 per game, and in fewest points allowed, 139. Minnesota also tied its 14-game record of fewest touchdowns allowed, 14, and permitted the fewest TDs rushing, two.

Dallas had a total yield of 3,469 yards, only 1,144 rushing, fewest in the NFC. The Cowboys also were the best in the conference in trapping passers, nailing opposing quarterbacks 43 times for 336 yards.

Washington surrendered 3,523 yards, permitted 199 points, six lowest total since 1944, and led the NFC in interceptions with 29.

San Francisco gave up 3,679 yards and allowed its passers to be tackled for loses only 11 times, fewest in the NFC.

Baltimore, meanwhile, made a sweep of AFC defensive laurels, giving up the fewest total yards, 2,953; the fewest yards rushing, 1,113, and the fewest yards passing, 1,726. The Colts also set a club record by holding opponents to 146 points, fewest in the conference, led in interceptions with 28, and gave up only nine passing touchdowns.

Miami was second in total defence with 3,081 yards and Kansas City third at 3,76 yards. Cleveland, however, was down the list with 4,184 yards.

Ram Stretches String

NEW YORK (AP) — Defence tackle Merlin Olsen of Los Angeles Rams, named for the 10th time in his 16-year NFL career Football League career, and 22 newcomers were among those named today to the National Conference squad for the AFC-NFC Pro Bowl game at Los Angeles, Jan. 23.

Olsen did not play last year because of knee surgery but kept his string intact nevertheless. Another longtime repeater is cornerback Mel Renfro of Dallas Cowboys, making it for the eighth time in eight years.

Both quarterbacks for the NFC team—Roger Staubach of Dallas and Greg Landry of Detroit Lions—were among the new faces selected in individual among the conference's 13 head coaches, who were not permitted to cast votes for players on their own team.

Staubach and Landry will be able to hand the ball off on running plays to three 1,000-yard ground gainers—John Brockington of Green Bay Packers, Steven Owens of Detroit and Willie Ellison of Los Angeles. Larry Brown of Washington Redskins also was selected at the running back post.

The receivers will be Dick Gordon of Chicago Bears, Bob Grim of Minnesota Vikings, Roy Jefferson of Washington and Gene Washington of San Francisco.

Dallas, which won the Eastern Division title, has the most players on the team, eight. New Orleans Saints and New York Giants were the only teams not represented.

The squad:

Wide receivers—Dick Gordon, Chicago; Bob Grim, Minnesota; Roy Jefferson, Washington; Gene Washington, San Francisco.

Cowboys Revisit Disaster Site

DALLAS (AP) — As if Dallas Cowboys needed it, they have a little something extra to get them psyched up for the National Conference playoff game with Minnesota Vikings on Christmas Day.

The last time they were in Bloomington, Minn., the Vikings prevailed 54-13.

"That one left a scar on us," said offensive tackle Rayfield Wright. "We've got to erase it."

The Cowboys never had a problem with the Vikings until that 1970 game. They had defeated Minnesota in five previous regular-season games.

Coach Tom Landry made a special effort to dust off the film of that disaster for a showing this week.

"I showed it to them so they could see what Minnesota tries to do against you," Landry said.

Chiefs Boast Experience

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs figure the fact that many of them are veterans accustomed to playing under pressure gives them an edge in Saturday's American Football Conference game with Miami Dolphins.

"Several of us have been through this before," quarterback Len Dawson said Wednesday. "A veteran player knows how to react under pressure."

Dawson has been involved in seven post-season games. He and seven other Chiefs were with the club back as far as 1963 and are still playing regularly.

"We have to be prepared mentally for this football game," said Dawson.

"We'll have to be patient. You have to do that when you're playing a team that definitely is not going to give you the long threat."

Dawson said "not getting into the playoffs last season after we had been world champions really hurt the pride of this team."

Clouds Appear Over Ali Bout

ZURICH (AP) — The first clouds have appeared over the Dec. 30 heavyweight fight between Muhammad Ali and German Jurgen Blin.

Money appears to be the major problem.

Promoters Hannzrudolf Jaggi and Peter Heutschi had hoped to obtain considerable money from television, but that prospect now is extremely poor.

Jaggi and Heutschi originally talked of an over-all gross of $825,000, most of it expected from television.

That prospect now is down to about $300,000 from tickets in the 12,000 capacity Hallenstadion Indoor Cycling Track.

Only 4,000 cheaper tickets have been sold so far.

LONDON (Reuter) — England midfield star Alan Ball became Britain's most expensive soccer player Wednesday when English League champion Arsenal paid about $200,000 for the 26-year-old Everton captain. Ball, capped 72 times for England, will make his Arsenal debut against Nottingham Forest next Monday and could appear against his former Everton team-mates on New Year's Day.

Orioles Retire Robby's Number

BALTIMORE (AP) — Uniform No. 20, worn by Frank Robinson for the last six years, was retired today by Baltimore Orioles.

In announcing that the number no longer would be used, the first ever retired by the club—The American League champions paid high tribute to the player they traded to Los Angeles Dodgers of the National League earlier this month.

"During Frank's tenure in Baltimore," said J. Frank Cashen, executive vice-president, "we won four American League championships and two World Series.

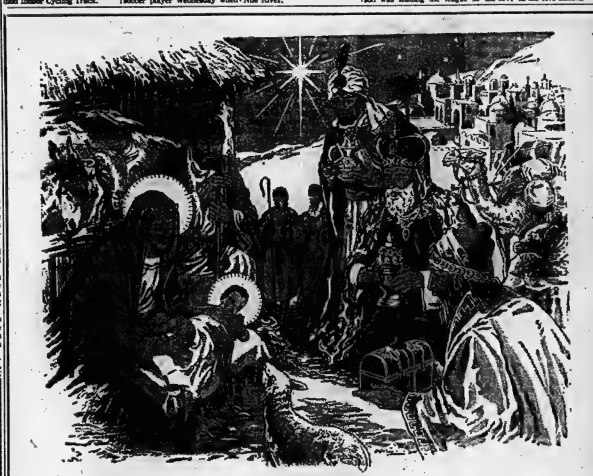
"It was anything but a coincidence, and we think this is the best way to pay tribute and to tell him just how much he has meant to us both as a ball player and a man."

"His individual game performances are all a matter of record," said manager Earl Weaver, "but Frank contributed so much more to this ball club, both on and off the field.

"He was a great morale booster and his competitiveness, his intelligence, and his total commitment to winning baseball set fine examples for the younger players to follow."

The Orioles had never won a pennant until Robinson was obtained, in a trade with the National League Cincinnati Reds following the 1965 season.

In 1966, he won the triple crown of batting in the American League with a .316 average, 49 home runs and 122 runs batted in, and was named the Most Valuable Player. Frank also was named the MVP in the World Series as Baltimore swept four straight from the Dodgers.



The following season, Robinson was leading the league in batting at .337 when he was injured in late June while sliding to break up a double play. He suffered a concussion and double vision which sidelined him a month, yet finished at .311.

In 1968, with his eyes still not right and hampered by a case of the mumps plus an arm injury, Robinson dipped to .268 with just 15 homers and 83 RBI as the Orioles faltered for the second straight season during his recovery period.

FRANK ROBINSON

Back in stride the last three seasons, Robinson smacked 85 homers and drove in 277 runs as the Orioles won the league title every year. Last season, he passed the 500 mark in lifetime homers.

The only player ever to be named the MVP in both leagues, Robinson last year became the only one ever to hit a homer for both the American and National league in all-star competition as he was named the MVP in the 1971 classic.

Familiar Faces In NFL Playoff

Eric Emerson
Staff
Sports Writer

AMERICAN football fans are gradually becoming aware of a new college grid power that has been pumping an amazing number of rookies into the NFL of late. It's known as the CFL, which stands for Central Florida Lancers: No that's not right, uh, California Foreign Legion? No . . . its Canadian Football League. That's it, Canadian Football League.

Actually, with the recent signing of Joe Theisman, Jim Stillwagon, Greg Barton, etc., grid followers in the U.S. are becoming more and more aware of the CFL.

They could be even more acutely aware of the fact that organized football does exist north of the 49th parallel when this weekend's round of NFL playoffs. The former CFL stars could figure prominently in almost every game.

In Saturday's American Football Conference battle, accident Montreal Alouette f a n s will notice one Ron Stewart who was thrown back and one who was never hooked, when Miami takes on the Detroit Lions.

SAFETY Jake Scott is in his second year with the Dolphins and ranks as t h e brightest star in the Miami pass defence. The former BC Lion and almost-Alouette picked off no fewer than eight passes operating out of Miami's zone in addition to his jitterbug punt returns.

The Ala traded receiver Tom Casseus to B.C. in 1970 for the rights to Scott, who had starred both offensively and defensively with the Lions. However, the reedy speedster seemed to feel certain that he could catch a starting berth in American football. Rather than operate with an unhappy, ineffective ballplayer Montreal decided to let him go south of the border.

Equally as important to the Dolphin defence is Alouette reject Doug Swift. The standout outside linebacker was cut by Sam Etcheverry in the '70 Montreal training camp.

HOW COULD a linebacker who has been drawing all-AFC mention be cut from a Canadian team? Etcheverry admits that he made a mistake but justifies the cut by pointing out that there was a huge number of linebacking candidates in 1970 and that the ones he did keep — Charlie Collins, Mark Kosmos, Mike Widger and Steve Smear — helped the Als win a Grey Cup.

The Dolphin whom Montreal never did manage to hook was sister fullback Larry Csonka, who gained over 1,000 yards rushing this season. The Alouettes were reported to have bid heavily for the Syracuse University record smasher when he graduated, but were unable to compete with the hefty Miami bankroll.

Despite the presence of the CFL stars and near-stars, it's unlikely that the Dolphins can grumble the Chiefs. Miami relies on its running duo of Csonka and Jim Kiick to set up Bob Griese's passing game. Kansas City has the best offensive line and linebackers to contain that running threat and make Griese go to the air more often than he wants to.

THE CHANCE for a big AFC upset could rely heavily on another CFL graduate, however. Baltimore has been one of the super teams of the NFL this year, as well as defending Super Bowl champions.

In fact it's even been suggested that Baltimore interlopers lost their last game of the season so that they could face Cleveland rather than the Chiefs. History has a way of repeating itself, however. In 1965 the Colts ran away from the NFL and faced the Detroit Lions in a nothing game late in the season. They lost that encounter and after the game a Lion lineman noted that, "those guys don't deserve to be champions. We were laughing and joking out there like it didn't matter."

Well the Colts didn't win the title that year; they were beaten by the Cleveland Browns of all people.

THE BROWNS are hot right now after a mid-season slump and one of the prime reasons that they are is the effective running combination of Leroy Kelly and Bo Scott. While overshadowed somewhat by Kelly, an all-time great, Scott has still managed to be a major contribution during his three years at Cleveland.

With his starry running mate injured much of this season, the former Ottawa Rough Rider fullback has taken over as the Browns' number one rusher. His value doubles as a key blocker for Kelly on the famed Cleveland sweep. If Scott and Kelly can crack the Baltimore Colt defence, Johnny Unitas and company could very well be in for a other stunning upset.

Saturday's National Conference bowl shapes up as a battle between two coaches of whom it has been said "if those two guys were in a personality contest, you couldn't declare a winner."

One of the coaches is Tom Landry of Dallas, while the other is Minnesota's Bud Grant. The icy-eyed Grant learned much of his cold weather Minnesota tactics while coaching the Winnipeg Blue Bombers a Grey Cup fixture in the late '50s and early 60's.

PERSONALITY OR NOT, Grant hasn't fared too badly since moving to Minnesota, guiding the Vikings to three divisional titles in as many years as well as an appearance in the 1970 Super Bowl.

His team is a typical Grant one: well-drilled, tough, scorning the razzle dazzle for solid, ball-control, up - the - gut football.

His coaching opponent is the complete antithesis. Landry revels in triple reverses, rotating zones, shuttling ends, shuttling quarterbacks and shuttling star running backs to Boston and back.

Duane Thomas, who was banned in Boston earlier this season and returned to the Cowboys, along with Yale alumnus Calvin Hill should provide the running to nullify the great Minnesota pass rush.

With a strong running game established quarterback Roger Staubach will be able to utilize star receivers L a n c e Alworth and Bob Hayes. Only the presence of such g r e a t pass catchers as these two has prevented another f a m e s Rough Rider from entering the Dallas playoff picture.

MARGENE ADKINS, the former CFL speedster has spent two years of spot duty and fatal ineffectiveness in Dallas simply because of the great wealth of Cowboy receivers.

In Sunday's battle it might be Washington vs Washington and Washington. That is, the Redskins against Vic a n d Gene Washington.

Vic the elusive, but cantankerous Ottawa halfback has blossomed as a star in his first year of NFL play. The hero of the '70 Grey Cup with his famed Double dribble touchdown run, Washington was the only NFC back to rank in the top 10 in both rushing and pass receiving.

DESPITE the brilliance of the former Canadian star, San Francisco might still be sabotaged — by the Toronto Argonauts. It was the Argos who lured first draft choice Tim Anderson away from the 49ers this season. Anderson could be used badly right now in the crippled San Francisco secondary. Cornerback star Jim Johnson has played for over a month with a broken wrist, while other c o r n e r Bruce Taylor and free safety Mel Phillips are slowed by leg injuries. It's a dangerous situation when t h o s e walking wounded are confronted with such all-pro receivers as Roy Jefferson and Gerry Allen.

If George Allen's Redskins don't win the Super Bowl this season, and they very well could, it could be because he never investigated the meaning of CFL.

Healey could provide some much needed size to the Belleville team in their battle for a play-off berth in the eight-team OHA Senior A loop.

Car Wash Peewees Save Point

For a while last night it appeared as though the East Car Wash peewees in Nanos were all washed up. However, the Belleville all-stars finally managed to soft soap Napanee into a 2-2 draw.

Third period goals by Gary McInroy and Alan Kunetsky brought the Car Wash peewees back from a 2-0 deficit. Bruce Bell played a solid game in goal for Belleville.

First Taste Not Bad

The Thurlow Auto Bantam E team got their first taste of all-star competition last night by battling to a 1-1 draw with Wellington.

In their previous two games the Thurlow bantams had defeated Belleville house league entries.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♦	2 ♠	3 Nt
4 ♠	4 ♦	Pass	5 ♦

Opening lead — queen of spades.

The chief purpose of a preemptive bid is to crowd the bidding in the hope that it will cause the opponents to miss their best contract.

Thus, in the present case, after partner passes, West has good reason to think his opponents have a game. Furthermore, nothing dreadful is likely to ensure if he bids three spades and gets doubled. He has six portable tricks, and if North - South can make a game or a slam, the penalty incurred is very worthwhile.

In the actual hand, North doubles and East runs to four clubs. North-South then arrive at five diamonds, but note that they might have reached three notrump (making five) had they run into less resistance.

As it happens, five diamonds is a perfectly sound contract that cannot be defeated if the hand is played correctly. But the fact is that the hand isn't altogether easy to play correctly.

West leads the queen of spades and South's mettle is tested at once. The proper play is to duck and let West win the trick. Declarer should duck again when West continues with the jack. When West then plays the ten, South ducks once more, this time ruffing the spade. From this point on he has no trouble scoring the rest of the tricks.

If South makes the mistake of playing high from dummy on any of the first three leads, he goes down one. He should realize that, on the bidding, West has six spades and East none, and he should let West win the first two tricks.

Another way of expressing the same thought is to say that South sees eleven tricks when dummy comes down, and all he has to do is treat them with tender loving care.

Tomorrow: Test your play.

What The Stars Say

FRIDAY, DEC. 24

Your birthday today: Brings on the final moves to almgihty and confirm the main thread of your daily existence. The consequences of past decisions whether good, bad, or mixed are with you now as every minute. Today's natives generally seek to achieve dignity.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Deliberately cut out commercial efforts; pursue social and entertaining pastimes. Give yourself a long deserved break.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Mark time if you must, but stay in a good humor. What you want may be possible later, but not now. Let your loved ones know how you feel.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): If you find yourself still working while everybody else if off on a party, think little of it.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Social doings may run longer than you'd like, using energy you'd rather apply to better uses.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Be yourself in moderation, neither too serious nor yet unresponsive to the moods of the day. Remember that not everybody is as free as you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Since you have special need for some perfected touches, spend all of your available time attending them now.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): There's more than the holiday season at work—expect little progress in anything beyond special phenomena.

Scirpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get an early start with a complete list of details. Pause once in a while for reflection, a chance to recall more details and thus avoid duplications.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Wherever you are in your progress, seek serenity of mood. Make overtures in fresh contacts, take social initiatives.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friendship isn't romance yet, might never be. Settle for what exists without trying to change things.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Doing your share for peace and amity brings a great satisfaction without dulling your drive for more activity later.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March ''): Make room for an extra person, find time for an extra chore. You must extend yourself a bit both ways, therefore you may as well do so gracefully.

A Christmas Message

Go placidly amid the noise and haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even the dull and ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud and aggressive persons, they are vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain and bitter; for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be yourself. Especially, do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is perennial as the grass. Take kindly the council of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe, no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God whatever you conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

Pope Paul Deplores World's Wars on Eve of Christmas

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope of the conflict in Vietnam and Paul deplored today the world's wars and hatreds as Christmas approaches. He cited Vietnam, the Indian subcontinent, Northern Ireland and the Middle East.

In a 3,800-word address to cardinals and bishops who work in the Vatican, the pontiff also strongly upheld priestly celibacy and warned Christian not to water down religious duties and discipline to make life "more comfortable and easy."

He called upon "all men of good will" to plunge into action to help their fellow men.

"Let no one absent himself," the Pope said. "Let all collaborate, according to their own energy and vocation.

"We see peace deeply upset here and there and threat need elsewhere."

He deplored "the prolongation and bitter bloodshed and suffering spread to other parts of Southeast Asia; the recent explosions of hostility between India and Pakistan with its re-

"where, even on this vigil of Christmas, there have been sorrowful displays of violence so much in contrast with the Christian character of that people."

Pope Paul took issue with guerrilla fighters striving to reunite Ireland by force and "entrenched authorities that are engaging with "vendettas and tough repression that can become a source of even worse evils."

He expressed satisfaction that "for a year, and a half, the rumbling of arms has been quieted in almost the whole zone" of the Middle East.

But he voiced fears that the "uncertain armistice might suddenly come to cease" before an accord of lasting peace could be reached.

He repeated his pleas that Jerusalem be placed under international control.

Hard Way to Win Fame

Here's Story of Boy Whose Picture Made All Papers

Two weeks ago today, newspapers including The Intelligencer printed an AP picture of an Indian boy who had an arm in his ear near the East Pakistan border. The picture epitomized the fate of innocent persons amid the fighting, and drew many inquiries about the boy. Here is a report from Photographer Horst Faas and writer Santosh Basak of The Associated Press.

BONGAON, India (AP) — From his wooden hospital bed, nine-year-old Ayub watches the soldiers returning from the war. The soldiers laugh, talk and are cheered by the happy people on the roadside.

For the soldiers the war is over.

For Ayub the war still last a lifetime.

A razor-edged splinter of an artillery shell sliced off his right arm.

Ayub Ali Mangal, his pregnant sister and their mother, Anwara Khatun, 25, lived in a one-room house of bamboo matting and corrugated iron roof at the village of Jagatpur, not far from the border of India's Bengal State.

Almost every day Ayub accompanied his mother to the fields where she worked as a farm laborer to earn 1½ rupees a day—18 cents. That was just enough to keep away hunger.

As he grew older, Ayub helped his mother plant rice and husk grain.

"We were very happy until my husband died," the mother says. "This was about a year ago."

He probably had tuberculosis.

"We sold the land that we owned from grandfather's time to pay for medicine and the bus fare to the hospital. All the money was spent before he died."

A few more years and Ayub would have been strong enough to work alone in the fields," Mrs. Khatun said, "but with one arm . . . how can he help me now?"

The mother recalled that disaster struck on a Moslem holiday.

"We did not work that day," she said. "In the afternoon many bullets were flying over the village. When it got dark they started shelling.

"Because we lived very close to the border, I was afraid and took my children to go to a neighbor's house. As I left our house, holding Ayub with my hand and his sister in my arm, a shell fell on my house. . . . We kept running.

"When we were near our neighbor's house I saw that Ayub's hand was not there but something very short and bloody was dangling from his shoulder. Ayub looked at me and then he fell down.

"I thought he was dead."

The Mukti Bahini (Bangla Desh guerrillas) put us on a truck and brought us to the Indian hospital at Bagula. I saw many people dead and wounded.

Doctors operated on Ayub and sewed his wound.

Ayub has been transferred to a hospital of the Christian Association for Social Action, which is funded by the Church World Service and Lutheran World Service based in New York.

Dr. Dilip Mukerjee, 34, who is treating Ayub, reports the boy still suffers from loss of blood.

"Unfortunately," he said, "we have no setup here to give blood transfusions."

The doctor said it will be impossible to fit an artificial limb on the stump where Ayub's arm was. "Only across three inches below the shoulder joint are left."

Simple Drug Halves Mortality Among Patients with Angina

LONDON (AP) — British medical authorities reported today discovery of a simple drug treatment that has been shown to cut by half the death rate among men afflicted with angina—the pain caused by a deficient blood supply to the heart.

The drug clofibarate (atromid-S) was tested for five years in two large-scale trials in England and Scotland. The tests involved 1,214 patients, 55 doctors and more than 19 hospitals.

The results were published today in the British Medical Journal.

The drug was described as having no toxic effects and only minimal side-effects, but the journal, in an editorial, urged more research and warned against excessive enthusiasm that the treatment will make a major impact on heart disease —the major killer in middle-aged men.

The double, controlled test, the journal disclosed, started from the knowledge that the narrowing or blocking of the coronary arteries is more common in persons with high cholesterol levels in the blood. Clofibrate had been developed to reduce cholesterol—the researchers concluded it would be reasonable to see what effect it had on patients with known coronary artery disease.

Three groups of patients, 60 to 69, took part in the tests: Those who had angina, the chest pain brought on by exertion; those with cardiac infarction, a heart attack damaging the heart muscle two to four months before the tests, and those with a combination of both.

In each group, one set of patients took a dummy capsule of corn oil and a second lot took 1.5 to two grams of clofibrate daily according to weight.

After five to six years, the most spectacular results were for that group of patients who had angina, but had no infarction before the tests. Of 339 patients in this group who took the drug, 34 died. But of 339 similar patients who took the dummy capsule, 59 died. Patients who took the drug also had far fewer non-fatal heart attacks during the period of the test.

On the other hand, patients who had previously suffered a cardiac infarction or who had a combination of angina and infarction did not get the same degree of protection from the drug as those who had angina alone.

"The differences between the patients with and without angina remain unexplained," said the journal. "Further research will be needed to characterize those patients who stand most to benefit from clofibrate."

Indian Predicts One-shovel Winter

THESSALON, Ont. (CP) — George Wabigwam, a resident of this Indian reserve 30 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has good news for those who dread the rigors of Canadian winter.

A carpenter and former trapper who has been forecasting winter weather for the past 10 years, Mr. Wabigwam is predicting a "one-shovel winter."

If he's right, it should make things easier to take than last year when he forecast a "three- to four-shovel" winter with 7-foot snowfalls back up his prediction.

"It looks this year like it should be a pretty average winter both for snow and cold weather," he said in an interview. "Nothing like last year."

Mr. Wabigwam, 53, bases his predictions on the fall activity of wildlife.

Last year migrating birds flew so high Pyou almost had to use glasses to see them, he said, but this year they were closer to the ground.

And squirrels were storing their winter food supplies only three to four feet above ground this year compared with five to six feet last year, he said.

He won't guarantee his predictions but does feel fairly confident.

"The first few years I wasn't too good at it," he said, "but the last few I've been pretty accurate."

Canadian Is Jailed By Finns

HELSINKI (Reuter) — A Canadian resident was in jail Wednesday night after allegedly indicating he planned to hijack an American passenger jetliner to "rescue" a Lithuanian sailor from a Soviet prison camp.

Police said the sailor in question is Simas Kudirkas, who tried to defect last February by leaping from a Soviet ship onto a United States Coast Guard cutter. He was handed back in an incident which caused outcry in the United States.

The man, whom police identified as Leonard Milne, 49, was detained Tuesday night following a conversation he had with the pilot of the Pan American plane in the transit lounge.

Police told reporters originally that Milne had entered the room armed with a pistol and asked to hire the New York-bound airliner and, when the pilot refused, threatened to hijack it.

But Wednesday night, Police Commissioner Vilho Jalonen said it was not clear whether the man had in fact used threatening behavior, although the pilot had taken it as a threat, or whether he had been armed.

Pan American World Airways has not yet informed the police whether or not it would press charges against the prisoner, added. He said the matter was complicated by the fact that the pilot was in London after taking the plane out Wednesday morning.

Extensions Approved To Pacific Railroad

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two extensions of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway totalling 256 miles—one of them to the Dease Lake area—have been approved by the British Columbia government, provided that the province can buy control shares in the cost, it was announced Wednesday.

The northern extension of the provincial government-owned railway would be built from Dease Lake to Lower Post on the Alaska Highway, about 70 miles south of the Yukon border. It would cover 140 miles.

Following a meeting of the railway's directors in Vancouver, President W. A. C. Bennett said any new rail line to link up with the Alcan Highway "would be a wholly federal matter, but Bennett is also president of the PGE.

The other extension would travel a southerly route to Hazelton on the Canadian National Railways northern line, from the Squilax River on the main line now being built to Dease Lake.

Mr. Bennett, who met federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson on the extension a few weeks ago, said he is hopeful that the government will act soon to give its approval for the joint project.

He would not estimate the cost of the proposed extension. Completion is expected by mid-1974.

The premier also announced that the PGE directors have given formal approval to the change of the name to British Columbia Railway, a proposal first announced last September.

Here's Why Timothy Neal Taylor Rooms with Timothy Noel Taylor

Both are about 5 feet 8, of medium build and have brown hair.

They roomed together so they could sort through their collective mail and avoid other identification mixups without running all over the campus.

"This all started last December when I came down here for an interview before I was accepted," Timothy Neal said. "I found out there was another Timothy N. Taylor and they had his file on hand."

A month later, Timothy Noel Taylor started wondering why his notification of acceptance had not been sent and telephoned the college.

"They told me they had two Timothy N. Taylors and that it would be a while before the records were straightened out," he said.

After arriving at Mount Union, they received each other's class schedules.

Then they decided to room together. "That's the first time I've contradicted."

"This way we were sure our mail at least got to the right room, and then all we have to do is figure out which one of us each piece belongs to," said Timothy Neal.

"To avoid everyone use our middle names when they write," added Timothy Noel.

"If they don't use the middle name, we have to look at the return address and decide which one of us the letter is intended for."

Showdown In Italy Vote Nears

ROME (AP) — Italy's parliament headed for a stormy showdown tonight between new rival candidates—the Christian Democratic party's Giovanni Leone and 80-year-old Pietro Nenni, the old Socialist, war horse.

In an 11th-hour switch, Socialist party candidate Francesco De Martino, the leading vote-getter since the election began, withdrew from the race. His party immediately named Nenni to replace him.

Tonight's ballot will be the 23rd in the 13-day election.

Leone was chosen by his party Wednesday to replace Senate President Amintore Fanfani, who had run second in the voting.

The all new contest between Leone and Nenni followed an explosion of frustration in parliament Wednesday night. Electors hurled insults and candidates blown in a session quieted only by an abrupt adjournment.

De Martino, in withdrawing, urged Italian leftists "to avoid the obstacle of personalism" as the expression of only the centre and right majority" this is what Leone would become if, as he is counting on, he pulls in votes from his own party, the Republicans, Social Democrats and the conservative Liberals.

Nenni's candidacy was announced by the Socialists immediately after De Martino's statement of withdrawal. Nenni and his backers were counting on the left wing of the Christian Democrats to defect from the 39-year-old Leone and thus prevent his election.

The last ballot Wednesday night once again proved futile with a majority of 343 abstaining and 460 votes from a Socialist-Communist front for De Martino.

A total of 505 votes is needed to elect a president.

Tough Rules Laid Down Governing Gravel Pits

TORONTO (CP) — Tough regulations to rehabilitate Ontario gravel pits were announced Wednesday by Mines Minister Leo Bernier.

The regulations, effective Jan. 1, require pit operators to put up a security deposit of two cents a ton, to a maximum of $100,000, to finance rehabilitation.

Licences will be required for operators and pits will be subject to annual inspections.

There are about 4,000 operating pits in the province, most of them in southern Ontario near major urban areas. The regulations will not cover the 14,000 abandoned pits in the province except for 3,000 located on Crown lands.

Mr. Bernier said the regulations will apply first to the 42 townships in the Niagara Escarpment area which stretches more than 300 miles from Niagara Falls to Tobermory at the tip of the Bruce Peninsula. There are about 300 pits along the escarpment.

He said all pits in southern Ontario should be brought under direct provincial control in about six months. It will take about three years to complete pit inspections in all areas of the province.

Stone quarry operators will also be licenced under the regulations. Permits for individuals will cost $25 and $100 for corporations.

And beginning in January, 1972, quarry operators will also have to deposit security money with the province. It will be invested and interest earned will be used for quarry rehabilitation.

Strong Growth Forecast for Canada

PARIS (Reuter) — International economic experts forecast strong economic growth for Canada in the first half of next year, with prospects boosted by the recent international monetary settlement.

In its twice-yearly economic outlook, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development says Canada output might advance six per cent over the first half of next year, bringing with it lower unemployment, as private consumption expands its recovery.

The report was written in November, before last week's currency settlement, but its authors say that any settlement would be unlikely to have much effect on forecasts over the short term, except inasmuch as business confidence and thus investment prospects improved.

The organization forecasts that Canada is one of the countries most directly affected by the Washington economic measures of Aug. 15 and the withdrawal of some of these after the currency settlement—will enjoy a current account surplus of about $200 million U.S., little changed from the $250 million expected in the last half of this year.

Growth of exports, the bulk of which go to the United States, is forecast at 13¼ per cent for the first six 1972 months, while imports may rise by 14½ per cent, compared with 18% per cent in the last half of 1971. The investment climate, helped by the currency settlement, should be favorable next year.

But the experts underline that the key task now facing Canada's economic authorities is to support the present recovery and cut unemployment, but at the same time avoiding a fresh surge in inflation forecast for four per cent next year.

Davis Expects Upswing in Ontario Economy

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Wednesday he expects an upward swing in all sectors of Ontario's economy following the announcement last weekend that the United States would end its 10-per-cent surcharge on manufactured imports.

The premier also said he favors restrictions on foreign investment in Canada as a means of maintaining the Canadian dollar at a healthy level.

Mr. Davis said that Ontario weathered the surcharge—it was introduced by U.S. President Richard Nixon Aug. 15—without serious injury to the economy.

There have been some beneficial psychological effects from President Nixon's measures, he said.

"Among the public at large, the Nixon measures have prompted many people to recognize one important economic fact of life: That while a Canadian dollar of premium value may bolster our national pride, it can create severe difficulties for us, as a nation, in the international marketplace."
